DEATH WARNING TO CAPTIVES

BRITISH HURRY TO HELP U.S. CUT PROSPERITY PIE

Business Increase Draws Sturdy Men.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., May 19.—[Special.]—American prosperity is calling across the waters and workers are flocking hither from many lands—or flocking to the extent the immigration legislation law permits—to get steady jobs at higher wages than they ever dreamed of.

Immigrants are arriving in greater numbers than have been recorded since the law went into effect in 1921 limiting the number of immigrants from any country to 3 per cent of its nationals in this country in 1910. For the first time the quotas of all countries, with the single exception of Germany, are likely to be exhausted during the year ending June 30 next.

Increase This Year.

During the last fiscal year the number of immigrants admitted was 309,556, of whom 243,853 were from countries to which the limitation applies. About 75,000 more immigrants have arrived already this year from these countries—chiefly Europeans—and the excess over last year by June 30 promises to be close to 100,000.

With the Canadians and others not subject to limitation who are coming in the total immigration this fiscal year is likely to be not far from 450,000, an excess of nearly 150,000 over last year, to meet the labor shortage.

Practice of Years Changes.

One of the most striking features of the immigration this year is the influx from the British Isles, the Scandinavian, and other western European countries, which hitherto have sent less than 50 per cent of the number admitted by the restriction act while the southern and eastern European countries were exhausting their quotas. Here are the comparative figures on immigration from the north and west of Europe:

Country—	Quota.	July, '22-Apr., '23. Fiscal yr. inclus. '21-'22.	1923 (10 mos.).
United Kingdom	77,343	42,670	71,783
Germany	67,607	19,653	44,392
Sweden	20,042	8,760	25,008
Norway	12,202	5,941	8,610
France	5,729	4,443	4,275
Denmark	5,619	2,234	3,833
Netherlands	3,607	2,406	3,902
Belgium	1,563	1,531	1,563

Purpose of Present Law.

The three per cent quota law was devised to cut down the influx of aliens from southern and eastern Europe while reducing immaterially, if at all, the normal immigration from northern and western Europe, embracing the stocks which constitute, in the main, the American people.

Now with immigration from northern and western Europe nearly double that of last year conditions are reversed and the law is seen to be operating as was contemplated.

Immigration from the British islands this year already is nearly equal to the total admitted in 1921 before the law went into effect, which was not far short of the normal British immigration before the world war. German immigration is now five times the volume in 1921 and in excess of the normal volume before the war.

The comparative figures on the immigration from southern and eastern Europe follow:

Country.	Quota.	Fiscal year 1922.	July 1, to Ap. 30, '23.
Italy	42,057	42,149	42,057
Poland	31,146	26,129	25,847
Czecho-Slov.	14,357	14,248	14,257
Armenia	7,419	7,429	7,419
Hungary	5,638	6,025	5,638
Spain	3,294	3,447	3,294
Switzerland	3,752	3,722	3,752
Russia	6,426	6,444	6,426
Turkey	2,388	1,098	2,388

More Skilled Are Arriving.

Skilled and unskilled labor furnished the principal increases in the immigration this year over last year. While fewer workers are coming, fewer workers are departing. Here are the comparative figures on immigration and emigration by occupations:

	ARRIVED. 1922.	1923 (10 mos.).
Professional	10,955	11,816
Skilled laborers	51,588	72,294
Unskilled laborers, farm laborers and servants	115,963	143,722
No occupation	131,050	139,769
	DEPARTED.
Professional	5,313	1,948
Skilled laborers	17,956	6,497
Unskilled laborers, etc.	123,497	37,631
No occupations	14,944	19,711

In the ten months of this fiscal year only 35,775 aliens have emigrated, compared with 193,717 last year. In addition last year 70,126 native born Americans and 9,072 naturalized Americans emigrated, chiefly to Poland and Canada and Italy.

SONS OF FUNSTON AND AGUINALDO GO TO WEST POINT

Washington, D. C., May 19.—The names of Frederick Funston, "United States at Large" and Emilio Aguinaldo, "Philippine Islands," appear on the list of successful candidates for admission to the military academy next July.

Young Funston, son and namesake of the late Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston, was appointed by President Harding. The young Filipino is son of Don Emilio Aguinaldo, leader of the uprising of the Filipinos, first against the Spanish and afterwards against the Americans.

The outstanding incident of Gen. Funston's brilliant military career, which began when he led the 20th Kansas volunteer infantry as its colonel to the Philippines in 1898, was his capture of Aguinaldo. It broke the back of native resistance to American rule. In the guise of a prisoner, held with a handful of white comrades by a force of friendly natives who posed as members of the Aguinaldo army, the adventurous Kansas pefetrated to Aguinaldo's mountain headquarters, effected a dramatic capture and escaped with his prisoners.

SORBONNE HEARS ELSIE JANIS SING AND GIVES MEDAL

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, May 19.—By a special invitation from the Sorbonne, Elsie Janis sang her famous song "Give me the moonlight, give me a girl," before the faculty of that venerable institution this afternoon, and they gave her a medal.

The Medaille Louis le Grand only has been awarded to two other actresses in its whole history. The others to whom it was awarded were Sarah Bernhardt and Mme. Rejane. It descended upon our Elsie yesterday.

The ceremony, which is in recognition of Miss Janis' war work in amusing pollus and all the allied armies, was a complete surprise to her. The halls of the ancient university probably never before witnessed such frivolity as when Elsie was invited to do her stuff and did it. She sang, danced, and turned cart wheels.

Fatty Arbuckle Leaves for His Chicago Engagement

Los Angeles, Cal., May 19.—Roscoe C. "Fatty" Arbuckle, motion picture comedian, left Los Angeles tonight for Chicago to begin an engagement in a musical review at a café in that city under a contract said to guarantee him $2,500 a week. It will be his first appearance in musical comedy since he entered motion pictures eight years ago.

HAMMER SLAYER ADMITS IDENTITY

Find Sister in Cell with Clara Phillips.

[Copyright: 1923: By United Press.]

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, May 19.—Declaring she would rather die in Honduras than be taken back to life imprisonment in San Quentin, Cal., Clara Phillips, convicted "hammer slayer," was closely guarded today following a dramatic confession of her identity.

With arrival here of Undersheriff Biscailus from Los Angeles, the woman held here on suspicion of being the slayer of Mrs. Alberta Meadows, and who escaped from a California jail after her conviction of that crime, broke down and admitted she was none other than the woman sought for months throughout the United States and Central America.

The American minister was in the cell when the confession was made. The suspected woman had been held here since her arrest with two companions. From the first she had declared she was not Mrs. Phillips. No one who could positively identify her was at hand.

Recognized by Sheriff.

Sheriff Biscailus, however, recognized her at once.

"Well, you gave us a merry chase, Mrs. Phillips," he said.

She assented.

"Yes, and we are going to take you back," he added.

Then, for the first time, the identity of Clara Phillips' woman companion was learned. She is the "hammer slayer's" sister.

Companion Proves to Be Sister.

Turning to the other woman, Biscailus said:

"Etta May Weaver (the name by which Mrs. Phillips' sister is known in Los Angeles), that was pretty cute of you to ask me to get Clara's clothes after she made her escape."

"Where was Clara when you asked for her clothes?" the sheriff asked.

"How did I know? I wanted to get them to keep for myself."

Prefers to Die.

Upon this reply, in a flood of emotion, the suspected woman broke down and cried out that she would never be taken back. She cried that she would prefer to die here.

As a consequence, she is closely guarded to prevent her attempting suicide.

FEARED HOLDUP PLOT, BUT FINDS SON PROSTRATE

Kalamazoo, Mich., May 19.—[Special.]—After flashing a light for half an hour on a boy's prostrate body at a lonely spot north of the city, in the belief that some one was shamming injuries as part of a plan to commit highway robbery, Neal Finley of Kalamazoo was horrified to find the unconscious body that of his missing son, Albert. Today the young man is in a precarious condition at the hospital, suffering from ailments which the physicians have not yet diagnosed.

The body was first discovered by John Ryan, who, suspecting a holdup plan, speeded his car as he passed the prone form. He stopped his car in front of the Finley home and aroused the family to get a light which they played on the body to prevent an escape while the officers were on their way. Scores of motorists, evidently also fearful of a contemplated robbery, sped past the scene while the two men waited.

Finley at last advanced cautiously until he was near enough to discern the features as those of his son.

CHARGE SCHOOL HEAD IS DUPED TO AID LUNDIN

Friends See Plot to Hit Mortenson.

Intimidation of Peter A. Mortenson, superintendent of schools to force him to aid Fred Lundin and his co-defendants in the Criminal court was charged last night by Trustee J. Lewis Coath. As a result, he declared, he will demand that four assistant school superintendents be discharged.

They are, First Assistant Supt. Ernest E. Cole, Clarence E. De Butts, Morgan G. Hogge and Ambrose B. Wight.

The Lundin trustees, particularly Edwin S. Davis and Albert H. Severinghaus, with the assistance of Cole, had harassed Mortenson with the threat that they would elect a new superintendent of schools on May 25, Coath charges. In this manner they rendered him amenable to suggestions intended to benefit them in the trial, Coath asserted.

Mortenson Before Judge.

Coath's charges came after Mortenson had been brought before Chief Justice Michael L. McKinley and questioned concerning a letter written by him apparently calculated to influence the trial of Lundin.

Miss Bertha Benson, principal of the Penn school, made a statement to Justice McKinley declaring she had been ordered by Mortenson to go to the office of Lundin's attorney, Clarence Darrow. She did so, she stated, and was browbeaten by William A. Bither, ex-attorney for the school board, now under penitentiary sentence, who sought to induce her to change her testimony.

Trustee Coath is credited with having unearthed the attempt to tamper with a state witness and brought it before Justice McKinley in the absence of Judge Charles A. McDonald before whom Lundin, Davis, Severinghaus and twenty-one others are on trial. Justice McKinley summoned Supt. Mortenson.

Admits He Wrote Letter.

Mr. Mortenson admitted authorship of the letter to Miss Benson, saying he had instructed several other principals to report at the office of Lundin's attorney.

"Mr. Cole suggested giving such instructions," he said. "Attorney Frank S. Righeimer said it would be all right to do so. My only purpose was to inform the principals they might absent themselves from duty to go there."

Says Cole Dictated It.

Mr. Mortenson later issued a statement amplifying the first one. He said:

"For many months members of the educational division have been asked to appear at the offices of the state's attorney, attorney general, and counsel for the defense. We have nothing to conceal and every one has responded to calls from either side.

"Original documents have been furnished the state whenever called for. I have also directed that copies of documents be given the defense whenever requested.

"The letter in question was dictated by Mr. Ernest E. Cole, my first assistant, and signed by my secretary as all routine letters are. It was intended to transmit the request and give the necessary permission to the principal to be absent from duty."

Special Assistant Attorney General Frederick A. Brown was called in by Justice McKinley and informed of Miss Benson's statement. Later in the day he said he did not think Mortenson would be cited for contempt of court.

"Sample of Bulldozing Tactics."

Trustee Coath said the entire proceedings were only a mild sample of the bulldozing tactics of the Severinghaus crowd. He said that a teacher or principal who incurred the displeasure of the Lundin trustees would find life unbearable.

"Mortenson did not know that Mayor Dever was going to remove the five trustees," Coath declared. "Neither did the trustees suspect it. Therefore they were able to bulldoze Mortenson with the aid of Cole and the other assistants.

"Mortenson was told his term expired May 25. It was four years ago on that date that Charles E. Chadsey was appointed superintendent. Mortenson took his place on Oct. 25, 1919, supposedly for a four year term. The Severinghaus crowd maintained he was only filling Chadsey's unexpired term and therefore would come up for reelection on May 25.

"In that case he would have been at their mercy as they would have controlled the board and the appointment of a superintendent if Mayor Dever had not forced them out. Mortenson is in no way crooked. He has had to contend with this crowd for several years and he found that he was accom-

Barbot to Fly In America as Trib's Guest

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, May 19.—Georges Barbot, French pilot, sailed at noon today on the French liner Chicago for a tour of America in his fifteen horse power flivver plane under the auspices of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. He is accompanied by a mechanician, M. Pradere. M. Dewoitine, constructor of the newest air wonder, will follow on May 26 on the liner Paris.

M. Barbot gave a dinner last night at the Aero club, at which friends wished him good luck.

When interviewed at the pier by various Paris newspapers, M. Barbot, in high spirits, told them he expected a great month flying in America for THE TRIBUNE.

Calls It a Motoaviette.

"I will take my flivver and fly as I please and see the country—no other tourist can see America as well as that."

Of course, M. Barbot did not say "flivver." He used a word which French newspapers have invented to describe his plane—"motoaviette"—which already is part of the French language.

M. Barbot was accompanied by a large crowd of aviation enthusiasts, including Col. Quinton of the French Aero club, to Havre.

Anxious to See America.

The young flier is aware of the importance of the flivver plane to the future of every man's aviation, but the principal point at the age of 25, as he told friends at the pier, is a jaunt across the United States in the most agreeable manner he knows, for M. Barbot would no more wish to see America from the windows of a railroad train than any farmer would think of walking to church while the family flivver is able to take the road.

"Papa Clemenceau had a private car during his tour of the United States the last time," M. Barbot said with a twinkle in his eye. "Mais j'aime mieux ma motoaviette." Which is one way of saying, "He's got nothing on me."

FIVE CHICAGOANS ESCAPE NIAGARA BY BARE CHANCE

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 19.—Luck saved a party of five from Chicago from being carried over Niagara Falls in a motor boat this evening.

The motorboat, the Sunbeam, is owned by the Lasker Iron company of Chicago. It was formerly a subchaser and was bought in New York recently, refitted and brought up the barge canal to Tonawanda. Capt. George Murphy of Chicago was in command.

This evening the captain decided to make another lap to Buffalo and spend the night there. The motorboat was taken into the river and the pilot, being unfamiliar with the channel, proceeded north along the Canadian shore in the direction of the falls, instead of south toward Buffalo.

At Chippewa workmen on the hydroplant piers waved a warning to the crew, but they continued their course. Just below the intake for the Queenstown power house channel, a broad mudbank stretches several hundred feet out into the river. The motorboat stuck her sharp nose into this mud and held fast, a scant half mile from the cataract. The crew was taken off.

BANDITS SPURN CHINESE OFFER OF HOSTAGES

Parley Deadlocked; Angry at U. S.

BULLETIN.

BY ROY BENNETT.

SHANGHAI, May 20.—The following message has been received from Charles Dailey at Tsao Chuang:

"Mrs. Varea, wife of Manuel A. Varea, will arrive in Shanghai tonight. The other captives have been imprisoned." It is not known here whether she has been released permanently or sent out on parole.

BULLETIN.

PEKING, May 19.—(By United Press.)—Exasperated by the failure of the Chinese government to secute the release of the foreigners held captive by Shantung brigands, the diplomatic corps today served notice that the highest Chinese military authorities would be held responsible for the safety of the prisoners. This notice was contained in a formal note to the Chinese government following a meeting of the diplomatic corps.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TSAO CHUANG, May 19.—The Chinese bandits positively refused the offer of Minister Wu Ya Lien and Gen. Yang to become hostages for the foreign captives, they refused even to discuss the offer with the government's representatives, who returned last night. The Chinese officials left for Peking today with an increased bitter feeling against the foreigners for their alleged interference in China's affairs.

New Threat to Kill Captives.

The bandits today sent a new warning to the diplomatic corps that they would kill the American and British captives unless the Shantung government withdraws the troops by Tuesday. The troops are known to be within a mile of the stronghold, with two outer rings.

The bandits absolutely refused to consider any terms the Peking government offered until all troops are withdrawn north of Yen Chow Fu.

The Peking negotiations also complain that Gov. Tien has been trying to conduct separate negotiations.

Hostile Toward Americans.

A deadlocked situation, with hostility toward the efforts of the American rescue mission, is openly expressed. An illustration of this is the refusal of the communications authorities by orders of high postal officials to accept press messages for English language newspapers unless they are fully prepaid at commercial rates in silver dollars, which naturally are unobtainable. Owing to this effort to curb the foreign press, leaving Peking a free hand to utter misleading statements, all correspondents departed today except Reuters and THE TRIBUNE.

The deadlock aggravates the strained situation, with the Chinese accusing Americans of negotiating direct, while they themselves are hopelessly split and playing petty politics. Unless the home governments stiffen their attitude, forcing the Chinese to abandon their double dealings and comply with the bandits' terms, there seems little hope of rescuing the captives. Unless further antagonized the bandits will continue to permit food and other comforts to be sent to the captives.

Captives Still in Temple.

No direct word was received from the captives today, but at 11 o'clock last night they still remained at the temple at the base of the Paotsuku stronghold.

The bandit proclamation, which Marcel Oliver Berube, a parpied French citizen, is carrying to the Peking government, says:

"The militarist party treated us beyond words. At the time when Chang Ching Yao recruited us we rejoiced exceedingly, hoping to be useful to the country. On his fall we were immediately disbanded and returned home and took up peaceful work, but the evil-minded landowners falsely accused us of being bandits.

"Feared Further Injustice."

"They rendered impossible the homes we possessed, so, therefore, all in this plight gathered together, occupying Paotsuku as a base. Suddenly the 20th brigade appeared demanding the surrender of ourselves and arms, but we feared further injustice. Therefore we looted a train on the 21st day of the third moon [May 6]. We had no desire to rob the articles or moneys taken, nor did we wish to strain international relations, but no foreigners can be relied upon, while the government and troops are absolutely unreliable.

"There is no alternative. Unless definite and satisfactory arrangements are made, with a suitably allotted locality for our occupation, we will not release the foreigners. If the government will not treat properly, not only the people of Tao Chow, Yen Chow, Yi Chow, and Tsao Chow [southern Shantung] will suffer but the whole of China. We have no fear of either our countrymen or foreigners. It is a question of existence or destruction of our country."

Have Modern Arms.

Mr. Berube confirms that the bandits have plenty of supplies and ammunition and also modern arms. They have Mauser revolvers identical with those used by the Shantung troops and also 100 rounds each. Their rifles are of the pattern used by the army, including many Springfields of 1923 make, but chiefly Japanese rifles. Unquestionably the bandits have obtained considerable ammunition since the holdup, doubtless through trading loot with the soldiers.

FOREIGN AID NEEDED

Washington, D. C., May 19.—[Associated Press.]—Failure of the Chinese government to effect the release of the foreigners captured by bandits in Shantung led officials of the American legation in Peking to cable the state department today that "either foreign guarantees or intermediaries seem to be necessary" to produce results. Direct negotiations between the bandits and Chinese officials, the dispatch declared, apparently are impossible, because of mutual distrust.

On the other hand, the dispatches reported that the military governor of Shantung had offered commissions in the regular military forces of that province to the bandit leaders provided the captives should be released. Whether this offer will be found acceptable is not known here and further information is anxiously awaited.

Minister Schurman and other foreign diplomats have demanded again that the Chinese government apprehend and punish the bandits. Officials here, however, are more concerned over the plight of the prisoners than over the question of how the outlaws shall be disciplined.

Reports that troops in three brigades of the Chinese army in Shantung have been without pay for eighteen months and are selling ammunition to the bandits have led officials here to fear that a defection of these troops may make a bad situation worse.

URGE U. S. TO ACT

BY ROY BENNETT.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHANGHAI, May 19.—There is a strong developing sentiment among foreigners here for taking steps to urge their governments to immediately employ foreign troops to rescue the captives held by the Lincheng bandits and to perform sufficient policing hereafter as to prevent a recurrence of the bandit outrage. The negotiations between the Chinese government and the bandits seem to have broken down and it is feared the Americans and others will be killed.

The American association today sent a resolution to Washington and the governors of several states in which it says:

"The wrecking by organized bands of the Tientsin-Pukow express and the capture and holding of American citizens for ransom is striking evidence of the instability of the Chinese government and the necessity for taking steps to insure proper protection for American life and property. The association feels that immediate action is imperative, not only to secure the release of the prisoners but to punish those responsible and to provide guarantees for future protection."

British Urge Stronger Action.

The China association, made up of British, took similar action except that it was stronger. The Britishers urged foreign supervision, disarmament, and disbandment of the troops, foreign management of the trunk line railroads and policing under foreign command.

The Shanghai stock exchange, representing one of the most substantial sections of the British community in China, passed a resolution which was sent to the British government in which it expressed "horror and disgust" at the Lincheng outrage wherein a member of the exchange, Fred Elias, was captured. The resolution urges "such forceful action" as may be necessary to procure the release of him and others and to protect the lives of Britishers in China.

A. F. OF L. BOARD ELECTS RYAN A VICE PRESIDENT

Martin F. Ryan, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, has been elected a vice president of the American Federation of Labor by the executive council, which has been in session in Washington, it was learned last night.

The election of Mr. Ryan fills the vacancy caused by the resignation because of ill health of William D. Mahon, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes union. Mahon had been a vice president of the American Federation of Labor for five years.

Mr. Ryan was born in 1874 and entered the employ of the Southern Pacific railroad at Fort Worth in 1895. He is a charter member of Fort Worth lodge of the Brotherhood of Carmen.

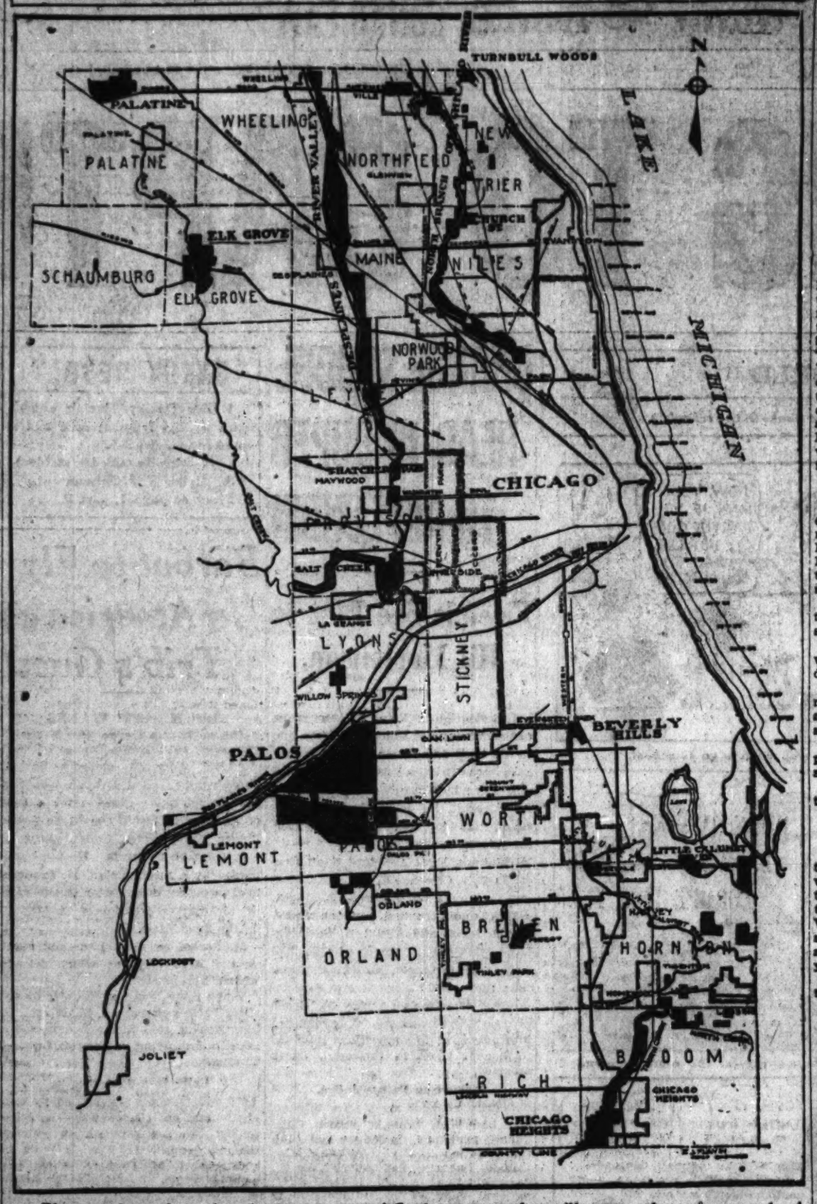
AREAS THAT MAY BE NAMED FOR BATTLEFIELDS



The map shows the various forest preserves of Cook county as they will appear when a few parcels of real estate that intervene between lands already purchased have been acquired. It is proposed that the various districts composing the preserves be named after various battles of the world war. One district, a portion of the preserve at Rand and Ballard woods, has already been designated as Belleau Wood.

TRIBUNE MAN HERO IN BANDIT CAMP AS HE SAVES BOY'S LIFE

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TSAO CHUANG, May 19.—Intercession for Maj. Robert Allen's son almost cost the life of John B. Powell, Shanghai correspondent for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Mr. Powell is still suffering greatly from injuries received when he protected the boy and is writing his despatches, which messengers bring to me, on scraps of paper, in great pain.

Like the hero he is, Mr. Powell does not mention his hurts. He is devoting all his energies to trying to aid and comfort the other captives.

Mr. Powell's injuries were received the day before the boy's release. When the lad fell exhausted, a bandit tried to steal his coat, whereupon Mr. Powell grappled with the bandit, recovering the garment. The bandit attempted to shoot Mr. Powell, but others prevented. Shortly after, when he was again on the march, another bandit attacked Mr. Powell from behind and with the help of several others beat him severely over the shoulders. His arm is still sore and there are many bruises about his upper body.

Mr. Powell has been a hero throughout. It was he who obtained the freedom for the women and children and it was he who encouraged the aged and despairing Mr. Smith of London and who nursed the helpless Sig. Musso. And now he has organized the food distribution and other relief which the rescue mission is sending forward.

STEAL CAB, $10, LAND IN CELLS IN HALF AN HOUR

Half an hour after two young bandits had robbed Harry C. Fisher of 5408 Calumet avenue, a Yellow Cab chauffeur, of $10 and his cab, they were captured by a "flivver squad" from Cragin station. The youths had held up Fisher after he had driven them to Keystone and Le Moyne avenues.

Fisher reported the robbery to the Austin police, who relayed it to all stations.

Shortly afterward Policemen Lobbert, Knudsen and Dieman saw the cab as it sped past the Cragin station. They gave chase and captured the bandits. The boys gave their names as Paul Christiansen, 19 years old, 1624 North Mozart avenue, and Carl Grunikt, 20 years old, 3046 West North avenue.

NAMES NOTED IN WAR CITED FOR COUNTY FORESTS

Amiens and Hamel, where the 33d division first went into the battle line, the long drawn out battle of the Aisne, where many American soldiers had their first taste of fire, the St. Mihiel salient, Sedan, scene of American courtesy, when the Rainbow division stepped aside to let the French enter first.

These were only a few of the names proposed yesterday as fitting titles for Cook county forest preserves in accordance with the plan of the county commissioners to christen forest tracts for great battles of the war. They will be added to the list to be taken under consideration by the committee on nomenclature, which is to be appointed by Anton J. Cermak, president of the board.

Premier Stamboulisky has ordered the arrest of the political leaders of the Macedonian separatist movement, including Thomas Koladchenoff, former general procurator of Bulgaria.

BRITON SAILS, SAD THAT MISS HOYT DIDN'T WED HIM

Would Return if She Sent Radio to Come Back.

New York, May 19.—[Special.]—Lieut. Frederick Wiseman-Clarke of the British navy, whose contemplated marriage to Miss Nancy Hoyt, daughter of Henry M. Hoyt, who was United States solicitor general under President Taft, was broken off so suddenly in Washington last Wednesday that society there has not yet recovered from the shock, sailed from this city today on the steamship Orduna for England, accompanied by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wiseman-Clarke, who had come to America especially for the wedding.

Surprise to His Family.

When questioned about the change of plans and the indefinite postponement of the wedding, as announced by Mrs. Hoyt, on account of the illness of Miss Nancy Hoyt, Lieut. Clarke said that the announcement was a complete surprise to him and his family.

Asked if he had seen Miss Hoyt after the postponement of the wedding he said:

"O, no. You see she was ill. That's why the wedding was postponed indefinitely."

"Suppose you should get a radio message that Miss Hoyt had recovered and desired the wedding to go on," was suggested. "Would you come back?"

"My God, yes," Lieut. Clarke replied. "I'd take the first ship back, as I love her dearly."

"Do you think you will ever return to America."

"I'll see you if I ever do."

Hint at Another Reason.

"Isn't it a fact that the real reason the wedding was broken off was that when your father and mother arrived they learned of the matrimonial history of Miss Hoyt's sister, Mrs. Horace Wylie, her elopement with Wylie while she was the wife of Philip Hichborn, and that they then refused to sanction your contemplated marriage?"

"No," replied the young man. "My father and mother knew of Mrs. Horace Wylie's past before they came to America. That was not the cause I am sure."

The lieutenant indicated that he regarded the breaking off of the engagement as final.

"I don't think we will ever be married now," he said. "It's a terrible blow to me. It's a damned rotten show all around."

He added that he and Miss Hoyt had luncheon together on May 15, the day before the date set for the wedding, and that announcement of the postponement came at 6:30 o'clock, a few hours after he had taken her home.

The young Englishman said he would have remained in America, but that since he intends to resign from the navy and go into seclusion in a lonely post in the British foreign service, he could not remain in America to attend a wedding that had been "indefinitely postponed."

Reason for Halting Wedding.

Miss Hoyt's marriage would have induced a complete nervous wreck, it is said by friends. After weeks of battling with herself to overcome her strange fear of matrimony, she is said to have completely collapsed during rehearsals for the ceremony.

Her case is said to have been aggravated into what psychologists call a "fear complex" by memories of the unhappy ways into which marriage had led her sister, Elinor Hoyt-Hichborn-Wylie.

Miss Nancy Hoyt, a debutante of 1921, met Lieut. Wiseman-Clarke when he was attached to H. M. S. Raleigh, Admiral Grant's ship, which lay off Washington navy yard that year.

MOSES, WORLD COURT FOE, HAS SORE THROAT; HARDING NOT AMAZED

Washington, D. C., May 19.—[Special.]—Senator Moses [Rep., N. H.], one of the chief Republican critics of President Harding's proposal that the United States enter the league of nation's world court, called on the President today. When they greeted each other in the White House office the following conversation took place:

PRESIDENT HARDING — Well, how are you, George?

SENATOR MOSES—I'm all right, except for a sore throat.

PRESIDENT HARDING,—I should think you would have a sore throat.

NEW RADIO CODE FOR ARCTIC DASH LEADER TESTED

Mysterious code signals from a station announcing itself as WNP were heard by radio amateurs from coast to coast in the early hours of yesterday. They came from a new radio transmitting device that was being tested out for Donald MacMillan, arctic explorer, for use in his dash to the north pole this summer. The tests were made by M. B. West, technical supervisor of the Chicago radio laboratory, and proved highly satisfactory, it is said.

With the new device it is expected that the explorers will be able to communicate progress to stations in the United States within a few hours of the actual events.

An amateur is to be selected by Hiram Percy Maxim from among the 20,000 members of the Amateur Radio Relay League to go with the expedition to operate the receiving and transmitting sets.

INDICTMENTS OR CITY GRAFT AME CARLSON, 8

Three Similar Inquiries Near Jury Climax.

Nine indictments, charging misuse of funds under the Thompson administration, were voted yesterday by the grand jury which has been investigating city hall graft. In the list of indictments these are named:

GEORGE CARLSON.

George Carlson, city commissioner of gas and electricity, who was appointed by Mayor Thompson.

Arthur Henderson, president of the [illegible] Supply cocpany, who obtained more than $600,000 in contracts from the city.

——— Rehm, a city storekeeper, whose first name was not learned.

Six others whose names were not revealed are included in the true bill, which is said to charge conspiracy to operate a confidence game and obtaining money under false pretenses.

May Hit Cabinet, Aldermen.

Two or possibly three members of former Mayor Thompson's cabinet are practically certain to be indicted, attaches of the attorney general's office admitted.

"And the grand jury may also indict certain aldermen," an assistant attorney general said.

Attorney Fletcher Dobyns, who presented the evidence to the grand jury Friday night, said that approximately $200,000 had been paid for material never received by the city and that $3,000 had been expended in manner none appears to know about. Mr. Dobyns part in the investigation was confined only to the department headed by Commissioner Carlson. He said to have called attention to a $30,000 home recently built by the commissioner, whose salary is $8,000 a year, and his $5,500 automobile.

Faherty Board Next?

Special Assistant Attorney General Charles M. Haft, said during the day that his investigation of the Faherty board of local improvements is practically completed and ready for presentation to the grand jury tomorrow night. He intimated he expected indictments as a result of the testimony. It was Faherty who authorized payment of approximately $2,500,000 to "experts" in a short period. The alleged padded payrolls of the A. B. F. corporation were not disbursed through Faherty's department, it was declared.

Another investigation concluded by Mr. Haft is in connection with the city's purchase of coal. This also will be given to the special grand jury.

Mr. Haft has in addition carried on the investigation of the fire department. Witnesses are to be summoned before the grand jury to tell of alleged graft in promotions and in the purchase of supplies, he declared.

After Big Offenders.

Special Assistant Attorney General Frederick A. Brown, who has charge of the grand jury investigation of the Thompson administration, was asked regarding reports that the grand jury will ask to be discharged within a week. It had been stated the jurors are of the opinion it would take two years to make an exhaustive search for graft during the last administration.

"There is considerable more for us to do," Mr. Brown said. "However, we cannot go into all the petty graft transactions. We are only after the bigger offenders."

Has the grand jury obtained any incriminating evidence against department heads other than Carlson?" he was asked.

"Evidence has been accumulating since this phase of the investigation was begun," he said.

"Will there be more indictments?"

"I expect a string of them," he replied.

HUSBAND HELD TO GRAND JURY FOR MURDER OF WIFE

Peter Gaconis, 5850 Maryland avenue, was held to the grand jury for the murder of his wife, when a coroner's jury yesterday rendered a verdict in the death of Mrs. Agnes Gaconis, 32 years old, who was shot to death in their apartment Friday night.

Gaconis told the police that his wife had been shot while they were quarreling after a party in their home. Testimony of the children, Stanley, 9, and Josephine, 7, who watched the quarrel, agreed that the father held the revolver in his hand after the shot had been fired.

Smith Hints He May Not Sign N. Y. Wet Repeal Bill

New York, May 19.—[Special.]—Speaking tonight at a dinner in the Hotel Shelburne, Coney Island, commemorating the completion of the Coney Island boardwalk, Gov. Alfred E. Smith indicated to the diners that he did not intend to sign the Mullan-Gage repeal.

"What I will do shall be done for the best interests of the state," said the governor. "Nobody owes more to this state than I do. When I make this decision I will do the best I can to sustain and uphold the constitution of the United States and the laws of this country."

Last Surviving Son of Garibaldi Near Death

ROME, May 19.—Gen. Ricciotti Garibaldi, last surviving son of the great Italian hero, is dangerously ill from heart trouble, and his physicians express little hope for his recovery. He is 76 years of age.

MAYOR PUTS END TO TEARNEY CAFE; REVOKES PERMIT

Shooting, Dance, and Women Cited.

Mayor Dever ordered Al R. Tearney put out of the cafe business yesterday noon at Tearney's café in 35th street and Calumet avenue. The mayor revoked four licenses on the recommendation of Chief of Police Collins — cabaret, cigaret, restaurant, and retail beverage.

AL TEARNEY.

Tearney sought to block the mayor by an application for injunction, but his attorney, J. L. McInerney, arrived at the county building after Judge Rush had left for the day. The petition was switched to Judge Ira. Ryner. It said that Tearney valued his business at $200,000 and had been at his present location since 1910. He averred he had spent $25,000 in 1921 to redecorate his place, had rented additional space on which he spent $85,000, and that his leases, operative until 1936, cost him $450 a month.

Revocations Halt Hearing.

While the argument was in progress the corporation counsel's office phoned that the licenses had been revoked. Judge Ryner then said he would continue the argument so the attorney could appeal to Judge Rush on Monday.

Chief Collins in his report cited several shooting scrapes which have occurred in the cafe and referred to an investigation made Thursday evening. Commenting on these, the chief said:

"This cafe is situated in the heart of the colored colony of Chicago and is patronized exclusively by white people. The colored people claim it is a menace in their community. It is apparent Mr. Tearney is unable to control the conduct of his patrons and as a result frequent quarrels and shootings occur and disorderly acts are committed."

Cites Kelliher Killing.

One of the "shootings" cited was that of Charles Strauss of 1901 South Spalding avenue on Jan. 4, 1922. The report says that Frank Ray, a machinist, did the shooting. The second shooting was on Feb. 18, 1923, when Steven Kelliher was killed in the café in the presence of his wife. The police report says Kelliher fired a shot at Daniel McCarthy, who fired three shots at Kelliher, one of which killed him.

"During this shooting," continues the report, "Mrs. Alice Golden, 5249 Prairie avenue, was shot in the left arm while dancing with her husband."

"Kissing, Immoral Dancing."

On Thursday evening Chief Collins sent three investigators to the place, of whom one was a woman. Sentences from their report are as follows:

"A man and woman were kissing each other while dancing. The dancing was immoral. As one couple was leaving the dance floor, a man put his arm around the girl and held her body close to his. Every one laughed. It was right in front of my table.

"Across the dance hall two men and two women were apparently having drinks served to them. It appeared to me to be whisky.

"Women wandered all around the place and sat at any table where a man happened to be alone, smoking and drinking and permitting liberties.

"Bulls from the Chief's Office."

"At 12:02 a. m. four men appeared at the door. A party at the next table said: 'They're the bulls from the chief's office.' Two managers went to each side of the dance floor. As soon as the police left the managers sat down again and a drunken fight started."

Tearney formerly was an alderman and at one time a Democratic boss of some power in his community. He was also interested in baseball, being president of the Three-Eye league.

SEVEN INJURED IN CRASH.

Muncie, Ind., May 19.—Seven persons were injured and two locomotives and a number of freight cars demolished when a fast east bound freight train crashed head on into a switch engine in the Big Four yards here last night.

Honor Hamilton

The principal address at the unveiling of the statue of Alexander Hamilton at Washington, May 17, was made by President Harding. The statue was presented to the government by the Alexander Hamilton National Memorial association in honor of the founder of the United States treasury department. The sculptor is James E. Foster, and his work occupies a prominent place on the south plaza of the treasury building.

CANNY SCOTCH STEAL MARCH IN RUSH TO AMERICA

Halifax, N. S., May 19.—[By Associated Press.]—To clip two days off their journey and arrive in the United States before the British immigration quota was exhausted, 399 Scottish immigrants, originally bound for New York, were landed by the steamship Cameronia here today to complete their trip by rail.

Examined under a special permit from Washington, the immigrants were to be started for New York tonight on a special train.

NOT TOO MANY BRITISH.

Washington, D. C., May 19.—Mr. Husband, commissioner general of immigration, said that according to his figures the quota for Great Britain had not been exhausted, despite the fact that ship lines abroad announced that the quota was about filled up.

Asks Court Set Aside Tax of $886,073 on Gould Estate

New York, May 19.—The executors of the estate of the late Edith Kingdon Gould, who died suddenly in Lakewood, N. J., in 1921, today filed an application in Surrogates court to set aside assessments of $886,073 made against her personal estate by the state transfer tax appraiser. The appraisal was made on jewelry, furniture, household goods and other personal effects.

Kettle Boils Over, Puts Gas Out; Man Is Killed

Firemen worked for more than an hour with an oxygen machine yesterday in an unsuccessful effort to revive William Howard, 39 years old, who was found dead in the gas filled kitchen of his home at 5135 Lawlor avenue. It is believed a kettle of water boiled over and extinguished the flame from a jet which was found open underneath the kettle.

PRESIDENT OF FRANCE HOST TO AMERICAN GIRLS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, May 19.—[Tribune Radio.]—A good will delegation marshalled by Anne Morgan and Ambassador Myron T. Herrick had tea at Elysee palace this afternoon with President Millerand.

Mme. Millerand is understood to have requested the American ambassador to arrange the reception, which brought out all the state equipment, palace guards, velvet carpets rolled to the street, attachés, and orchestra music in the salons. The official "director of etiquette" for the palace, Andre Defouquieres, directed the ceremonies.

After the American girls had been presented singly to the president, Mme. Millerand shook hands and saw that they got tea and talked with them through Anne Morgan as interpretor. When Miss Morgan got her bevy out shortly before 7 o'clock, they were all bubbling with enthusiasm over the president's wife and the arrangements of the palace.

FIND 500 AUTO LOCK KEYS ON MOTOR THIEVES

More than 500 keys for unlocking automobiles were found in the possession of George Webster, 22 years old, and George Nelson, 26 years old, arrested on Friday when found sitting in two stolen cars at 18th and State streets. When questioned they admitted stealing the cars in St. Paul and in Madison, Wis. Yesterday they were handed over to the St. Paul police.

With them when arrested, was Miss Myrtle O'Beirne, 19 years old, daughter of a prosperous farmer of Wadena. According to the police, she was in no way connected with the thefts, but had come to Chicago at the request of Webster, whom she had known for two years and who, she said, was to marry her.

Terrific Storms Do Big Damage to Italian Crops

LONDON, May 19.—[By The Associated Press.]—Terrific storms raged over the plains of Lombardy yesterday, particularly in the province of Bergamo, says a Central News despatch from Rome today. Rain and hail fell violently and covered many tracts of land to a considerable depth. The damage to crops, says the message, is estimated at millions of lire.

HORN OF PLENTY TO BE WELL FILLED IN EUROPE THIS YEAR

ROME, May 19.—[By United Press.]—The American farmer must compete with an unusually large—and perhaps "bumper"—European crop in the disposition of his excess production this year.

The International Institute of Agriculture, after a survey of crop conditions across the continent, predicted that the farm production of Europe would exceed all expectations.

Consumers of Europe, sought by the American congress and farm organizations as an outlet for excess products of the American farmer, will be well supplied, the institute contended.

Spring sowings are large, under exceptionally favorable circumstances. The mildness of March this year encouraged planting and further improved winter wheat.

The general condition of the sowings in France is satisfactory. Germany makes a similar report. In Poland and Roumania rain and mild temperature put the winter sowing above normal and made the outlook for spring sowing favorable. Except for cold April weather, Belgium has been experiencing good conditions. A drought is feared in Jugo-Slavia in June, although thus far conditions have been ideal.

All cereals in Czecho-Slovakia are reported progressing favorably. In the southern section of Italy there has been insufficient rain, although elsewhere the weather has been ideal. The India and Tunisian crops are reported as likely to show an increase of 20 per cent over last year's.

EVANSTON RULES SKIMPY BATHING SUITS OFF BEACH

Low cut and one piece bathing suits will be forbidden again this year on Evanston beaches, according to a police ruling yesterday.

Women's blouses must have one-quarter sleeves or close fitting armholes, and bloomers must be full and not shorter than four inches above the knees. Stockings may or may not be worn, if other conditions are complied with.

Jersey knit suits may be worn under the same conditions, provided the skirt is not shorter than two inches above the trunks.

CURZON BATTLES TO WIN MANTLE OF BONAR LAW

Stanley Baldwin Second Choice of Politicians.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, May 19.—[Tribune Radio.]—According to present indications Prime Minister Bonar Law's resignation from the premiership may be expected within a week or two. THE TRIBUNE learns that Sir Thomas Horder, a famous specialist, who was summoned to examine the British prime minister, diagnosed his disease as cancer and there is no doubt that he will be unable to continue to bear the burden of the premiership.

Mr. Bonar Law returned to London today as a result of the consultation, being met at Victoria station by Sir Frederick Sykes. He did not return to Downing street but went to his private residence.

How soon he will resign depends on the issue of the struggle for succession going on now between Lord Curzon and Stanley Baldwin. Lord Curzon is determined to secure the prize, and he has been working for it since it became evident that the office was going to be vacant. It is said here that his violent note to Russia was due to his desire to commend himself still further to the die hard faction of the Tory party, which now is in the saddle.

Curzon Plays Safe.

His ending of the negotiations with M. Krassin, soviet trade commissioner, and going to the country for a week is said to be part of his byplay in domestic politics. He wishes to hold the Russian crisis in reserve as a weapon to be used if necessary to placate either one section or the other of the party.

Mr. Baldwin is much more popular with the rank and file of the party, but he is distrusted by the die hards, and it is also felt that he has not had sufficient experience for the job. Moreover, he is almost unknown in the country.

The crisis must be settled before the middle of July, for at that date the nine months' grace for ministers who accept new posts and who seek reelection expires, and the Tory party is frankly afraid to face the country in a series of by-elections, which might lead to disastrous defeats.

Labor Watches Situation.

The opposition leaders are watching the situation closely. Ramsay MacDonald, Laborite, has canceled his engagement to attend the Socialist international congress in Hamburg next week. David Lloyd George also will remain in town over the holidays.

The parliamentary vacation gives a breathing space, but it is believed that the Tories must make up their minds before they face parliament again on May 28.

Russia Refuses to Budge.

MOSCOW, May 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—Russia's reply to Marquis Curzon's suggestions as outlined to Leonid Krassin, the Russian soviet commissar for foreign trade, in a two hour conference at the London foreign office Tuesday, has not yet been sent to London.

General unofficial comment tonight gave reason to believe that Russia would stand on its note, expressing willingness to settle the differences by a conference, but declining to accept any ultimatum. Russia appears determined upon its right to maintain its own policy in the east, but announces itself ready to establish, by a conference with England, nonconflicting activities in the east.

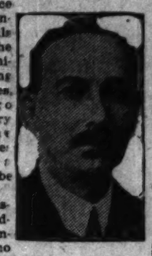
GROMMES BOOZE 'VICTIMS' HEAR THEY'RE SAFE

Won't Be Hit for Rum Split, Rumor.

The great Grommes & Ulrich "liquidation," through which some $200,000 worth of choice rums, gins, brandies and cordials passed into the hands of 140 Chicagoans, including many millionaires, promises to go down in history as one of the few conspiracies of which it was a real pleasure to be a victim.



EDWIN A. OLSON.

For who, District Attorney Edwin A. Olson interposes—for who ever heard of anybody being prosecuted under the federal statutes for being a victim of a conspiracy? And so the word traveled sweet and fast around the federal building yesterday that, unless the grand jurors, who meet again on Tuesday, are pro-Volsteadian enough to rule otherwise, those who were invelgled into accepting hundreds of cases of rare beverages need no longer fear jail sentences, or—what is worse—previous threats of government officials to take away the booze.

A Few May Fear.

That is, most of them need not fear. There are one or two of them, official rumors hinted, who had their liquor delivered direct to saloons instead of to their homes, as the withdrawal permits specified, and these may come in for further investigation by the government. While no names were mentioned it was hinted that among those who probably were not "victimized" to the extent that some of the others were are Harry S. Tansey, former bailiff to Judge Kersten, and former Ald. Robert J. Mulcahy, who obtained 798 cases and 21 jugs of brandy, 90 cases and 254 jugs of cordial, 139 cases of gin, 209 cases and 126 jugs of rum, and 74 jugs of sloe gin.

Matters of Wonder.

The federal authorities are not sure that Mr. Mulcahy himself believed that he and his family could hope to use all of that for personal consumption alone. An investigation will be made to see if any of the Mulcahy stock, the largest consignment in the transaction, might have found its way into the illicit booze traffic. Moreover, the district attorney is said to be surmising jusy why the former alderman was permitted to give a note of $170,000 without security for his share when he is not reputed to be a wealthy man.

The seven principals in the transaction, six of whom have filed demurrers to the original indictments against them, probably will be reindicted when the jury meets, and it is predicted that the indictments this time, in view of additional information obtained, will be bullet proof. Former Judge Charles A. Williams, who is said to have worked out the legal intricacies of the transaction, was the only one to enter a plea of not guilty. He announced his intention of carrying the case to the United States Supreme court, if necessary, to prove the transaction legal.

CALL GOVERNORS FOR CONFERENCE ON CHILD LABOR

James J. Davis, secretary of labor, announced at Aurora yesterday that the governors of every state in the union will be invited to Mooseheart, Ill., during the week of June 24 to participate in the governors' round table decision of child labor, as this is vitally important in view of the recent Supreme court decision holding the child labor law of the District of Columbia unconstitutional.

"Each governor will be asked to attend in person and to send two delegates to this conference, one of the objects being to formulate a uniform child labor law and to urge its adoption by those states where there is no such law on the statute books," he said.

OLD ROME FINDS SOMETHING NEW: WOMEN'S PARADE

What Is It—a Suffraget? Cæsar's Kin Ask.

BY V. DE SANTO.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, May 19.—[Tribune Radio.]—"Before the year is out my promise to give the vote to certain classes of Italian women shall be fulfilled," Premier Mussolini told the delegates to the ninth international suffrage conference this morning.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt answered:

"Then our coming to Italy has not been in vain. Italy will be the first Latin nation to give the vote to women."

About 1,000 women, representing forty-three nations and all the races of the human family, marched through the streets of Rome early this morning from the exhibition palace to Viminale hill, where Premier Mussolini reviewed the parade.

New One on Rome.

The parade started at 8:30. Most Romans, shop people, mechanics and clerks out at that hour did not even know there was a suffrage congress, and fewer had heard the word "suffraget." They lined up along the sidewalks, asked questions, and made comments.

"What's that? Who are they?"

"They are suffragets," some one affirms.

"What is the meaning of that? What do they want?"

"They want to vote."

"What for? Haven't they got enough troubles? Where are they from?"

"Most of them are from America."

"O, well, that's where most strange things come from."

Honor Mrs. Catt.

An elderly clerk exclaimed meditatively:

"And they say there isn't anything new under the sun. Rome certainly never saw anything like this before in its 2,000 years of history."

The congress will officially close tonight with a banquet, given to retiring President Carrie Chapman Catt at the Quirinal hotel.

PLAN FORCE IF LUNDIN SCHOOL TRUSTEES BALK

Police May Be Called for Annual Meeting.

Physical force, perhaps use of the police department, may be necessary to terminate the trusteeship of members of the board of education whose resignations Mayor Dever has accepted. Some of the old trustees are angry. It is understood they have complained to the mayor that he has treated them unfairly.

No indication has been given regarding what they intend to do, but a rumor is current that it is planned to appoint Louis Wilk business manager at the annual meeting next Wednesday for a term of four years at $10,000 per year, and to transact other urgent business.

The city administration, through an authoritative spokesman, has asserted that "the old trustees will be prevented from again functioning." This man further explained: "That may mean drastic action, if they attempt to function. How else can they be handled, if they go to the board and start doing business? No one there has authority to stop them. The old Harrison board put a superintendent of schools over on the Thompson board, and the Thompson board will not be permitted to hoist a business manager on us."

Some Expect No Fight.

Shrewder advisers of the mayor believe the ousted trustees will not attempt to make a real fight. Former President Davis and former Vice President Severinghaus are on trial in the Criminal court and they are the two who are said to have sent word to the mayor that they have been treated unfairly. Mayor Dever said yesterday that he desired to avoid in every possible way any interference with the trial of these men, but that the important feature of the situation is that the people want a good school board.

Delegations Urge Appointments.

The mayor saw several delegations yesterday with reference to appointments. Many more are expected to call upon him Monday and Tuesday.

It was reported that Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First Trust and Savings bank, had declined a place on the board. Also that Charles E. Merriam and Raymond Robins have refused finally.

Mrs. Moses L. Purvin, director of the Woman's City club, has several competitors for a place on the board. One of them is Dr. Gursen Levi, rabbi of Israel congregation at 53d street and Michigan avenue. Mrs. Nancy Reiss, interested in several Jewish charities, is also under consideration.

William F. Ryan, former alderman, who was in the city council when Mayor Dever was a member, has been urged for a trusteeship. He has a good record in public office and a reputation for ability.

Sabath Urges Dr. Schiller.

A delegation headed by Congressman Sabath and Ald. Mendel called upon the mayor in behalf of Dr. Victor Schiller, a dentist with office at 1725 South Ashland avenue.

Union labor is insistent that one member shall represent them. Originally Victor Olander was their choice. He refused. Then his union friends insisted that he accept and he is said to be on the fence at present.

If Olander decides finally that he will not accept the honor the unionists will urge that the mayor select either William Neer, president of the joint council of drivers and head of the milk drivers' union, or Miss Mary McInerney, head of the book bindery women and late candidate for county commissioner on the Democratic ticket.

Friends of Charles Moderwell, north side coal man, are urging his appointment.

Kindly phone Mr. Darrow's office, Central 0928, and let him know when you will call.

plishing some good by cooperating with them whenever his conscience would permit. That seems to be what happened in this instance.

"The significant point in Miss Benson's statement is that Bither told her to 'talk this over with Cole.' Cole's influence over the teaching force is against the good of the schools and he must go."

MISS BENSON'S STATEMENT

Miss Benson's statement in full follows:

"On May 16 I received letter from Mr. Mortenson saying Mr. Darrow, counsel for the defense, desired a conference with me and asking me to phone when I could go down.

"When I telephoned I was told Mr. Darrow would be in at 2 o'clock and would be in his office all afternoon. I reached there at 1:45, was met by a man who introduced himself as Mr. Aldrich, who offered me a seat and left the office, returning in a few minutes with a man without hat. As they came into the outer office where I was, Mr. Aldrich said, 'Now, Miss Benson, will you come in,' and they led the way. I said, 'Is this Mr. Darrow?' 'No, my name is Bither.' I said, 'I thought I recognized you.'

"'Well, Miss Benson, the situation is this: they are trying to put twenty-four men in jail; twenty-four men are on trial for their freedom.

"'I have your correspondence here and you say you received some office furniture you never ordered. You are one of 250 principals and practically all the others said they, hadn't. Mr. Keeler said he'd some and not a thing that he hadn't ordered.'

"I asked if he meant to say that I was the only principal who had answered the questionnaire in that way and he said, 'No, there were a few, but they've admitted when shown their orders that they made a mistake. Mr. McKay said he'd received a couch he'd never ordered but come to find out the teachers had ordered it.'

"'Now, this correspondence doesn't show up well for you, Miss Benson.' [The correspondence consisted of my letter to Mr. Cole.]

"'Your letter asks for a rolled top desk, a chair, and a filing case, and you say Mr. Cole called up to say the filing case wasn't furnished to elementary schools, but you could have the rolled top desk "standard office equipment."'

"'Why didn't you say you did not need the rug and chairs?'

"I said, I thought I'd made that clear and I had not ordered them."

She Thinks It "Queer."

"'Well, it would certainly look queer on cross-examination for one of your experience to say you thought you had to take what you hadn't ordered.'

"'Well,' I said, 'I thought it was queer that I could not get restroom furniture that I had asked for and be offered furniture I had not requested.'

"'This seems to be a matter between you and your superior officer.'

"'Yes, it does look like a question between my veracity and his.'

"Mr. Bither said, 'This reflects upon Mr. Mortenson and Mr. Cole. Do you wish to involve the superintendent?'

"I said, 'Mr. Bither, Mr. Mortenson has the confidence of the teaching body.'

"'Then do you wish to reflect upon Mr. Cole? Have you anything against him?'

"I said, 'The purpose I had in mind when answering the questionnaire was to state exactly the truth.'

"'Mr. Cole said that you wanted the rug. Of course there is no request for it from you on file, but you asked in a letter five days later if the rug could be exchanged for a cork carpet.'

"I said, 'I understood that to acquire the desk which I needed I must take it with "standard equipment."'

Told to See Cole.

"'Well, will you see Mr. Cole and talk this over?'

"I said I would. It, of course, was possible Mr. Cole didn't understand over the phone that we had a rug, though I felt I'd made it clear.

"'You'll be called as a witness; your name was handed us by the prosecution.'

"'Were you ever before the grand jury? Haven't you received a subpoena? Didn't you get up in a public meeting and say you'd received things you didn't order? The paper said you did.'

"I said, 'No,' to each of the above questions.

"'But you were in touch with the state's attorney's office?'

"'Yes, I was called down and asked a number of question.'

"'Did they ask about this?'

"'Yes.'

"'Anything else?'

"'Yes.'

"'What?'

"'Several things.'

"About what?'

"'Different things.'"

Say Riders Lose as Men, Lines, and City Gain.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Hard boiled aldermen whiled away a cynical hour yesterday trying to figure how the extra cent would be cut between companies and men if street car fares should be jumped to 8 cents as a sequence of the controversy over a pay boost of 10 cents an hour, asked by the employés. As a diversion, the aldermen computed how large a brick would hit John K. Public as he emerged from the small end of the horn.

A raise in fares from 7 cents to 8 cents, they figured, would ring up about $3,300,000 a year extra on the surface line passengers.

This "new" revenue would be split somewhat as follows:

The traction employés would get $1,000,000 in their pay envelopes.

The traction companies would get about $2,000,000 as "velvet."

The city would get $2,300,000—part of the "55 per cent of the net."

The straphangers would get it in the neck to the tune of $3,300,000.

How Aldermen Figure.

Mathematical processes, it may be said, by which these figures were reached, were a simple matter of elementary, not to say crude, arithmetic. The aldermen did not attempt to estimate whether the companies are now making enough to give the men 10 cents an hour more without a jump in fares, but took the ground that fares and wages travel up or down together, as has been demonstrated three times in the last four years.

So they were dropped out of the aldermanic computations. If fares are punted to 8 cents and $4,000,000 a year is added to expenses by a 10-cent an hour wage increase, it would appear that the residue receipts of the surface lines would be swelled by about $4,312,000 a year.

Of this extra money, 45 per cent would go to the companies, or $1,940,000. The city would get 55 per cent, or $2,373,000. The surface car customer would have his bill for transportation raised more than 14 per cent, or $3,800,000 plus a year.

Boost for Company's Net.

The companies' "45 per cent of the net," after 5 per cent on the purchase price of $160,900,000 is deducted, amounted last year to $1,363,442. An 8 cent fare flat as an accompaniment of a 10 cent an hour wage raise, would apparently increase this to $3,300,000—it would more than double it. The city's traction fund, which as "55 per cent of the net" got $1,665,000 last year, would roll up to over $4,000,000 a year.

One theory of the state commerce commission is that in regulating fares the "net" should be carved as low as possible, in order to remove from passenger fares the load of a "55 per cent" split, which no longer means a share in the profits from a 5 cent ride. When the traction ordinances were passed, a 5 cent fare was habit, tradition and custom in Chicago. It yielded profits and it was considered a fine thing to get a share of the profits for the city instead of lowering fares below 5 cents.

Last year the traction lines carried 727,639,211 revenue passengers. The fare now is 7 cents, and if tokens are bought three rides for 20 cents. The average fare is indicated to be 6.91 cents. If fares were raised to a flat 8 cents it would mean an average jump of 1.09 cents per passenger. Or, if as many straphangers keep riding as did last year, it would mean about $8,800,000 a year in additional revenue to the surface lines.

Effect of 10 Cent Raise.

The aggregate cost of a 10 cent an hour rise in wages for employés is placed at $4,000,000 a year. When wages were advanced from 65 cents to 80 cents an hour in June, 1920, it added $6,250,000 to the operating expenses of the surface lines. A jump from 70 cents to 80 cents, as asked, would amount to about two-thirds of this, as there has been slight change in number of workers, or $4,166,000 a year. The generally accepted figure has been that each cent an hour means $400,000 a year on the pay rolls.

The men are also asking six days' work at seven days' pay, which would possibly amount to $2,800,000 a year on the pay roll. They ask abolition of one man cars, which would probably cost $500,000 to $700,000 a year. All told, it would be about $7,500,000 a year in additional expense, as compared with $8,300,000 a year "new" revenue given by an 8 cent fare.

But one prevailing impression is that the two last mentioned demands are put in as part of the usual argument, the men, as usual, asking for more than they hope to get.

Case Is Different Now.

When fares had to be raised, however, as the "jit" no longer sufficed to pay transportation costs let alone yield a profit, the "55 per cent of the net" became a horse of a different color. It became so much additional overhead unloaded on the passenger, who in paying his street car fare pays several other things besides transportation. To slip 45 cents of "profits" to the companies he has to give the city 55 cents for the traction fund.

The companies maintain that they have to rely on their 45 per cent share of the "net" to meet their fixed charges, as 5 per cent on the purchase price falls short of doing this.

As some of the aldermen viewed it the figures seem to indicate the various stakes in the controversy—the companies with a possible stake of $2,000,000 additional "profit" a year; the men with a stake of some $4,000,000 a year in pay; the riding public with a stake of more than $8,000,000 a year in boosted fares.

CHICAGO CAR LINE WAGES HIGHER THAN IN ANY OTHER CITY

Chicago Surface Lines employés, whose lead the elevated trainmen are following—demand a wage increase of 10 cents an hour, from 70 cents to 80 cents an hour. The following table, compiled from reports of TRIBUNE correspondents as of May 15, 1923, indicates the average scale of car men in twenty-three principal cities of the country is 55 cents an hour and the minimum 42 cents an hour. The figures given are the maximum wages paid:

PIER FACILITIES URGED TO CARE FOR LAKE TRADE

Terminal There Path to Fixed Bridges.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Col. A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works, is planning to segregate the commercial and recreational features of the Municipal pier. He is looking for "a man of exceptional ability in marine matters" to take charge of commercial phases.

A. A. SPRAGUE.

The full significance of that commonplace statement is a possible saving to Chicago of $71,000,000, based upon estimates of the city's engineers. They predict that will be the excess cost of movable bridges over fixed bridges on the Chicago river in the next twenty-five years. But closing the bridges would cast aside about 1,500,000 tons of river commerce. If this is barred from the river, engineers assert it must be taken care of in some other place.

Major Rufus W. Putnam, federal district engineer in Chicago, has suggested the pier could be made to take care of the equivalent of the river commerce, although perhaps not that particular commerce. It is assumed if Col. Sprague finds the man he seeks, he will see the pertinancy of some, if not all, of the suggestions of Major Putnam.

Major Reviews Situation.

The views of the major are therefore of unusual importance.

"It is true," said Maj. Putnam, "that the decline in commerce at the Chicago harbor and river has been enormous; from 10,500,000 tons per year in 1889 it has fallen as low as 1,500,000 tons. And this has been occasioned by the same cause as has interfered with land traffic—obstructive bridges.

"If the commerce by water to Chicago were merely local in its effect, it could be done away with. But the farmers, merchants, and other citizens of Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and the rest of the United States have paid taxes totaling nearly $6,000,000 for the purpose of providing adequate harbor facilities at Chicago so that a usable river route to the east would be available to carry their goods and serve as a check on railroad freight rates.

Chicago Expected to Act.

"Chicago owes its supremacy to the commerce flowing through it; is indebted to the hinterland to the west and north and to the industrial centers and ports of the east for its very existence. It is only right that the United States as a whole look to Chicago for a certain amount of activity with regard to terminal development. Chicago is not only expected to see that the remaining lake commerce is adequately provided for, but also to take active steps to revive it."

So much for the general situation. Then the major expressed his view regarding fixed bridges as follows:

"It is believed that the bridges over the river should ultimately be fixed. But it is also believed that the lake commerce at Chicago not only should continue, but should be increased by providing more suitable terminal facilities."

Sees Pier as Solution.

Then he suggested a solution which he thought should have a strong appeal because of its reasonableness. It follows:

"Chicago has built a Municipal pier at a cost of some $4,000,000, and the federal government has spent in the neighborhood of $3,500,000 for a breakwater to protect it. The pier is only partially used because it is not adequately equipped.

"By providing traveling cranes, warehouse trucks, automatic stackers, connections to the Illinois tunnel system and tracks of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad; by returning the street car tracks to the upper level of the pier, where cars will not interfere with trucking, and by providing a separate coal terminal and apparatus for transfer of cargoes to lighters, it will be possible—with terminals operated by a business management—to handle twice the commerce that now exists at Chicago harbor.

"All of this can be provided for by the savings effected in the cost of constructing a few of the necessary new bridges."

Would Get Money Back.

That means 3,000,000 tons of lake commerce a year, instead of 1,500,000. The major predicts the city would get its expenditures back, as follows:

"In less than five years the entire additional investment in lake front terminal facilities would be retired by savings effected in bridge operation and construction.

"It is believed that if the city were to adopt and pursue successfully some such program, congress and the secretary of war, when appealed to for authority to close the movable bridges, providing a vertical clearance in excess of 16½ feet, would not treat such request unfavorably."

HENRY STRUBLE TO WIELD GAVEL IN RIVER FOREST

Henry Struble of 239 Forest avenue, River Forest, newly elected president of the village where he has lived for thirty-five years, says it seems like coming back home to preside in the town hall, where he wielded the gave in a like capacity from 1899 to 1906. Mr. Struble succeeds Robin L. White. The new president has been active in the successful campaign for the war memorial building, for which ground will be broken this afternoon.

AUBERE'S DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL, CORONER FINDS

Jury Places No Credence in Fitch's Story.

A coroner's jury, after only thirty minutes deliberation, decided yesterday that Louis Aubere, 17 year old Northwestern university freshman killed in a Wilmette hazing escapade automobile smashup a month ago, came to his death through an unavoidable accident.

JAMES LEAHY. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The verdict upheld the contention of President Walter Dill Scott that the collision "might have occurred anywhere. It refuted the statements of Roscoe Conkling Fitch—passenger in one of the cars—that the smashup came when the student machines recklessly zig-zagged back and forth. It was termed on the campus a "fitting reply" to the recent announcement from the state attorney's office that the Aubere case would be taken to the grand jury with a request for involuntary manslaughter indictments.

Leahy Warned Aubere.

The verdict came after James Leahy, 1527 Central street, Evanston, driver of the car which carried Aubere on its running board, had taken the stand in his own defense, described Aubere as "my best pal" and told of unheeded warnings to the boy to "come inside to safety."

In the state's attorney's office it brought only one comment—that the case was ready for the jury and that Mr. Crowe himself would have to decide whether it should be presented.

The story of Fitch—"confession maker" and former roommate of Leighton Mount—was partly confirmed by John A. Martz, 2028 Orrington avenue, Evanston, a freshman in Leahy's car.

But, where Fitch and Martz told of zig-zagging and where Fitch placed the speed of the cars at forty-five miles an hour, half a dozen other passengers in the three student machines chasing each other said they were only going twenty miles an hour, and placed part of the blame on Mrs. Arthur Winslow. She was the driver of the northbound car hit by Leahy's machine after it had grazed another in its south bound passage on Sheridan road, just south of the drainage canal.

What Leahy Testified.

Leahy's story—leaving out the questions by Coroner Oscar Wolff—follows, in part:

"Louis Aubere was my best pal. We had been pals for ten years—such good pals that lots of my belongings were at his house and his at mine. I asked him several times to get off the running board, but he insisted he was all right. I couldn't act bossy with a boy who was my closest chum. After I clicked fenders with one of the other cars in passing, I slowed down to eighteen or twenty miles an hour. I was never on the wrong side of the road. I have never been arrested for any violation of the automobile laws. I was not zigzagging. I was looking straight ahead when the crash came. It was unavoidable. I tried to swing away from Mrs. Winslow's car, but couldn't."

Leahy's story was told in a dispassionate, straightforward fashion. The Northwestern student looked straight at his mother during most of it. Occasionally, as he referred to other students in the cars, his gaze switched to the person mentioned, as if seeking confirmation. When he finished, Coroner Wolff announced that Williams, another student injured in the crash, was on a certain road to recovery, and then bade the jury to retire.

Mother Embraces Him.

When the verdict was announced, Leahy's mother clasped him in her arms in an embrace broken only by the insistence of classmates who wanted to shake hands. Leahy, as driver of the car carrying Aubere, had been considered the man most likely to be held by the grand jury, if anyone was held.

The Aubere case, which broke just before the skeleton of Leighton Mount was found in the Evanston Lake street pier, became secondary to the Mount inquiry, but assumed importance when Fitch termed it the result of a "deliberate ramming of one student car by another." Yesterday it had assumed chief importance and was given a secondary ripple by the one development in the Mount case.

J. Allan Mills, the former student who was forcibly brought here from his Akron, O., home to testify in the Mount investigation, voluntarily interjected himself into it again with a telegram to state officials telling them that J. L. Mount, Leighton's father, held the secret of the boy's disappearance and death. He also hinted that Fitch knows more than he has told in his many statements and retractions. The telegram was as follows:

"Palmer has no connection. Feel morally certain Fitch or Mount Sr. will break under pressure."

Calls Telegram Bunk.

Charles Wharton, assistant state's attorney, termed the telegram "bunk."

"It is worthy of notice," he said, "that Mills, formerly the roommate of Palmer and a fraternity brother of his, should send this telegram just at the moment Palmer was under fire—under arrest, in fact.

"We are fully aware of the theory Mills is trying to present, but it is untenable. The telegram shows, however, that Mills did not tell us everything he knew when we questioned him. It may be necessary to bring him back here again."

Mr. Wharton and John Sbarbaro, who are jointly working on the case, are awaiting word from New York on the questioning of Mrs. Kathryn Hotchkiss Lovemald, who in letters to Mills before she was married referred to his "terrible experience" at about the time Mount disappeared. She has told reporters that she referred only to his family troubles.

Wharton and Sbarbaro are busy checking various angles of the Mount case.

Checking on Loose Ends.

"We have nothing to hold forth," said Mr. Sbarbaro. "We are simply trying to make sure that nothing has been overlooked. We are going over all the angles and checking up all the loose ends."

Their statements were taken to mean that every tangible clew in the case has been exhausted. The grand jury will resume its work tomorrow.

ASK CLUBWOMEN FOR SUPPORT OF SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

MRS. H. W. HARTOUGH.

Mrs. H. W. Hartough, chairman of the public welfare committee of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs, has just outlined a campaign to have each one of the 70,000 members of the Illinois federated clubwomen contribute $1 yearly toward the support of the Park Ridge School for Girls.

"Such a fund," Mrs. Hartough declared recently, "would adequately support the school. Club women realize that the more care and attention is given the dependent girl, such as are cared for at the Park Ridge school, the fewer delinquent girls there are in the courts."

Mrs. Hartough and her committee will be hostesses at the school at tea Monday afternoon. The women attending the Illinois convention which opens sessions Tuesday, will be guests.

FREE STATERS WANT NO PEACE, DE VALERA SAYS

Claims Foes Hope for "War Election."

DUBLIN, May 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—Eamon De Valera is engaged in no negotiations with the free state, direct or indirect, and the next move does not rest with him but with the people, who are rapidly organizing to assert themselves. This is the substance of a statement sent to the Associated Press by the republican leader today. Asserting that there is no peace, De Valera added:

"This sort of one side truce cannot continue. We cannot stand passive insensitively in the face of the continued aggression and harrying of the free state forces. The truth is that our opponents do not desire peace; they are anxious for the war to continue and intend drawing us into active hostilities again.

"They realize that they have long lost the confidence of the majority of their former supporters, and they know that in a free election tomorrow not 10 per cent of them would be reelected. Their purpose is to bring off the election with, if possible, war conditions prevailing, so that the republicans may be denied freedom of speech and public meeting."

For the first time since the irregular command gave its "cease fire" order, lively outbursts of shooting occurred in Dublin last night. The new general headquarters was the target of snipers, while patrols near Portobello and Kilmainham were subjected to rifle fire. Later the vice regal lodge and the magazine and fort in Phoenix park were fired on. In each case the free state troops replied vigorously with machine guns. No casualties were reported.

FRENCH-BELGIAN SPLIT WIDENS ON POLICY IN RUHR

Belgium Refuses to Send More Troops.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, May 19.—The differences between the French and Belgian governments became decidedly greater today. While the Theunis cabinet is thoroughly in sympathy with Premier Poincare, nevertheless the Flemish part of the Belgian population supplies consistent opposition to following closely the French policy.

As a result of this definite opposition to the Ruhr plans, the Belgian cabinet, despite yesterday's overwhelming vote of confidence, decided not to participate in further strengthening the hold on the Rhineland.

Baron Gaiffier d'Hestroy, Belgian ambassador, called on Premier Poincare today and presented a formal refusal by the Belgian government to send any more troops to the Ruhr. The French cabinet already had decided to send 20,000 men, but in face of the Belgian abstention it is possible that the move will be postponed.

Fear World Opinion.

A high Belgian official here said:

"On the eve of Germany's preparation of a new offer, although Belgium does not expect it will be acceptable as a basis for negotiations, the government does not wish to give the appearance of flouting neutral or British and Italian opinion. Sending heavy reinforcements to the Ruhr would be sure to be misinterpreted abroad.

"We are safe in saying that Germany's new note, even though totally unacceptable, will receive consideration over a longer period and with more interallied conversations than the last time."

Germany to Offer Annuities.

BERLIN, May 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—Germany's forthcoming reparations proposals will stipulate definite annuities instead of offering a fixed total, according to information emanating from political quarters. It is stated that the German League of Industrialists is preparing a plan which will enable the government to make an offer based upon positive concrete guaranties for which the German industrial, financial and commercial interests, political parties and labor unions will go security.

It appears that the industrialists have succeeded in convincing Chancellor Cuno and Foreign Minister Rosenberg of the futility of speculating upon an international loan as a basis for reparation.

The league instead proposes to substitute a system of gold annuities, to be guaranteed through the coöperation of labor unions in connection with a platform calling for increased production all around. The gold is to be raised by a process which is described as a giant hypothecation of all the nation's productive units—mines, factories, farms, banks, fisheries, etc.

Special dispatches to the Berlin newspapers report "an orgy of street shooting" by the French in Mannheim last night, in which as many as 150 shots were fired and at least two Germans seriously wounded.

Other dispatches report the fatal wounding yesterday in Mannheim of Karl Traub, a policeman.

COBLENZ, May 19.—By The Associated Press.—The Inter-allied high commission has issued a new expulsion order affecting 902 persons. Most of those whose names appear on the list are German railroad functionaries.

Arrest Dye Makers.

LUDWIGSHAFEN, Germany, May 19.—Three directors of the Badenese aniline and soda works have been arrested by the French.

Seize Germans' Furniture.

ESSEN, May 19.—[By The Associated Press.]—French troops have begun the seizure of household goods belonging to Germans who refuse to pay fines levied against them by the occupation authorities. The German newspapers say that seizures are to be made at the homes of Fritz Thyssen and Dr. Krupp von Bohlen.

TOO BUSY TO CELEBRATE HIS BIRTHDAY

37 Years on the Job

Capt. Thomas I. Porter, head of the United States secret service here for more than thirty-seven years, yesterday celebrated his 77th birthday "on the job." As on his wedding day several months ago, Capt. Porter explained he was too busy to participate in any special ceremonies, and continued at his desk.

The captain yielded to requests of friends that he indulge in a few reminiscences, however, and recalled many of the government cases cleared up by him, particularly against counterfeiters. He displayed sixteen memorandum books, each of which contains the history of 100 counterfeiting rings which he has broken up.

Although he has a capable staff, Capt. Porter himself goes out on all important cases.

JOHN D. JR. GIVES COLLEGE FAMOUS LINCOLN PAPERS

Providence, R. I., May 19.—John D. Rockefeller Jr. has given to the John Hay library of Brown university the famous McLellan collection of Lincolniana. In announcing the gift today Dr. Harry Lyman Koopman, the university librarian, said that Mr. Rockefeller, who is a member of the Brown class of 1897, had made it as "expression of his loyalty to his alma mater and also on account of the appropriateness of the building as the chief visible memorial to his distinguished fellow alumnus, John Hay, to be the shrine of this famous assemblage of Lincoln memorabilia."

The McLellan collection includes more than 3,700 volumes and pamphlets; approximately 220 legal papers, autograph letters and miscellaneous autographic material of Lincoln himself and about 140 other pieces of autographic material.

FOUR POISON PEN LETTERS ADDED TO SOCIETY LIST

New York, May 19.—Four more poison pen letters today were added to the 147 which are alleged to have wrecked many homes in high society.

The latest missives were laid before District Attorney Banton by Nathan Burkan, counsel for George Maxwell, composer, accused of having mailed similar letters involving the name of Mrs. Allan A. Ryan and other women. Maxwell, through his counsel, has contended that he himself was the victim of the poison pen writer.

Neither Mr. Burkan nor Mr. Banton would discuss the latest letters nor say to whom they were addressed.

YOUTHS STEAL $3,500 PAYROLL.

AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY.

The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements, let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop.

Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities.

Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. If we remain one people, under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve upon to be scrupulously respected; when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not lightly hazard the giving us provocation; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice, shall counsel.

Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor, or caprice?

It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world, so far, I mean, as we are now at liberty to do it; for let me not be understood as capable of patronizing infidelity to existing engagements. I hold the maxim no less applicable to public than to private affairs that honesty is always the best policy. I repeat, therefore, let those engagements be observed in their genuine sense. But in my opinion it is unnecessary and would be unwise to extend them.

Taking care always to keep ourselves by suitable establishments on a respectable defensive posture, we may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies.

This editorial was written by George Washington for the guidance of the American people. It appears in his farewell address, one of the wisest utterances ever directed by any statesmen to the intelligence and foresight of a nation. From its delivery to the present day it has been the firm foundation of our foreign policy, and in its light our governments and our people have been able to avoid many trials and sacrifices.

There are leaders of public thought, or would-be leaders, who would have us depart from the wisdom of Washington, but it is wisdom for us today as it was wisdom when it was written. The conspicuous changes in appearances and conditions, which they would use as excuse for this departure, do not affect the principles upon which his advice was based. Reread the history of the first quarter century of the republic and you will find the same exhortations of mistaken partisanism, the same demands of shortsighted self-interest as we are familiar with in the league and court controversy.

The fact that we are now powerful and rich does not affect the wisdom of Washington's advice if we regard our peace and prosperity as the legitimate objects of our policy.

THE CRIME OF RESETTING THE CLOCK.

Now comes Senator Wright of De Kalb county with a bill which would deny to Chicago and Chicagoans the right to set their clocks to suit themselves. Downstate and rural communities do not like daylight saving, the senator asserts, and therefore Chicagoans should not be allowed to practice it. It would be amusing because of its utter absurdity if it did not reveal the growth of our mad tendency toward tyrannical legislation to regulate private conduct. If there is anything in the whole gamut of human activities which we, personally, do not like, let us declare it a crime and allow no one to do it.

The New Hampshire house of representatives has passed a law to make daylight saving a crime. It would punish violators with a $500 fine. Wisconsin proposes to outlaw the custom. Pennsylvania and Delaware have anti-daylight saving laws. No doubt other states will follow. When we see state legislatures doing such things we tremble, if we cannot laugh. If we laugh we are in peril.

It is no laughing matter to brand the residents of a community as criminals and punish them as such because at a certain period of the year they agree to put their clocks one hour ahead. If we cannot do what we want with our clocks, what insanity of legal regulation may not next be thrust upon us?

Daylight saving as we know it is, of course, an arbitrary arrangement adopted almost exclusively in cities for the pleasure and convenience of their residents. In Chicago it has been approved by a majority vote in a popular referendum. In rural communities it is generally opposed because residents of such communities say it imposes a hardship of early rising and wasted time upon them. Some city dwellers object to it for various reasons, which no doubt are good reasons for the objector.

But the city does not impose any change of clocks upon the rural resident. Neither legislatures nor city councils decree that the sun shall change its course. They merely arrange for a simultaneous changing of city clocks. If that is a crime, it is a crime for residents of a community to agree to arise at 6 o'clock in the morning rather than at 7.

ARCHITECTURAL STANDARDS IN CHICAGO.

No one observant of recent events can fail to be impressed with the new interest in architecture. We believe THE TRIBUNE contest has been a useful influence in this, but of course there are other explanations, among the most important being the tremendous building activity in the great cities and the fact that conditions of congestion are forcing consideration of ambitious planning on a huge scale.

New York, with its masterful civic spirit, is working toward gigantic things, and it is some satisfaction to Chicagoans to realize that our city plan showed the way. What we need to remind ourselves of, however, is that New York will far outstrip us in actual accomplishment unless we act with a great deal more vigor, breadth, foresight, and taste than we are showing at this time. Chicago dreamed the dream. It is up to us to make it a reality. We are halting on the way.

We have our plans and they are good. We may do splendidly in official action. But it is perhaps even more important that individuals should fall in with the great purpose and each contribute something up to the standard. If property owners do not aim at a high standard of architecture Chicago cannot be a beautiful city. We may have architectural triumphs here and there, but they will be sadly offset by a general level of mediocrity or worse.

Time was when a skyscraper was a novelty and its beauty was left pretty much to take care of itself. That time has gone by. The citizen who builds owes a duty to the community to give heed to the new standards of taste and to contribute his share to the general advance of the city in architectural harmony and beauty.

Our great corporations, which have ample means and which usually select conspicuous sites, ought to take special care that their contributions are worthy of their opportunities. Such buildings stamp their character on the city, and if they are mediocre or worse the appearance of the city will be seriously injured. They are not merely private enterprises. They are civic responsibilities.

We renew our suggestion for a committee on architectural standards, to which designs might be voluntarily submitted by owners who wish to contribute to the raising of the architectural quality of Chicago. Philadelphia has such a committee and we understand it has been well received and has accomplished good for that city.

IS THE RED FADING IN WISCONSIN?

We trust the refusal of the Wisconsin senate to pass a bill to abolish the state armories indicates that the pink is fading at Madison. There is plenty of loyal Americanism and common sense in Wisconsin, and they will assert themselves. But the effort to destroy the National Guard so as to leave the community at the mercy of Red organizations or of any outburst of violence is as sinister a fact as can be found in our western history. The pre-La Follette, pre-Berger Wisconsin has a magnificent record of loyal Americanism. The story of the Iron Brigade makes every American thrill. The Germans, for example, who were early leaders in the state were of the highest quality, lovers of liberty who knew American principles and were as intelligently devoted to them as any native. They helped to make a great state, before poison was injected into its veins by self-seeking preachers of discontent and alien minded apostles of revolution.

Americans throughout the country are grieved and dismayed at the flourish of red in such a commonwealth, and are hoping for a revival of the true Americanism for which the word Wisconsin once stood.

A CRIME PREVENTION BUREAU.

Chicago maintains a fire prevention bureau. It saves property vastly greater than its cost every year. We maintain a department of health, the chief duty of which is prevention of illness. It saves distress, death, and expense each year to an extent out of all proportion to its cost. It is logical that we should organize and maintain a crime prevention bureau. It would save millions of dollars in annual expense of police, courts, and jails, and eliminate incalculable suffering and shame.

These are the statements of a veteran of the Chicago police department, originally a child of the streets, who grew to decent manhood despite all handicaps, and who has had thirty-eight years of practical experience in daily contact with crime and humanity. He is not an impractical dreamer. He speaks with conviction, intelligence, and profound realization of his own limitations. That is proved in part by his attitude toward personal publicity. "Don't tell anybody Sergt. Blank suggested it," he advises. "They'll say, 'Whoinell is Sergt. Blank?'"

But the argument is of interest and potential value regardless of its origin. The object is to prevent crime at its source. Statistics show that approximately 85 per cent of Chicago's crime is committed by youths under 21 years of age. Chicago taxpayers pay out approximately $14,000,000 to maintain the police, court, and jail machinery. Of this amount, therefore, nearly $12,000,000 is due to the criminal activities of adolescents. These youthful criminals are at an age when corrective influences might be effective if intelligently applied.

Many of these boys are entirely without intelligent and sympathetic moral or religious influence. "Sergt. Blank" knows. He grew up in their environment. "The Catholics may take care of theirs," he says. "The Jews may take care of theirs. The Protestants may take care of theirs. But there's a lot that nobody takes care of. Nobody took care of me." Of such boys criminals are made.

The idea of a crime prevention bureau is for an organization within the police department, and under the direction of its superintendent, through which patrolmen and perhaps higher officers shall undertake the duty of dealing personally with idle, ignorant, or wayward boys who are drifting into crime. Policemen come into daily contact with such boys. They see them loafing about poolrooms, breaking street lamps, and engaging in various forms of disorderly conduct. Backed by the training and authority of a crime prevention organization, they could inquire into the environment of these boys. They could point out the dangers into which the boys are headed. They could interest the boys in decent activities, and help them to engage in such activities. Instead of dragging them into court, where seven out of eight are discharged, but branded, they could direct many into jobs and improved associations. Most policemen have the ability to do such work if they could be given the precedent and support necessary.

It would not do away with crime, but it should reduce it tremendously and progressively as time goes on. We respectfully recommend consideration of the idea to the police and city authorities.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

When a February wind blows snow into the fence corners and against the north wall, the imagination skips March and April and burrows into May. It jumps from icicles hanging at the eaves to trilliums specking the slopes. It seeks the wild grape in blossom and the brown thrasher rivaling the mocking bird, the thrush in the thicket, and the wren at the kitchen door.

In February spring is a possibility, with the garlands spring should have; trilliums are its slippers and shad bush blossoms are its crown, and the warm sunlight is its domain. In May this spring fades and there comes an old woman in pattens, hiding a blue nose under an umbrella and shivering in green rags. Blossoms are cold in her wet hair and flowers droop from her shriveled hands.

She splashes through the cold rain and looks in the window at the fire. She rattles the door with shrill cries which we know for the east wind. She scatters snow from her umbrella and the thrush is silent, fearing her.

This is our spring, a lean, chill shanked creature of misery. The tulip bows before the cold wind and the mandrake alone is wise. It comes up under a tent.

KEEP THE AMERICAN SYSTEM AND FOSTER IT THROUGH FAIR PLAY.

The brightest sign that has appeared in the rather gloomy prospect of American railways is the appeal of Vice President Doak of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen to the national chamber of commerce. The appeal is for private ownership and operation as against socialistic ownership and operation; for such treatment of the railways as will permit fair wages, just return for investment, and efficient service to the public.

Mr. Doak takes open ground against the socialistic system of transportation, called in this country government ownership. He realizes what it would mean and does mean wherever it is in force, that is, an army of public jobholders far larger than is necessary for the efficient operation of the roads and a heavy burden on the nonjobholding people of the country.

We are glad of his assurance that railway employés are opposed to such an alleged solution of railway problems. That is American common sense and foresight. There are other leaders of railway organizations who are socialists and believe in "nationalizing" the roads. We believe the rank and file of the brotherhoods, save for the younger, less experienced and less thoughtful members, are not deceived by the nationalistic arguments and realize that it would lead them down and not up. But they should make their judgment felt by choosing leadership which is outspoken and resolute against radicalism.

The same duty is upon the shoulders of the public, especially of farmers, who are being muddled by politicians who find it to their profit to distort facts and misdirect discontent. There is no class in the country that will suffer worse or more promptly than farmers by the breaking down of the system of private initiative and direction under which the most efficient and economical system of land transportation in the world has been built up. Errors and wrongs have occurred in this progress because all men are fallible, but if the men who are being tempted by radical politicians toward the socialistic morass of government ownership could travel in Europe there would be a great enlightenment and several offices in congress and elsewhere would have new and very different occupants.

We have the greatest railroads in the world, greatest for the public and for the railway employé. That isn't a brag; it is a demonstrated fact, and if we have good sense we shall keep the system under which they were created and developed.

Editorial of the Day

ANDY GUMP IN POMPEII.

[Idaho Statesman.]

Two thousand years ago and more, a man named Balbus ran for the mayorship of ill-fated Pompeii, a Roman city, later to be buried under the ashes and lava of Vesuvius. And what was his campaign cry? Read it and smile: "I wear no man's collar."

Senator Hiram Johnson found the election promise, inscribed in Latin, of course, on the wall of a small shop in the uncovered ruins of the old city when he was inspecting it the other day and so word came back that they had dug up "Andy Gump" in Pompeii.

Gradual clearing of the layer of ashes which covered Pompeii has disclosed completely furnished homes and shops invaluable in the study of ancient Roman life. The incidental unearthing of Balbus' election boast is just another reminder that there is "nothing new under the sun."

STILL FIGHTING.

"There goes an old buddy of mine," Perkins remarked as a man passed.

"Who is he?" asked Brown.

"Bill Bristow—poor old Bill!"

"Why 'poor old Bill'?"

"Well, it's this way," Perkins explained. "When the war broke out I enlisted and Bill got married."

"Yes, go on."

"Well, can't you see? I got a discharge more than two years ago now."—Kansas City Star.

SMILE AWHILE.

Those who are feeling depressed at the labor troubles through which we are passing would receive a good tonic if they took a walk through Whitechapel, for on the notice board of a certain church there the following piece of anatomical pleasantry has been painted:

"It is easier to smile than to frown!

"To frown you use 64 muscles, but only 13 to smile!"—London Morning Post.

WARRING ON PNEUMONIA.

EVERY year sees us just a little nearer a solution of the pneumonia problem. For a long time it has been plain to the thinking that the hope of preventing pneumonia lay in a vaccine, just as the hope of curing it lay in a serum.

The pneumonia germs are so widespread, so many normal human beings are carriers of them, that plainly no effort directed against the control of carriers was feasible. It is something in the individual, far more than something in the germ, which decides whether a given individual at a given moment is to be laid up in bed with pneumonia, fighting for his life, or is to be a well man going happily on his way, spitting pneumonia germs while walking the streets.

Year by year the proof of the efficacy of vaccines accumulates. Dr. Cecil, who has worked on the subject for years, tells of a new method of vaccinating of which he has great hopes. Dr. Perlwica, of his laboratory, makes an extract of pneumococci by digesting a culture with trypsin and extracting the digested mass with water. This gives an extract of pneumonia bacteria which contains neither bacteria nor poisonous products. This is to be sprayed into the nose and mouth twice a week during the winter. The person inhales deeply as he sprays.

The only effect of the inhalation is the immunity to pneumonia. An older method proven by years of experience with several thousand people is by three hypodermic injections of a suspension of pneumococci similar to the vaccine used against typhoid fever.

In addition to the experience with the hypodermic method of vaccination with several thousand miners in South Africa and with several thousand soldiers in this country, Cecil tells of the vaccination of 1,586 employés of a life insurance company. One had pneumonia. In a group of 3,025 unvaccinated employés of the same company eleven had pneumonia.

Dr. Cecil says that he has vaccinated certain people against pneumonia each winter for six or seven years and has done a lot of experimental work on animals.

Dr. Cecil concludes: "The experiments on man and animals have placed the principle of prophylactic vaccination against pneumonia on a sound, scientific basis. The groups of people who should be vaccinated against pneumonia each winter," he says, "are soldiers, sailors, miners, men who must work in the cold and wet, outdoor workers, truck drivers, chauffeurs, firemen, policemen, postmen, nurses, and physicians, and those who are very susceptible to pneumonia."

To this I add the aged and the users of alcoholic beverages.

COATING ON TONGUE.

Mrs. A. R. writes: 1. Every morning my tongue has a brownish white coating. What is the cause?

2. What treatment would you recommend?

3. I have a fallen kidney. Can anything be done for it?

4. In case of pregnancy, would there be any danger?

REPLY.

1. Constipation is one cause. Sleeping with the mouth open another.

2. Eat bran, vegetables, and fruit. Sleep on your side. Ventilate your bedroom.

3. It can be operated on if necessary. As a rule, the less attention you pay to fallen kidney the better off you are.

4. No. During the later months of pregnancy a fallen kidney stays in place as a rule.

JAW OUT OF JOINT.

A. N. writes: "For three or four weeks the left side of my jaw has been caught so that it is impossible for me to open my mouth more than an inch. It does not seem to be exactly out of joint. It appears more to be a cord that has slipped out of place directly in front of my ear, and when I attempt to open my mouth it draws so that I cannot open it."

REPLY.

It is quite possible that your jaw is out of joint, or partly so. In some people the bones in this joint slip out quite easily.

There is nothing to do if it is partly out of joint except to manipulate it back. You had better have your doctor do that, you might get it wholly unjointed and then you could not close your mouth.

COFFEE, BLACK OR OTHERWISE.

G. H. writes: "A friend of mine, who drinks coffee without milk or cream, tells me that black coffee is more healthful than coffee with cream. Is this so?"

REPLY.

I do not think it is, though there are those who think coffee with cream is more difficult to digest.

They also say that black coffee at the end of the meal stimulates the stomach.

I do not know of any close, scientific work on either of these points.

WHERE YOU STAND.

Chicago, May 14.—[Friend of the People.]—Has the city given any cab company the right to close Armitage, Mc-Vickers, and Meade avenues, from Dickens avenue to the St. Paul tracks? Would like to know where we stand, as we live in a triangle bounded by Grand, Maynard, Melvina, and Dickens avenues.

J. W.

The streets referred to—namely: East 35 feet of Melvina avenue and the alley east thereof, Moody avenue and the alley east thereof, Meade avenue and the alley east thereof, and McVicker avenue and the alley east thereof, between Dickens and Armitage avenues—were vacated by ordinance passed by the city council on March 14, 1923. Council Journal, page 2,052.

Superintendent of Streets.

DIVORCE PROCEEDINGS.

Chicago, May 15.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. In a divorce case is it necessary in order to make it legal for a summons to be served by the sheriff's office upon the defendant when the defendant can easily be found?

2. What is about the largest amount of alimony allowed where there is one dependent child and another who earns $20 a week? In this case the defendant earns $37 a week.

3. Is there any limit to an allowance which can be ordered by a trial judge and if so what per cent? J. S.

1. In general, yes, if the defendant is a resident here.

2. Depends upon the standard of living and the amount reasonably necessary for the support of the dependent.

3. There is no stated limit.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

HE WON'T LAUGH NOW.

Chicago, May 13.—[Friend of the People.]—Across the alley a man is putting up an apartment building and is dumping broken bricks, pieces of cement, and loads of sand in the alley so that no one can pass through it. It has so raised the level of the alley that the water runs into our back yards. We spoke to the man about it, but he only laughed at us. Certainly he does not own that alley any more than we do. M. E. R.

Contractor has been notified to remove debris from alley in the rear of above number. Failing to do so the city will remove it and charge expense against deposit put up when "use of street" permit was issued him.

THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

PAVING CARPENTER STREET.

Chicago, May 14.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Could you get some information for me when South Carpenter street, between 100th and 103d streets, will be paved? I am a resident on Carpenter street, hence my interest. H. A. H.

Carpenter street, between 100th and 103d streets, is included in a system of streets ordered to be paved with asphalt. Objections have been filed in court by some of the property owners and as soon as the case has been tried and disposed of the assessment will be confirmed and we will be ready to advertise for bids on the work. We expect that the improvement will be made this year.

EDWARD J. GLACKIN,

AMUSEMENTS.

HOOLEY'S THEATRE.

Considering the excessive moistness of last evening, Hooley's Theatre—the pet of the ladies and the admiration of the other sex,—was complimented by a fair attendance. The attraction was "The Victims," one of Tom Taylor's society dramas, which is somewhat of a novelty in Chicago, its last appearance in this city having taken place some six years ago, when the old Museum was in its glory. There is not much in the play in the way of plot, and to some minds it is all the better for that, because it does not involve much mental labor to follow its progress. Flirtations abound, but they are arranged in the usual fashion, so as to be abruptly terminated when there is an interesting probability of their becoming serious.

—The New Orleans Picayune says that advices from the sugar districts of Louisiana represent the crop as very promising.

—A nice place for a summer picnic. The snow was still so deep in Hawley, Mass., that a road had to be dug for thirty rods, 4 feet deep, May 6, to get to the burial-yard to bury a person.

—Mr. Metsel, of Baltimore, poured coal oil over sauer-kraut, mistaking it for vinegar. Then he put it on the stove to warm; then it exploded, and a piece of the dish knocked Mr. Metsel's eye out.

—The Lena (Ill.) Star says that Thomas Pollock, living two miles east of Orangeville, suffered the loss of his house, barn, and everything therein contained, except five stock, by fire on Monday night last. Loss about $12,000.

—The State police, assisted by a number of the local police, have been doing a lively business at Fall River, Mass., in the way of raids upon liquor stores. They made descents upon a large number of dealers, great and small, the whole amount seized being valued at about $3,000.

The ordinance to give to the St. Paul & Milwaukee Railway right of way into this city was last night recommitted by the Common Council to the Committee on Streets and Alleys, West Division, by a vote of 25 to 21.

Several petitions from saloon-keepers were received in the Council last evening, asking that the time for keeping open their saloons be extended to midnight. A motion to that effect was made and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

QUEEN SENDS CABLE TO HER ADMIRAL.

Madrid, May 20.—A direct message from Santiago de Cuba, announcing the arrival of Admiral Cervera's squadron, was received early last evening.

The dispatch stated the appearance of the Spanish warships created the most intense enthusiasm at Santiago.

The Spanish fleet on arriving at Santiago de Cuba found there two American warships, which retired with all speed. The Queen Regent has cabled congratulations to Admiral Cervera.

Another dispatch said the fleet arrived without accident and in splendid condition.

It is said the fleet will coal at Santiago and then proceed immediately to Havana.

There is great animation here, everybody looking for big events to happen shortly.

SAMPSON AND SCHLEY AT KEY WEST.

(Special Cable.)

Key West, Fla., May 19.—(Copyright, 1898, by W. R. Hearst.)—Admiral Sampson's fleet arrived here this afternoon quite unexpectedly.

Now both the big American squadrons are here, Commodore Schley having arrived yesterday.

Tonight a report came from Washington that Admiral Cervera and his fleet had put in at Santiago de Cuba.

Madrid dispatches state positively that the Cape Verde fleet under Admiral Cervera is at Santiago de Cuba.

There is great bustle in the fleet and evidently arrangements are being made to sail at once.

The rumor is that Schley will take the monitors and some of the smaller cruisers to keep the Spaniards out of Havana, while Sampson takes the battleships and larger cruisers to chase Cervera around the island.

It is intimated that the government has disposed of some of the ships in such a way as to guard against a surprise on the coast of the United States from the direction of Newfoundland.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE PEDESTRIANADE.

Chicago, May 14.—In THE CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE of Saturday, May 12, you have shown some details of a very practical solution for the elimination of overcrowding in the loop. The editorial, "Unstrangling the Loop," seems to be especially meritorious. The view of Madison street and McCutcheon's cartoon surely depict a most desirable arrangement for handling pedestrian traffic.

I advocated this system for a number of years and at one time prepared a number of sketches embodying the scheme as outlined, and I am certainly pleased to see that some one has taken a special interest of what seems to be a practical solution of an intolerable traffic situation.

The plan as suggested surely can be built for a fraction of the cost of a subway, and certainly should be accorded at least a trial as an emergency measure.

I would suggest the use of the term "pedestrianade" to designate this upper level sidewalk, and no doubt a reasonable effort to secure its adoption will be successful. D. LIONEL KOONTZ.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR RACE RIOTS.

Danville, Ill., May 14.—Your editorial of the 14th of May abhors the contact of the races in the black and tan resorts of Chicago as foci of infection for producing future race riots. Would it not be wise for THE TRIBUNE to consider what part THE TRIBUNE is playing in keeping inflamed racial antagonism? The best element of our colored citizens fear and abhor, most of all, scare headlines such as appeared in that issue, "Girl Stabbed by Negro on Loop Corner." What potential mob leader would hesitate long enough to read, well near the end of the story, that the man was obviously insane.

Vice is vice; white vice differs in no way from black vice. Let Mayor Dever and his chief know it is their duty to society to extirpate both. It is impossible for me but to consider your attitude inconsistent. It is THE TRIBUNE which is the firebrand in the magazine, and at any time it may explode a race riot as bad or worse than the one it aggravated in 1919. BINGA DESMOND.

CENSOR THE CENSOR.

Chicago, May 15.—Speaking of newspaper censorship, it seems to a very ardent reader of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE that a little censorship is needed for such gentlemen as A. H. Hauber, M. D., who wishes to eliminate cartoons unless in keeping with his rather stilted sense of humor. It is noted with not a little amusement and a bit of disgust that he considers the serial cartoons sometimes flat, insipid, and reflecting the cartoonist's vanity and conceit. What else but vanity and conceit when one man suggests the cartoons are flat? That is merely his opinion. Several hundred thousand people read THE TRIBUNE daily, and from this number, is it not possible that there are many who would enjoy extremely what he considers anything but humor.

It may be impossible for one man to create a humorous cartoon each day but it seems that a few well known cartoonists are doing well nigh the impossible, so let us leave them alone. If Mr. Hauber does not like them, why doesn't he keep his attention on the murder cases or the stock sheets, and let the rest of us have our simple enjoyment.

I am a personal friend of Mr. and Mrs. Gump as well as Walt and Skeezix, so hence my reply in their defense.

A VIGOROUS ASPIRANT TO "FRAT" HONORS.

Chicago, May 15.—May I suggest that "Northwestern Greasy Grind" hand his letter, which appeared in your columns today, to his English professor as one of his weekly themes. It seems a shame to waste such a masterpiece on a wall meaning but misguided child like me.

My characterizations of fraternity and non-fraternity men are the result of careful observations during the eight months I have been on the campus; observations which have made me eagerly hope that I may soon receive an invitation to join a fraternity. It is true that some fine fellows are non-fraternity men, but these are few and far apart. It is also true that some fraternity men are pretty poor specimens, but they too are not numerous. The fact is that if a fellow is reasonably attractive personally and can really do something, whether along academic, athletic or other lines, sooner or later he is almost certain to be invited into a fraternity. And with very few exceptions, the invitation is gladly accepted.

May I add one more paragraph to again express my contempt for any man who would condemn his own university on the strength of doubtful circumstantial evidence. N. U. '24.

THE TRIBUNE'S ARCHITECTURAL EXHIBIT.

Chicago, May 13.—THE TRIBUNE'S exhibit at the Art institute is certainly interesting, beautiful, educative, inspiring. It is to be hoped that it will not be withdrawn until many more thousands have come to know the exquisiteness of these wonderful designs. E. F. H.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

KUBLA KHAN.

By Samuel T. Coleridge.

In Xanadu did Kubla Khan
A stately pleasure dome decree,
Where Alph, the sacred river, ran,
Through caverns measureless to man,
Down to a sunless sea.
So twice five miles of fertile ground
With walls and towers were girdled round;
And there were gardens bright with sinuous rills,
Where blossomed many an incense bearing tree;
And here were forests ancient as the hills,
Enfolding sunny spots of greenery.
The shadow of the dome of pleasure
Floated midway on the waves,
Where was heard the mingled measure
From the fountain and the caves.
It was a miracle of rare device,
A sunny pleasure dome with caves of ice!

A damsel with a dulcimer
In a vision once I saw;
It was an Abyssinian maid,
And on her dulcimer she played,
Singing of Mount Abora.
Could I revive within me
Her symphony and song,
To such deep delight 'twould win me
That with music loud and long
I would build that dome in air—
That sunny dome! those caves of ice!
And all who heard should see them there,
And all should cry, Beware! Beware!
His flashing eyes, his floating hair!
Weave a circle 'round him thrice,
And close your eyes with holy dread,
For he on honey dew hath fed
And drunk the milk of Paradise.

$1,000 TRIBUNE MOVIE PRIZE TO GALESBURG GIRL

Miss Ora Wertman Is First in Contest.

What the maximum of neatness meets the minimum of mistakes, what happens?

In this case a young woman of Galesburg, Ill., happens to meet a check for $1,000, a reward for her cleverness and skill in winning first prize in THE TRIBUNE'S $10,000 Movie Star contest. Eight weeks of waiting — eight breathless weeks for the contestants, weeks of hard work for the judges—sailed yesterday with the announcement of the first prize winner.

Miss Ora Wertman, 316 North Broad street, Galesburg, Ill., receives THE TRIBUNE'S check for $1,000.

Out of the thousands of contributions which deluged THE TRIBUNE office the judges have chosen her pictures of actors and actresses as the one best combining the two elements of success in any contest, accuracy and neatness. Thought, painstaking carefulness, and a remarkable familiarity with the foibles of the silver sheet went into the set of pictures which Miss Wertman sent. But let her speak for herself and tell how she did it.

Trained Memory Wins.

"I've always had a splendid memory for the faces and names of screen stars," she declared, her eyes sparkling with the joy at learning of her success. "I can go to a movie and weeks afterward remember who were in the cast and tell what part each one took in unraveling the plot of the story. The movies and everything that is written about them always have been one of my chief sources of amusement."

Miss Wertman lives with her widowed mother, Mrs. F. L. Wertman. Her father was president of the First National bank of Galesburg.

As a student in the local high school and later at Knox college, she was known for her high standing in her classes. She is a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority. Surpassing all her other interests, even her enthusiasm for the screen, is her devotion to her mother.

Over 70,000 Persons Tried.

It is no easy job to select the winners of these prizes, for more than 70,000 persons took part.

Take 70,000, multiply it by three and then by twelve, as the pictures appeared in sets of three in twelve issues of THE TRIBUNE Coloroto, and you have the number of individual pictures which have to be scrutinized—2,000,000 in all, a picture for nearly every resident of Chicago.

From every state in the Union entries were sent. Several fine sets came from Canada. Florida contributed, as did California. Boston had its aspirant as well as Portland, Ore. Everywhere THE TRIBUNE is read some one was found who had the wit and patience to try.

Accuracy and neatness have been the two tests by which the judges selected the winners—accuracy first and then neatness.

In the selection of Miss Wertman's set of pictures every one of the 70,000 sets submitted was gone over with these two qualifications in mind. For the sake of fairness, the names of the contestants were covered up before the pictures were submitted to the judges.

First Judging Was Easy.

The first big elimination was easy, though it didn't thin down the stack of pictures nearly as much as the judges had hoped it would. This was the preliminary accuracy test. Any one who couldn't fit together Charlie Chaplin or Doug Fairbanks didn't deserve to win, and if some uncultured person was so out of touch with things modern as not to know that Mary Pickford's nose didn't belong between Mary Miles Minter's forehead and Bebe Daniels' chin, the judges thought they ought to see a few good movies before trying to solve puzzle contests.

The next dividing line between the sheep and the goats, a very self-evident line on which there couldn't be any mistake, was that of neatness. A little smear of paste ordinarily doesn't mean very much, but when it's on the edge of a puzzle picture that's trying to impress a bunch of keen eyed judges, it looks like a whole pottful.

It wasn't a fancy set which took the judges' eye so much as just plain tidiness, the kind teachers have drilled into Johnny and Mary since schools first discouraged the universal desire to play in the mud. Miss Wertman's entry, for example, wasn't nearly as ostentatious as some of the others. But for an example of carefulness and precision her set was supreme. It showed hours and days of patient work. The pictures were cut out so neatly and pasted together again so carefully that the dividing lines scarcely showed.

Two dozen sets stand out next to hers. This week the judges will center all their efforts on those pictures to choose the winner of the second prize.

And after the second prize will come the third and fourth prizes and the host of others. There are still 1,326 prizes to be announced. There still is $9,000 to be divided.

(The second prize winner will be announced next Sunday.)

WINS $1,000

Miss Ora Wertman of Galesburg, Ill., who was first in the test of skill in naming thirty-six movie stars in Tribune Coloroto section.

CLEOPATRA OUT OF MOVIE LUCK, DIRECTORS SAY

Palace of Progress Gets Under Way.

If Cleopatra's nose had been a quarter of an inch longer, the history of the world might have been changed. But if she'd taken her profile, as it was, into the movies, Antony would have preferred war to a seat on the aisle during seven reels.

For the motion picture camera is more relentless than a catty woman, according to moving picture producers met yesterday at the opening session of the Motion Picture Palace of Progress at the Coliseum.

Chicago's potential cinema stars, men and women, will face facts when they try out for the movies at the Film Booking offices, which have a booth at the exhibit.

Curls and Sideburns.

Hundreds of girls, whose Mary Pickford curls make them useless for doing the family dishes, and scores of men, with side-burns and a map of Hollywood, thronged the booth last night.

Louis Kramer, casting director in charge of selecting the motion picture types, told them a few truths.

"Your gentleman friend," Mr. Kramer explained, "may call you a silver screen star and pay no attention to the insignificant hook on your nose. But before you pack your grip for a 'location,' imagine your face twelve times as high and sixteen times as wide. Then look in the mirror, and if you can smile at your reflection, you'll be a heroine."

Green Eyes Taboo.

Green eyes, according to the judge, have no place on the screen. They aren't dependable. Blue eyes and orbs of coffee brown are safe, sure, and always on the job.

At a meeting at the Sherman house of the directors of the Motion Picture Theater Owners' associations, a protest was launched against any national censorship.

As Capt. William Deneau, professional diver, was about to give a demonstration of deep sea movies in a large tank the water pressure caved out the sides of the glass tank and six movie fans became mermaids for the time being. Nobody was injured and the tank will be ready for tomorrow night's performance.

DIVORCE LEAGUE FROM POLITICS, IS CLERIC'S PLEA

Presbyterians Delay Vote on Resolution.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 19.—[Special.]—An attempt to separate the question of the league of nations and the world court from partisan politics was made this morning at the Presbyterian general assembly when the committee on international relationships reported through its chairman, Dr. W. P. Merrill, New York, formerly a pastor in Chicago.

Senator Borah was characterized as a man who could be quoted on both sides of most all questions. President Harding was described as one who would be largely governed by what he thought was the will of the people, and, therefore, subject to appeals from the churches.

Resolution Is Delayed.

The resolution covering the point of separating the league from partisan politics was presented by Dr. Minot C. Morgan of Detroit, following the speech by Dr. Merrill. The resolution was referred finally to the committee on bills and overtures, and will come up at a later session for discussion.

The resolution, omitting the arguments in favor of abolishing war, declared "We favor a complete divorcement of the league of nations from party politics by a national referendum under act of congress on substantially this question, namely, 'Shall the United States join the league of nations under such reservations or amendments to the covenant of the league as the United States senate with the approval of the President may agree upon?'

"We therefore, urge the League of Nations Nonpartisan association and all peace societies of the United States referendum so that each individual elector may vote his convictions free from all other questions and free from individual candidacies."

Takes Fling at Senate.

"Senator Borah," said Dr. Merrill, in his address, "wants the court with no force back of it except enlightened public opinion. I don't know any place where an enlightened opinion is more needed than in the United States senate.

Dr. Adolph Keller of Zurich, Switzerland, who spoke on the need of help for the Evangelical churches of Europe, said: "The silence of the United States is terrible."

Bryan to Speak.

William Jennings Bryan will speak at a massmeeting tomorrow afternoon on "Prohibition and Patriotism." Action on the overtures on the Fosdick situation it is expected, will be taken on Monday or Tuesday. At that time Mr. Bryan and his followers among the so-called fundamentalists are expected to unlimber their big guns.

The address made last evening by Dr. Charles F. Wishart, moderator of the general assembly, at the educational anniversary, was considered by many as a challenge on Dr. Wishart's part to Mr. Bryan in his attitude towards the teaching of evolution.

"A teacher of science must face the facts," Dr. Wishart said. "The scientists do not make the facts and it is useless to turn from them. A scientist may make wrong inferences in regard to the facts but we believe that a steady facing of the facts will not destroy, but will establish christianity.

"The Anti-Blue Law League of America is down and out, thank God," declared the Rev. R. L. Bowlby, national secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance and a member of the general assembly committee on Sabbath observance."

Police and Rock Island Sift Cause of Derailment

Investigation was under way by railroad officials and the police department yesterday to determine the cause and fix the blame, if any, for the derailing of the "bankers' special" of the Rock Island lines early Friday at 88th street and Vincennes avenue while inbound with commuters from Joliet. A final report, it was thought, will indicate the derailment was caused by a defective block signal. Twenty passengers were injured, none seriously.

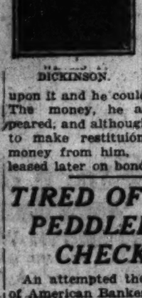
SECURITY TRUST HEAD SEIZED AS $7,000 VANISHES

Wills P. Dickinson, head of the Security Trust and Deposit company in the Capitol building, was arrested yesterday on a warrant charging him with larceny. The warrant was obtained by Joseph Levy, a boxing promoter, of 904 South Wabash avenue, who charges he deposited $7,000 in a safety deposit box in the vaults of the company. When he went to open it, he alleges, a new lock had been placed upon it and he could not open the box. The money, he asserts, had disappeared, and although Dickinson agreed to make restitution, he received no money from him. Dickinson was released later on bonds of $11,500.



DICKINSON.

TIRED OF BEING PEDDLER, STEALS CHECK; JAILED

An attempted theft of $1,000 worth of American Bankers traveling checks from the Mechanics' and Traders' State bank, Washington boulevard and Desplaines streets, was frustrated yesterday by three policemen from the Desplaines street station.

According to August B. Waltersaussen, cashier of the bank, Peter Drovales of 1052 West Harrison street ordered the checks on Friday. When he called for them, he ran off without paying.

The cashier notified Policemen Touhey, Kubat and Devereaux of the Desplaines street station, who captured Droveles near Madison street. At the station Droveles confessed he intended to steal the checks, sell them, and from the proceeds buy a fruit store. "I am tired of being a peddler," he said.

She failed to return home last night after going to a picture show and her mother, hurrying out this morning to find her, saw a crowd around the barn and recognized her daughter.

SEEK BONDS FOR GUNMAN HELD IN SMALL JURY QUIZ

Following an all day effort to obtain bonds for him, "Big Dave" Earsman, held in Lake county in connection with the alleged $mall jury bribery, was still in jail at Waukegan last night. Arrangements for his release had been made in the afternoon. When bondsmen who were to have come forward failed him, his attorney, O. J. C. Wray, started at nightfall for Fox Lake, where, he stated, he expected to find some one to put up the necessary $5,000 schedule.

Earsman was secretly arrested in Chicago two weeks ago on charges similar to those placed against Eddie Courtney and Eddie Kaufman, gunmen and alleged jury bribers. He was held in the Zion jail but removed from there to the county jail at Waukegan Friday, when State's Attorney A. V. Smith received information that Chicago gunmen were planning to obtain his release by force.

MOSES APPEALS TO HARDING FOR ELECTION HELP

Asks Him to Enter Fight in Minnesota.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 19.—[Special.]—President Harding was urged by Senator Moses [Rep., N. H.], chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, to take a hand in the Minnesota political contest to help a regular Republican to succeed the late Senator Knute Nelson, who died several weeks ago.

Party leaders are fearful that another radical of the type of Senator Henrik Shipstead, who was elected in Minnesota last fall as a Farmer-Labor candidate over former Senator Frank B. Kellogg, and the Democratic nominee, Mrs. Anna D. Olesen, is likely to be chosen in the special election this year.

Moses and Harding Confer.

Senator Moses spent an hour and a half with the President today, a large part of which was devoted to emphasizing the need of the full strength of the national administration in the Minnesota campaign.

Senator Moses suggested that on the presidential trip to Alaska the chief executive might pass through Minnesota and make at least one speech in that state for the Republican nominee, for the President replied that his itinerary has been made up and is immovable.

It may be, however, that the President will send either a personal representative to Minnesota to campaign for the nominee or address a letter to an influential Republican of that state.

Differ on League Issue.

Senator Moses, who, as an irreconcilable in the Versailles treaty and league of nations fights, is in violent disagreement with the President in his advocacy of American participation in the world court, said that matter was referred to today only cursorily.

Howard Everett, chairman of the Democratic state committee of Minnesota, has called a meeting to make campaign plans, and it is believed that an effort will be made to work out a coalition between the Democrats and the Farmer-Labor party so that the candidate selected will be mutually acceptable to the two parties.

Father Denied Custody of Girl, 11; Stepfather Wins

Princeton, Ind., May 19.—[Special.]—The petition of a father for custody of his 11 year old daughter who did not know her father and was not recognized by him when both entered the courtroom today, was denied by Judge R. C. Balthell, who ruled that the welfare of the girl, carefully reared by a stepfather, was more important than the natural rights of the father.

The daughter, Viola Hughes, will continue to live with her stepfather, Elmo Hale, and his family. Hughes and his wife were divorced when Viola was six months old. Mrs. Hughes married Hale, but died last winter.

MAUDE ADAMS.

New York, May 19.—[Special.]—Maude Adams, beloved of theatergoers the country over, is about to come forth from the "never never land" and take her place again as "America's ideal actress." Her friends say that since her return from England recently, where she visited Sir James Barrie, she had abandoned her intention to remain in private life and will appear here in the autumn in three of Barrie's plays.

Her first appearance, according to friends, will be in the Barrie play "What Every Woman Knows," After that she will revive "The Little Minister" and then "Peter Pan."

BRITAIN TO GIVE RUM SHIP RULE A FAIR CHANCE

Washington, D. C., May 19.—Sir Auckland Geddes, the British ambassador, has been given complete discretionary authority by his government to deal with complications arising from the decisions of the Supreme court denying foreign shipping the right to bring liquor into American waters.

There is no disposition on the part of the ambassador to question the soundness of the decision, and it is said British liners will comply with United States regulations. The British disposition is to give the regulations a fair test.

The French, Italian, Spanish and other governments are under greater pressure to secure relief from the ruling, in view of their domestic law requiring vessels to carry and issue wine rations. But they also refrained from filing formal protest.

French Line Has Taken No Action Yet on Dry Sea

PARIS, May 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—The French line has taken no decision thus far in regard to the observance of the United States Supreme court ruling preventing transportation of liquor within American territorial waters, it was stated today by O. J. Dal Piaz, president of the company.

PARIS LANDLORD SLAYS TENANT IN ROW OVER RENT

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, May 19.—Maurice Renard, landlord of an apartment building at 17 Avenue President Wilson, engaged in his usual rent argument with his tenant this afternoon. The tenant died of a fractured cranium from the landlord's fist after ten minutes of argument.

The tenant, Louis Verbrugga, had haled the landlord into court for making a sudden illegal advance in the rent. After an hour's hearing by court the difference was not settled. The parties stepped outside together and engaged in a discussion on the steps of the court house.

The short bout of fisticuffs ended in the tragedy, the tenant dying on the way to hospital. The landlord was jailed on a charge of murder.

SOCIALISTS URGE TAFT BE OUSTED; DENOUNCE SOVIET

Party Opens Convention; Split on Policy.

New York, May 19.—A demand for the impeachment of William H. Taft, chief justice of the United States, for accepting an alleged annuity of $10,000 from the Carnegie corporation and an attack on the Lenine and Trotzky brand of Russian communism by Alexander Cahan, editor of the Jewish Daily Forward, featured the opening of the national convention of the Socialist party today.

Mr. Cahan declared in an address that Trotzky was a "big bombastic windbag," but he believed he was sincere, and that Lenine's physical breakdown was due, in great part, to his moral incapacity.

The resolution aimed at Chief Justice Taft was adopted unanimously, but none of the delegates expressed views on the subject.

Ask Union Assistance.

The committee on resolutions was instructed to obtain coöperation of trades unions and other bodies in making the demand for Mr. Taft's impeachment nation wide in its scope.

Algernon Lee, former New York alderman, was elected chairman for the first day.

Mr. Cahan in his address said the Russian communists were more than two-thirds "fakers and grafters" and it was time for the American Socialists to stop temporizing with the Russian soviet. Socialism had just as good a chance to grow in this country as it had in England, he asserted, if the leaders here would go about their work of rebuilding in the right way and "sidetrack their attempts to evolve 'highfalutin' phrasemongery."

Split on Policy.

Two motions, bearing on instructions to be given delegates of the socialist party of the United States to the world congress to be held at Hamburg, were referred to the committee on resolutions after a strenuous debate.

The first motion proposed instructing the delegates to vote in favor of the proposed union of socialist and trade union forces of the world.

The second provided that the delegates should be told to support the reunion of socialist forces in one international under certain conditions.

James Oneal of New York spoke in favor of both motions but Mayor Hoan of Milwaukee opposed them, asserting that American socialists should stand aloof from international labor and socialist complications until it could present a thoroughly organized party in this country.

LOUISVILLE CALL ASKS FOR ARREST OF AUTO THIEF

Sergt. Michael Vaughn of the automobile detail was asked by long distance telephone from Louisville, Ky., yesterday to search for Robert E. Lee, an alleged automobile thief, who according to Fred Parker, 3637 Driving Park boulevard, stole his automobile from in front of his home and is believed to be on the way to Dubuque. Lee recently was arrested in New Orleans with a Miss Elizabeth Bauer and brought back to Chicago to answer charges of stealing an automobile. Miss Bauer was discharged and Lee was indicted.

Woman, 70, Burns to Death Playing with Matches

Mrs. Wilhelmina Mau, 70 years old, of 9729 Escanaba avenue, whose faculties were impaired, sat in a rocking chair on Friday playing with some matches. Suddenly her dress caught fire and before the flames could be put out she had been severely burned. Mrs. Mau died yesterday from her injuries.

PLEAS AND BRIBE OFFERS FAIL TO SAVE CAR DRIVER

Auto victim No. 247 on Cook county's list of motor fatalities since Jan. 1 is another child.

Christie Marinois, 7 years old, of 3606 Walton street, was killed yesterday when struck by a motor truck at Rockwell and Walton streets, a few steps from his home.

The boy, according to Morris Knell of 1245 North Irving avenue, driver of the truck, was playing tag in the street and ran directly into the path of the big machine, which is owned by the Daisy Bottling works, 4040 West Roosevelt road. Knell is being held by the West North avenue police.

CHRISTIE MARINOIS. [Seebold Photo.]

Offers of bribes, the intercession of three prominent lawyers, and the pleas of two county probation officers failed yesterday to save Leo Skora of 4193 Archer avenue from a sixty day jail sentence and $200 fine imposed upon him by Judge Henry N. Walker.

The judge, in finding the man guilty of driving an automobile while intoxicated, pointed out that Cook county's roster of 247 victims of careless, reckless, and drunken motorists since Jan. 1 had been built largely upon the sentiment which "frees the potential killer on a minor charge to kill another day."

Skora, the father of two children, will probably be taken to the Pontiac reformatory to complete a five year term for burglary. The offense for which he was punished yesterday comprises his third violation of parole, according to the probation officers.

Judge Bares Bribe Offers.

"That, perhaps, explains the unusual efforts made in his behalf," said Judge Walker, who refused to name the persons who approached him. Officials of the Munger Laundry company, Skora's employers, are known to have interceded for him.

"I have been asked to put the man on probation by two probation officers. Several persons have offered me thousands of dollars to release him, because he is the father of two children.

"In justice to every pedestrian, as well as to the law abiding citizen who would no sooner mix booze with gasoline than murder a fellow citizen, I am compelled to send this man to jail.

"Sarcasm Saves No Lives."

"I will contribute $50 for the support of his family while he is gone if these misguided persons who cry 'Injustice' will do likewise.

"Light fines and sarcasm from the bench will never save a life, and the drunken, careless speeder with sufficient influence goes on his way to kill another day.

"For forty-eight hours there wasn't a single death from automobile accidents in Chicago, a most unusual thing just now, but it could as well be the rule if magistrates would force the reckless driver to consider his offense in a jail cell after taking a smashing blow at his most vulnerable point, the pocketbook."

The Day's Roster of Death.

Besides the Marinois child, three others died during the day as a result of auto accidents.

Carl Marshadt, 8 years old, 3219 West 51st street, died in Washington Park hospital from injuries received when he was struck by an automobile driven by A. Strachow, 2709 West 63d street. Strachow was not held.

Injuries sustained on May 3 caused the death of Louis Benjamin, 1618 Clifton Park avenue, at the Chicago hospital.

Agnes Poditz, 3 years old, of 3658 Wentworth avenue, died of injuries received May 17 when she was felled by an automobile while in front of 3946 South Wells street with her mother. The police are searching for the driver.

MARTIN'S

100% PURE

MUCH has been written of the cabinet makers and varnish manufacturers of the period of Louis XV and the remarkable varnishes and finishes they used. We have today examples of the craft of that period and in many cases the varnish is in as good condition as it was when applied in the eighteenth century.

That varnish was simply a copy of the wonderful old Lacquers of Japan, and those who made these cabinet finishes used painstaking care in the preparation of the highest grade materials known. In the shops of Martin Varnish Company we find the same principles in vogue.

Into Martin's 100% Pure Varnishes are combined only the best materials obtainable. Pure Vegetable Oils, Fossil Gums and Turpentine are used—no adulterants of any nature. Recommended for finest finishing.

NEW JOBS LURK IN RECESSES OF OMNIBUS BILL

House Members Find Jokers in Measure.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., May 19.—[Special.]—The $18,890,000 omnibus bill is Sunday reading matter for members of the Illinois legislature.

"This bill, which makes a pretense of holding department appropriations to the 1921 level, is adroitly drawn," said one representative who spent the day digging through the items. "I already have found ninety new jobs buried in it. We may find more before Tuesday. At any rate, it shows that economy is not being practiced on the pay rolls."

An explanation of these increases will be demanded on the floor of the house Tuesday, leaders of the bipartisan combine declare. Minority Leader Devine spent the week-end in Springfield to study the omnibus bill. Representative Homer J. Tice [Rep., Menard] delayed his return to Green View to talk the bill over with some of his colleagues who want to know what is in it.

Bill Appeared Last Week.

The omnibus bill was offered at adjournment time last week. The bill was printed, but, unlike all other bills, its distribution was seen to by Chairman Smejkal of the appropriations committee, instead of B. H. McCann, clerk of the house. The bill was nearly a week old before those who were not on the inside knew what it contained.

The welfare department appropriation alone of all the administrative code offices is not in the omnibus bill. This department was carried in the $20,400,000 fund for the penal and charitable institutions. Charges were made today that the welfare bill creates forty new jobs, including twenty-five new parole officers. Associating this with the rumors of pardon scandals in connection with votes to sustain the veto of Attorney General Brundage's appropriation, one man asked:

"Are they going to turn so many loose, that it requires twenty-five more agents to watch them?"

It was the quiet manner in which the welfare appropriation was slipped over that has angered many legislators.

House May Get Gateway.

If the omnibus is out of the way in time Chairman Castle [Rep., Barrington] of the judiciary committee expects to ask for a roll call on the gateway amendment resolution.

Representative Tice, leader of the farm bloc, said today that he expects to make no attack on the gateway, but will confine his opposition to a vote against the resolutions.

The resolution provides for amending three articles of the constitution at a time. More than one article may be amended in a single proposition also. The legislative vote required for adoption remains at two-thirds of both houses, but under the resolution amendments may be approved by 55 per cent of the voters.

With the omnibus and the gateway both set for the same day, the showdown on prohibition demanded by Representative Igoe [Dem., Chicago] likely will be postponed.

Road Bill in Senate.

The $100,000,000 road bill, blocked by a parliamentary rule Thursday, is the big thing in the senate this week.

Legislative observers, in comparing the roll calls in the veto fight last Tuesday with the vote on the Brundage appropriation when it passed the house March 20 disclosed that twenty-seven representatives who approved the appropriation in the first place switched their votes to support Gov. Small on the veto. These included seventeen Republicans, nine Democrats, and one independent. On the other hand there were no changes from Small to Brundage.

FOCH RETURNS FROM POLAND; GIVEN WINE 271 YEARS OLD

MARSHAL FOCH

PARIS, May 19.—Marshal Foch returned today from his triumphal tour of Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. He was laden with gifts and souvenirs ranging from a bottle of wine of the vintage of 1652 to a portfolio filled with honorary diplomas from various Polish universities and institutions.

He especially prizes a pair of socks knitted by an 80 year old woman who insisted on making a personal presentation. Her reward was a hug and a kiss.

Among the other gifts were an obelisk of coal from Silesian miners and several rugs woven by Polish peasants.

1924 GOVERNOR'S HANDICAP RACERS BUSY IN ILLINOIS

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

Springfield, Ill., May 19.—[Special.]—Gossip of the 1924 state campaign is increasing daily as the legislature enters its final stage. By the time the general assembly adjourns sine die, about June 30, political lighting rods will be up in all corners of the state.

As a side issue the undercurrent against the direct primary is growing stronger, party leaders report. They are beginning to see a repeal of the primary law in the distance. This sentiment seems especially strong in the country districts.

"If you don't think the people are sick and disgusted with the manner in which the primary system has worked out you should sit around some of our country stores a few evenings," said a leading downstater.

Pay Your Money and T. Y. C.

The list of possible starters in the Republican gubernatorial race begins to resemble the winter book for a Kentucky Derby. It is just as long and the odds are just as variable.

Here are some of the possibilities mentioned in the early talk in Springfield:

Gov. Small, Attorney General Brundage, Secretary of State Emmerson, State Auditor Russel, Superintendent of Public Instruction Francis G. Blair, Frank L. Smith, chairman of the Illinois commerce commission; John H. Harrison, Danville publisher; S. S. Tanner of Minier, member of the Republican state committee; Henry R. Rathbone, new congressman at large; former Congressman William Rodenberg of East St. Louis; Senator Otis F. Glenn of Jackson county; Senator Thurlow G. Essington of La Salle county; Senator John Dailey of Peoria; Speaker Shanahan; Judge Edward N. Shurtleff, former speaker and G. O. P. leader in the house; Congressman and former Gov. Richard Yates and former Lieut. Gov. John G. Oglesby, who made the race in 1920.

Democrats Are in Offing.

In the Democratic camp Chief Justice Floyd E. Thompson of the Supreme court, Circuit Judge Norman L. Jones of Carrollton, Minority Leader John P. Devine of Lee county and Representative M. L. Igoe of Chicago are most frequently in the limelight. Mr. Igoe also figures as a possible candidate for state's attorney of Cook county

MAN SHE LOVES WON'T TAKE HER TO DERBY; POISON

Because the man she loved wouldn't take her to the Kentucky Derby, Miss Irene Mead, 27 years old, 4346 Lake Park avenue, wanted to die. While the crowds at Churchill Downs were thrilling over the outcome of the race, doctors were anxiously waiting the outcome of her attempted suicide at Wesley Memorial hospital.

Early yesterday Miss Mead was driving in a taxicab with her sister, Mrs. Grace Adams, of the same address, and two other women when she took from her bag some tablets and swallowed them as she was chatting and drinking ginger ale in front of a drug store at 35th street and Grand boulevard. In a few minutes she fell from her seat unconscious and was hurried to the hospital.

"Irene has been in love with this man for some time—he seems a perfect sheik to her," declared Mrs. Adams, "although he is nearly forty fat, bald, unromantic and married. It was about a week ago that they were planning to go to the Derby together, and on Wednesday he told her he had changed his mind and could not take her. Of course they quarreled. Once before she tried to take her life on account of him."

EX-LOGAN TRUST AID GETS PRISON IN $50,000 THEFT

JOSEPH KAPLAN.

Joseph Kaplan, former assistant paying teller in the Logan Square Trust and Savings bank, was sentenced to from one to ten years in the penitentiary yesterday by Judge Oscar Hebel for his connection with the theft of $50,000 from a messenger for the bank last December. Kaplan was charged with assisting four men who already have been sentenced for the robbery. His term was lightened when he turned state's evidence and assisted in the conviction of the others.

UNIQUE MENU MARKS BANQUET OF HOTEL CHEFS

Uniqueness in menu was one of the features of the dinner dance given Friday night by Loyal Craft, the association of Chicago executive chefs. Hotel men, members of the association and their wives attended.

The meat course was chosen by A. N. Negri, catering manager of the Webster hotel, and consisted of a breast of a bird especially prepared and placed inside of a cocoanut shell with garnishings. It was brought to the table whole.

Among those who spoke were Harry Mauer, toastmaster; Robert Foially, Albert Stalle and Mr. Negri. The latter is the founder and organizer of the association.

$50,000 SAVED TO CREDITORS IN GOLDMAN CASES

Prompt investigation of defunct properties surrendered several days ago by Jacob Goldman, professional Circuit court receiver, resulted in a saving of $50,000 to creditors and stockholders of bankrupt concerns, the mismanagement of which by Goldman is said to have caused a $300,000 loss, according to Judge Kickham Scanlan.

Although Michael Feinberg, counsel for the executive committee of the Circuit court, refused to disclose the hiding place of the fund, it is believed it is represented by advanced and unearned fees which will be demanded from the attorneys summoned for questioning Monday morning.

"We intend to squeeze every cent possible out of the receiverships previously assigned to Goldman," declared Mr. Feinberg, "and if we can't make up the shortage we can at least decrease the liability of the surety companies."

WHEN you get behind the wheel of the new Apperson Six or the Apperson Eight and shift gears without taking the hand from the wheel you will appreciate the advancement Apperson has made in adopting the C-H Mechanical Gear-Shift as standard equipment on all Apperson cars.

You can not "clash" gears on an Apperson. The operation is quick and effortless. Merely push the selector on the steering wheel into speed desired, throw out the clutch and the gears are shifted mechanically.

Five minutes in traffic or on the road will convince you that Apperson is truly the most easily handled, safest car built today.

There are other features—the permanent top is the finest on any car; the emergency brake operates from the instrument board; there are no levers in the driver's compartment; the upholstering is built into the car and has the ease and comfort of a big Morris chair; squeaks and rattles, the little things which irritate you, have been practically eliminated and there is nothing in the way of equipment for you to buy.

Finely engineered, conscientiously built, completely equipped and undeniably beautiful, the new Apperson Six at $1535 and the famous Eight at $2800 (at the factory) make no concessions to any car in their respective classes.

You will enjoy driving the Apperson—come to the salesroom or phone for an appointment.

SWISS SNARL RIGHT BACK AT RUSSIAN BEAR

Take Only Two Hours to Reply to Soviet.

BY RAYMOND FENDRICK.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LAUSANNE, May 19.—Switzerland launched a sizzling reply to Russia this morning two hours after M. Tchitcherin's blistering notes on the assassination of M. Vorovsky reached Berne, and the Allied delegates to the peace conference at Lausanne.

The abnormal, ambiguous situation created by the refusal to visa the Russian diplomatic courier, created an atmosphere which facilitated the crime," M. Tchitcherin wrote in the name of the soviet government to the Allied delegates. "Part of the responsibility for this atrocious crime must fall on the powers, who did nothing to prevent it."

He also complained of the attitude of the conference toward the Russian delegation, declaring Russia meant to participate in the conference until an agreement had been reached on the Straits regime.

Send Note Home.

The Allied delegates forwarded the note to their governments, who will decide whether it requires a reply. The Allied position here is that as the Allies and themselves have reached an agreement on the straits there is no need for further negotiations.

In his note to the Swiss government M. Tchitcherin demanded a severe penalty for Alexandre Conrady, the assassin, and any accomplices, threatening reprisals on Swiss citizens in Russia.

Give Lie to Soviet Claim.

Not terrified by M. Tchitcherin's threats, the Swiss government, in its reply, gave the lie to the Soviet claim that M. Vorowsky had a diplomatic status and was participating in the conference. It added that M. Vorowsky had been given full opportunity to leave the country a week before his assassination.

BEATINGS LAID TO RICH SURGEON BY WIFE IN SUIT

Five instances of mental and physical abuse alleged to have been practiced upon her by Dr. Marcus S. Oliver, wealthy surgeon with offices at 7 East Washington street, are cited by Mrs. Nan L. Oliver in a bill for divorce filed yesterday in the Circuit court.

Seven years of happiness after their marriage on June 24, 1911, ended on Sept. 1, 1918, according to Mrs. Oliver, when the doctor "struck, beat, and choked" her. On three other occasions, she says, the beatings were accompanied with a "distressing use of vile and profane language."

BULGARIA GIVES REDS CHANCE TO HAVE OWN RULE

Peasant Parliament Enacts Remarkable Law.

Through the courtesy of the MacDonald Engineering company, 53 West Jackson boulevard, THE TRIBUNE is able to present here following the translated text of a recent law passed by the peasant parliament of Bulgaria which deserves the attention of the entire world.

THE TRIBUNE briefly described the intent of this law in a dispatch from Sofia, but an examination of the text shows the deliberate extent to which the Bulgarian government has gone to give every communist in Bulgaria a chance to adopt a communistic government all his own with other communistic comrades.

The Law.

The law reads:

"Article 1. In every Bulgarian village where there are ten or more electors who are communists there shall be established a commune whereby all the movable and immovable properties belonging to those who profess communism or belong to the communistic party shall be confiscated for their common use.

"Art. 2. The confiscation of the live stock, houses, lands, furniture and implements shall be carried out by local village committees, known as land distribution commissions, according to a previous Bulgarian law of land reforms from 1921.

"Art. 3. These communes will be governed by local soviet authorities, consisting of one representative of the municipality of the village, one representative of the government and those elected by the communists, whereby there shall be no distinction between men, women and children.

Limit to Extent.

"Art. 4. The properties, etc., to be confiscated are confined only to those belonging to the communists, and the communes shall consist only of the families whose properties have been confiscated and those professing communism. In the event certain sons, brothers or other members of a family belong to the comunistic party then all properties, etc., which they would inherit under the law will be given to the commune.

"Art. 5. All the members of the communes shall live on equal terms and conditions as arranged by the soviet authority. They shall work during certain fixed hours, in groups and under command, and shall get their food and clothing and all necessities only by coupons from the stores of the commune. Whoever shall abuse the use of the material properties of the commune and should eat or conduct himself otherwise than laid down by the commune authority for the other members of the commune shall be shot publicly.

"Art. 6. The present law will be enacted and applied according to the rules of a by-law with full details in which the principle methods would be those laid down at present in practice in Russia, and shall be carried out exactly in a similar manner. The application of this law shall commence six months after the present bill is passed through the parliament and enacted as a law. Meantime there must be prepared full lists of the communists and their properties in every village."

WIFE WHO LEFT MATE NOW AIDS HIS LOVE SUIT

For "thirty pieces of silver" Mrs. Ellen Netterville betrayed her former husband, Frank Allgood, a machinery manufacturer, and sacrificed four children for illicit love, according to her affidavit filed yesterday by Attorney Lloyd A. Faxon, counsel for Allgood, who seeks $25,000 damages from one of two "other men" in her life.

MRS. ALLGOOD-NETTERVILLE.

In a preliminary hearing of Allgood's suit before Judge Francis S. Wilson yesterday, it was charged that more than ten years ago, the then Mrs. Allgood deserted her family for an apartment furnished by William Holtz, a wealthy merchant, living at 3139 West 38th street. Holtz is defendant in Allgood's suit.

Holtz, according to the woman's affidavit, tired of his bargain to give Mrs. Allgood $30 weekly in addition to credit at his stores and she accepted the attention of William Netterville, who she married without the formality of a divorce from Allgood. Later Netterville and Mrs. Allgood were put on probation, and Allgood obtained a divorce.

Girl, 17, Kills Self When Her Pet Canary Dies

Rock Island, Ill., May 19.—When Miss Bertha Van Develde, 17, found her pet canary dead in its cage, she addressed a note to her father saying that the loss of the bird was more than she could endure. Her body was found in an abandoned well on her father's farm.

ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN DRUGS RUNS ALLIED CORDON

Germans Blame Ring of Officers.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

FRANKFURT, May 19.—The alarming growth of smuggling in and from Germany is chiefly due to the presence of the armies of occupation and division of control of the frontier, according to high state and local police officials of this neighborhood.

They charge that individuals and groups of officers, as well as men in the French and Belgian services, are working with German agents for the illegal traffic of almost every conceivable contraband, including beaten gold, pure spirits, and drugs such as morphine and cocaine.

Not until the occupational forces retire can anything like normal law and order be reëstablished and smuggling suppressed, they tell THE TRIBUNE, which is investigating the channels of the drug traffic from Germany to America.

Says Germans Would Check It.

One official in charge of the department against import and export smuggling said with the confusion of French and Belgian officers smuggling is succeeding on such a colossal scale that high commands are a party to smuggling, but he pointed out that the authority of some officers is sufficient to cover up the illegal traffic and silence German protests when discoveries are made.

He charged that a clique of Belgian officers are working with a Brussels firm of smugglers, so as shipments come and go across the frontier railway carriages, automobiles, trucks and misdirected military authority defeat honest officials. He said individuals in every occupational army are guilty of fostering smuggling, including some Americans, whom the Germans know worked on a modest scale when they were at Coblenz.

This official cited an instance of a Polish woman, the wife of a Belgian officer, who was chiefly concerned with the shipment of pure spirits to Germany. She is young and fascinating and usually crosses the frontier in an automobile where she has secret connections, and by bribing German customs men she obtains a safe passage. It is believed that on her return journeys she specialized in drugs.

Troops Smuggle Drugs.

THE TRIBUNE'S informant said soldiers generally keep to cocaine smuggling, because the small packages are easy to carry to Paris and Brussels.

This petty smuggling goes on, he said, all along the frontier and he added it would be impossible for the high allied command to suppress it.

Blames Allies' Demands.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DARMSTADT, May 19. — [Tribune Radio.]—The only conceivable source for the illegitimate cocaine traffic from reputable German factories is the reparations demand of 25 per cent of their output, according to Dr. Hecht, director of the great Merck chemical works here. He said that shipments of drugs in lieu of reparations to some of the allied countries, particularly Greece, were suspicious, but otherwise there can be no appreciable leak from the manufacturer direct.

Dr. Hecht warned, however, that much of the cocaine found around the world, labeled made in Germany, was false. Other authorities, including high police officials in the neighborhood, on the contrary, believe that much of the cocaine is stolen and sold to the smugglers by workmen in these factories. The police assert that synthetic cocaine is being produced and shipped to foreign countries.

Opens His Books.

THE TRIBUNE correspondent, in an attempt to explore the channels of the extensive cocaine smuggling, visited the Merck works. Dr. Hecht opened all the doors of his plant and invited inspection of the company's books to prove that the manufacturers were doing their utmost to prevent illegal traffic. He said that the smuggling was a swindle not only beyond the control of the legitimate maker, but was difficult for the maker to comprehend, because of reports of greater amounts being handled than were actually produced by the group of firms of which Merck stands at the head.

Disagreeing with the police officials, he did not believe that much German cocaine was involved in the smuggling trade.

Claims Labels Faked.

"We are certain of one thing," Dr. Hecht said, "and that is that smugglers put Merck labels on their wares. We have a special department for the investigation and prosecution of cases of falsification. Recently we discovered that a Darmstadt printer had forged 3,000,000 Merck cocaine labels and shipped them to China, where they were put on bottles containing Japanese cocaine."

He escorted THE TRIBUNE correspondent through the great laboratories where 4,000 workmen, including 1,000 chemists, are employed, and he revealed the extensive system to prevent thefts of cocaine.

"Not a gram of cocaine can go astray here without our knowing it," he said. "The company's books list the orders under the factory numbers, so that any bottle or tin of Merck cocaine, wherever picked up in the world, can be traced to the buyer from the factory."

HEYWORTH SHEDS 'ARTISTIC' ROLE AND TAKES A JOB

Denial of desertion charges preferred against him by his actress wife, Mrs. Helen Marie Patterson Heyworth, in her bill for divorce, was filed yesterday by Otto Young Heyworth, heir to the $16,000,000 fortune of his grandfather, the late Otto Young, and son of Lawrence O. Heyworth, millionaire sportsman.

The answer, drafted by Attorney A. S. Trude, revealed that young Heyworth, known since August, 1921, as the "penniless millionaire," because of a judicial order which prevented him from using the income of trust funds created for his benefit, has "shed his artistic temperament" and accepted employment in a Denver banking house. It was also indicated that entry of a decree scheduled for next Thursday before Judge Hugo Friend would not be contested by Heyworth. In his wife's earlier suit for separate maintenance, he was described as "extravagant, wasteful and with no regular employment, nor settled habits, frequently intoxicated, and always irresponsible."

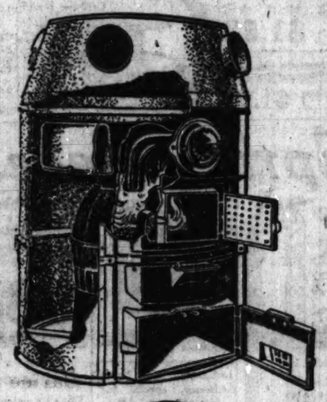
YES, it is a fact, proved by government experiments, that with any under-draft furnace, about 60 per cent of the possible heat value of the fuel is wasted up the chimney in the form of gases, soot and smoke.



It is also a fact that these gases, with the soot and smoke, can be burned. Cole's Patented Hot Blast Combustion burns them.

When you realize that these gases are virtually the same as those which are sold by gas companies at $1.25 to $2.00 per thousand cubic feet, and that there are 10,000 to 15,000 cubic feet of gas in a ton of soft coal, you will see why Cole's Original Hot Blast Furnace will save you from 1/3 to 1/2 in your fuel bills.

This wonderful scientific heating system will keep your whole house warm and comfortable at lowest cost.

It keeps moist, pure warm air circulating through all the rooms, insuring healthful humidity. And it will give you years of heating comfort and economy. Save this waste by using

Residence of Mr. Skinner 1216 Ashland Ave., Wilmette, Ill. Designed and Built by Carl Hecker

The side walls and roof of this house are insulated with FLAXLINUM. Assurance that this house will be comfortable in any kind of weather, cold or hot.

Prepare for Future Winters When You Build this Summer

What Flaxlinum Is

FLAXLINUM is a felted material made of durable, chemically-purified flax fibre. When built into the walls and roof of a house it seals the interior against outside temperature changes.

For walls it is made 1/2-inch thick with flanged edges to permit it to fit snugly between the studding. For roofs, sheets 1 inch in thickness are recommended. In applying FLAXLINUM no special construction is necessary. It will last as long as any house built. It will not crack, break or "sift down."

One-half inch of FLAXLINUM is equivalent in heat and cold resistance to 2½ inches of wood, eight inches of brick and mortar, or 13 inches of concrete.

FLAXLINUM
This is the Material that keeps the Cold Out

WHEN you build your home this summer don't forget that there are many cold winters ahead. It is a good thing when planning your home to give a thought to the high fuel bills of last winter.

Build your home so that your family will never have to live another winter in a cold, uncomfortable house. Build the kind of a house that is easy to heat and that is not wasteful of fuel.

It is a simple matter to get this kind of a house. Use a thickness of FLAXLINUM in the walls and roof and you'll have a house that is immune to outside temperatures. FLAXLINUM works on the principle of the Thermos bottle. It seals up the interior of the house and keeps out the cold of winter and keeps in the heat from the heating plant. In the uninsulated house much of the heat from the furnace goes out through the walls and roof and the cold comes in.

In summer, too, FLAXLINUM works for your comfort by keeping out the blazing heat of the sun, thus keeping every room cool. FLAXLINUM pays for itself in a few years with fuel savings. Users by the hundreds report fuel savings of 30% to 40%. Call or send for the free FLAXLINUM booklet and sample.

TO BUYERS AND RENTERS:

If you want low fuel bills and year round comfort make sure BEFORE you buy or rent a house that it is insulated with Flaxlinum.

FRANCE SPENDS ITS MONEY ON FINER WARSHIPS

Increases Gun Range and Adds Modern Equipment

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, May 19.—Although the United States has abandoned its project to modernize certain warships, for which an appropriation was voted by congress, the French marine is rushing feverishly to complete the renovation of four ships, the Paris, Diderot, Condorcet and Voltaire.

The battleship Paris is now in Pensole arsenal, Brest, undergoing a complete overhauling.

The guns are being remounted, permitting a higher trajectory and increasing the ranges 10 to 15 miles. The operation involves increasing the opening under the turrets, enlarging the space to permit higher elevation of the guns and deflecting the breeches lower.

Adopt British Tripod.

The French also have adopted the British tripod mast after experimenting with and rejecting the American wire mesh masts.

The Paris just has been equipped with a tripod mast 120 feet high containing three control stations at different levels. The highest fighting top is equipped with anti-aircraft guns. Just below has been installed a "firing detector," newly perfected by Lieut. Boutin, to control firing. Below that is a searchlight control and a navigation control is below that.

French naval circles are dumfounded at the American action in abandoning the modernizing of capital ships, pointing out that the British fleet comprises more than a score of improved vessels, whose superior range enables them to stand off and shell American warships of equal tonnage to smithereens without the Yankee gunners being able to touch them. The superior speed of the British craft would prevent the Americans from escaping by flight.

Big New Navy.

Paul Denise, member of the house of deputies, was instructed to draft the plans for the chamber of deputies of the French naval program for 1925-1930, according to the Washington treaty terms.

The proposals embrace the construction of four long cruising radius giant submarines, thirty first-class submarines, two mine layers, twenty-four destroyers, fifteen superdestroyers, and six light cruisers.

No considerable effort is being made to build submarines pending the settlement of the reparations problem, as it is feared that the British would resent displeasure over the French submarine effort by applying pressure on the French regarding the Ruhr and Germany.

ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Buetow, residents of Chicago for thirty-four years, celebrate their golden wedding anniversary tomorrow at the home of their daughter, Mrs. C. N. Affolter of 922 North Keystone avenue. After a family dinner, a reception for friends will be held at Williams hall, California avenue and Madison street. Mr. and Mrs. Buetow have seven children and twenty-one grandchildren. Mr. Buetow is a civil war veteran.

[Von der Heide Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. Lambert Loss of 4822 Iowa street celebrate their golden wedding anniversary today at Slauding hall. They have seven sons, one daughter, eighteen grandchildren, and one great-grandchild, all of whom will be present at the celebration. Mr. and Mrs. Loss were born in Holland and have been residents of Chicago for thirty-four years.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dunne, 6456 South Artesian avenue, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary yesterday by a solemn high mass. The mass was sung by their son, the Rev. Peter Dunne of Visitation parish, and served by their grandson, Russell Dunne. Ten children and fourteen grandchildren were present at the ceremony. Both Mr. and Mrs. Dunne were born in Ireland.

LEGION ACTS TO REVIVE SPIRIT OF MEMORIAL DAY

To revive the true spirit of Memorial day, the Advertising Men's post of the American Legion will launch a campaign this week to bring about a proper observation of the day, ending with a joint memorial service at noon Tuesday, May 29, at Hotel Morrison, in conjunction with the advertising council of the Association of Commerce.

Federal Judge Wilkerson and the Rev. George Craig Stewart, formerly of the 27th Division, will speak at the service.

"Memorial day should not be looked upon as a holiday in the same sense as other national holidays," said Maj. Fred Landis, commander of the post. "The day was really intended to be an occasion when the whole nation would pay homage to our honored dead. To observe it in any other manner is making misuse of the day."

RIVER FOREST'S WAR MEMORIAL WORK ON TODAY

So successful has been the campaign for $60,000 started in River Forest a month ago for a war memorial in the form of an assembly hall in the new school, that the first ground for the site is to broken at 3 p. m. this afternoon. A ceremonial program has been arranged in charge of a committee under the direction of Mrs. Lindsay Miller and Mrs. William Phelps, members of the River Forest Women's club.

John B. Piggot, president of the school board, will turn the first sod this afternoon, using the same gold and silver shovel that Alice Roosevelt Longworth used in dedicating Roosevelt road. The singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls and school children, and a display of fireworks are to be features of the ceremony.

LOWDEN POINTS RESEARCH NEEDS IN SOCIAL WORK

Miss Julia Lathrop Also Addresses Conference.

Washington, D. C., May 19.—[Special.]—The importance of social work in government, and the need of creating a public service under which institutions would be places of scientific research directed by those devoted to the discovery and cure of causes of social wastage, were discussed today by Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, and Miss Julia Lathrop in addresses before the fiftieth anniversary session of the National Conference of Social Work.

"The care of dependents in penitentiaries, hospitals, asylums and homes consumes more than a quarter of the entire revenues of the average state," Gov. Lowden declared.

"It may be a considerable expense to the state to establish an institute of psychiatry. If, however, that institute should discover a method by which even an insignificant percentage of cases of mental disease could be cured or prevented, such institute would be a profitable investment."

In discussing the transition from charities and correction to public welfare, Miss Lathrop said the ardor felt for public institutions in their developing period had evaporated with years, and too generally now they lack the intelligent public interest which can never lapse with safety.

To create in the next fifty years a public service of such practical opportunity and great ideals that our ablest youth may look forward to it as a career, and to abolish poverty, Miss Lathrop said, were the two vital tasks of the next fifty years, both, she added, should be accomplished in twenty-five years.

Leaves Motor Running; Killed by Exhaust Fumes

John O. Peterson, 50 years old, 1015 North Mason avenue, left the motor of his automobile running while he crawled underneath to make some repairs. A little later his wife found him dead underneath the car, apparently killed by fumes from the exhaust.

FIRE THREATENS BELLEWOOD; DOES $8,000 DAMAGE

Fire which destroyed two dwelling houses and two barns in Bellewood yesterday morning at one time threatened the whole village. The blaze was checked, however, when the Melrose Park fire department arrived to reinforce the Bellewood men.

The fire started in a barn belonging to Carl Mendze, where two automobiles were stored, and was not discovered until the whole building was in flames. Sparks spread the outbreak to a store building nearby and to two dwelling houses, all of which were destroyed. The loss was estimated at $8,000.

GHOSTLY TERROR GRIPS RUSSIANS RULED BY REDS

Cheka Seems to Hear and See Everything.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright, 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

RIGA, May 19.—[Tribune Radio.]—The new Red terror of Russia is no longer visible—it is branded in the trembling souls of the people.

The end of wholesale murder has come. The country is quiet and looks normal. The official Red terror established following the attempted assassination of Nicolai Lenin in 1918 has achieved its aim. A greater weapon than the rifle and bayonet is at work in Russia. It is fear.

Terror Controls People.

The Russian people are afraid. The moment anything goes wrong the jails are filled. Almost 100,000 persons are in various jails today just because Gen. Maximoff plotted a military coup at Moscow at the time of M. Lenin's relapse. Another reason was that the peasantry has grown nervous under taxation; still another that the Caucasian nationalist bandit, Chelakaefa, had raised 13,000 men, trying to make Tiflis independent.

These and scores of other gestures of discontent are successfully met by the cheka. The cheka has made a spies' nest out of Russia. Hundreds of thousands of paid agents overrun the country, from peasant villages to the sacred precincts of the gold domes of the Kremlin.

Spies fill churches, noting what priests say, spies watch European and American hotel guests, "cooperate with" American relief organizations, enter the army, look into government bureaus, check up small businesses, test communist members, report on dissatisfied working men at factories, act as agents provocateurs. Spies upon other spies control and make miserable the lives of millions of people.

Mystery Enwraps Cheka.

The cheka shrouds itself with mystery, keeping up its reputation of omnipotence, omniscience, and cruelty. Thus it continues the terrorism which saved the communist dictatorship of Russia.

As every member of the communist party is expected to work for the cheka, it is the duty of every sincere communist to betray his brother who may think or act against the principles of the proletarian dictatorship.

Just as the czar's espionage police made impossible the least effective move by Russia's discontented elements, except when wars shook the stability of the whole fabric, so the communist cheka has destroyed most enemies to the proletariat dictatorship.

From One to Many Czars.

There almost is no practical difference between the czar's okhana and the bolshevik cheka, but the czar made no pretenses of saving the people's government nor did he have an idealistic program for bringing humanity to an earthly paradise.

The czar's agents murdered proletarians, the proletarians murder czarists, while certain elements, such as socialists, nihilists, anarchists, individualists, libertarians, and plain democrats, are butchered by both.

I came to Russia after listening to all the buncombe which pro-bolsheviks and anti-bolsheviks send out by the wagonload in every capital of Europe. One side said the cheka had been abolished and replaced by a militia, amounting about to the American department of justice. The other side painted the cheka as torturers, madmen, blood drinkers, and cheap assassins.

I found neither view true. I found a foreigner could live a year in Moscow without hearing of the cheka. On the other hand, however, I found that Russia still is under complete domination of the cheka, which is under complete domination of the Communist party. Executions continue. There are shootings in the basements of the Lubyanka and Bootirka prisons frequently, and in outlying districts torture is used.

Speedy Trials Are Given.

But nowadays persons are tried within fourteen days of their arrest and sentenced according to soviet law, such as it is.

The third degree now is no worse than it is in other countries. Banishment, mercifully, has been reintroduced. Arrests continue by the thousands, but there is no "blood drinking."

There is no lynch law in Russia, because it is no longer necessary to carry out the communist program. This was resorted to when the opposition was important. But the opposition is crushed and the spiritual force of the Red terror remains stronger than ever.

The communists are proud of it. I heard M. Djirdjinsky, chief of the cheka, say:

"Our enemies are now suppressed. They are in the kingdom of shadows. Not a single measure of the soviet government could have been carried out without the help of the cheka."

Master Terrorist Explains.

Foreigners no longer are arrested indiscriminately. As far as I know, no American has been forced to work for the cheka since the American relief started. When I interviewed Peter, the Lett, who conducted the greatest reign of terror in Petrograd, asking whether Marguerite Harrison of Baltimore ever had been employed by the cheka, as alleged in the British press, he answered:

"The cheka, like all communist forces, is an international movement. We make no distinctions as to nationality or religion; but we take any communist into our work."

I asked Peter how many the cheka had executed:

"It is ridiculous to say 1,000,000 have been executed," Peter replied. "As far as I know, tens of thousands—thirty, forty, or, perhaps, fifty thousand. Our enemies say that we killed 7,000 professors, 6,000 doctors, etc., which is impossible, for Russia never had so many professionals. I defend the executions at Petrograd on the ground that those killed would have killed us when we were nearly beaten by Yudenitch. At present the situation is better.

Finds Terrorism Works Better.

"Shooting does away with a few individuals, but terrorism paralyzes the whole bourgeoisie; it brings better results than executions."

Now that classes have been established in Russia, with social order and conventional moralities, the cheka has found a new weapon. When it arrests and tries a person and finds no evidence it releases him and then spreads scandal to ruin his reputation, framing charges of immorality, etc. This refinement of cruelty is a success in cases of persons with standing.

The gentle art of shooting hostages no longer is practiced in Moscow and Petrograd, but in the provinces, Tiflis for instance, where militant communism flourishes, it is in a purer form. In Tiflis for the assassination of a few commissars the cheka took ten for one from an alphabetical list of hostages, dragging the sick from their beds, even, to be executed.

In the church councils and labor union meetings the cheka is now finding the greatest field for its work. Continually the agents of the cheka note what churchman or workman dares to vote against measures which the communists favor. Sometimes these meetings know that cheka agents are present, but even when they know that there are no spies or traitors among them few brave hearted individuals dare oppose the favored measures or favored candidates.

How Democracy Loses.

Thus although the congresses, whether the all Russian, ecclesiastical, or governmental, are alleged by foreign office officials to be democratically elected, reporters who have investigated the system learn that they are corrupted at the source, where the original delegates who elect the later delegates are chosen.

There hardly ever is a note of dissension in any national meeting, because the cheka terrorizes the original tiny soviets into electing communist representatives.

TALKS ON ADVERTISING.

"Selling the Advertising" was the subject of a talk by Merrill Hutchinson, advertising manager of the Pillsbury Flour Mills company, at the luncheon of the manufacturers' representatives and their specialty salesmen at the Hotel Morrison yesterday.

EX-SENATOR'S "FISHING TRIPS" COST HIM WIFE

All of Hancock county buzzed with gossip over the infatuation of former State Senator James Finley Gibson for Mrs. Mabel Johnson of Carthage, Ill., before the politician's wife became aware of his infidelity, according to Mrs. Alberta Gibson, 5648 Kenmore avenue. She was granted a divorce yesterday by Judge Hugo Gibson.

JAMES F. GIBSON.

Gibson, a realtor and attorney, with offices at 5110 Broadway, and who was enjoined from leaving the state by a ne exeat writ issued when it was charged that he had threatened his wife's witnesses, was forced to surrender his dower interest in $50,000 worth of real estate owned by Mrs. Gibson.

In his several answers to Mrs. Gibson's charges Gibson, who did not appear to contest entry of the decree, declared that he had been driven, with his son, James Gibson Jr., from their home by his wife's "nagging, pestering temperament." Characterizing Mrs. Gibson as a "termagant," the ex-senator asserted that "a description of Mrs. Gibson's behavior would shock a court." The plea for a divorce was begun merely "to wound his feeling." Gibson charged.

Who Will Stop This Hold-Up?

The common footpad or swindler can, if caught, be sent to jail, even though he has failed to get a cent of your money. But an equally guilty undertaker can boost the price of a burial casket, holding you up for a price two or three times its actual value, without any fear of punishment.

To rid the profession in Chicago of only a half dozen such bandits would be simple enough, but inexcusable profiteering, extortion and robbery is being practiced by a whole army of undertakers in this city. Your help is needed to suppress them.

No family is poor enough or unfortunate enough in the minds of these heartless brigands to be entitled to any sympathy or leniency.

A husband and father, for example, may have been carrying for years a thousand dollar life insurance policy with the idea that it would furnish his family some protection if he should be taken away. But if his widow falls into the hands of one of these profiteers she is fortunate, indeed, to have two or three hundred dollars after paying his bill.

$25 Casket

$25 pays for a cloth covered Casket of excellent quality, lined with silk and mounted with six handles in old silver finish.

Not only does the Skeeles-Biddle Company protect its clients by selling caskets at rock-bottom prices—from ONE-HALF to ONE-THIRD the prices demanded by others—but by sound advice and by counselling economical selections we strive to protect and assist the beneficiaries of small insurance policies and the heirs of modest estates.

Surely the time has come for every citizen of Chicago to personally and seriously interest himself in this corruption of the undertaking profession and its results. Only by comparison can you learn the truth for yourself.

We urge you to make your own inquiries. If you have recently attended a funeral and noticed the quality of the casket, and if you know how much was paid for it, take the first opportunity to drop in at our display room and find out how much less we charge for the same identical quality. Then tell your friends and win their gratitude.

Bear in mind, the distance between either of our two establishments and your home does not add one cent to the charge for auto service from your home to any cemetery while the use of either of our two beautiful funeral chapels, the service of a lady attendant and singers are provided entirely without charge if desired.

3 INSULL FIRMS SET RECORD FOR EMPLOYE OWNERS

Nine Out of Ten Edison Aids Have Stock.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Nine out of every ten employés of the Commonwealth Edison company now are stockholders. Figures for May 1, compiled yesterday, showed that the company has 7,300 employés and of these 6,414 are either fully paid shareowners or are purchasing stock on a savings plan. Thus, 88 per cent of the working force has an actual stake in the enterprise. In several departments the employés are 100 per cent shareholders.

Another Insull property, the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, which serves the suburbs and spreads into the fifteen northeastern counties of the state, has 2,500 employés, of whom 1,839, or 75 per cent, are shareholders.

Here's Champion Company.

The Central Illinois Public Service company, which serves 198 cities and towns in central and southern Illinois with electricity and gas, runs even higher in employé-shareholding. The figures show that on May 1 no less than 97 per cent of the working force either held stock or were buying on the partial payment plan. In fourteen departments every employé held stock.

So far as is known these figures hang up a new record; the percentage of all employés who are stockholders is perhaps higher than in any other large public utility company in the country.

The development has been even more intensive than in the United States Steel corporation, which was among the pioneers in promoting employé shareholding. Recent reports show that 50,000 employés of the Steel corporation are among the stockholders. The company has in excess of 200,000 employés, so that between one-fourth and one-fifth of the workers own stock. But in steel, of course, there is a far greater amount of transient labor than in the electrical industry.

Customers Also Share.

"Customer shareholding" has gone hand in hand with employé stock owning in the three electrical concerns. The period since the armistice has seen a great diffusion of stock holding. In 1919 the Commonwealth Edison company had approximately 7,000 shareholders. On May 1, the figures show, it had 21,229 fully paid stockholders, and in addition 3,805 were buying shares on a partial payment plan, making a total of more than 25,000 stockholders. The new holders are practically all Chicagoans and customers of the company. More than 94 per cent of all the stockholders live in Illinois.

The Public Service Company of Northern Illinois now has 16,360 stockholders. Of the number 36 per cent are women and they hold about 23 per cent of the stock.

Diffusion Is Wide.

Showing the diffusion, the figures indicate that in fifty-three communities served by the company the ratio of stockholders is greater than one to each sixty-five inhabitants, men, women, and children, while in seventy-seven communities the ratio is greater than one share owner to each 100 inhabitants.

The Central Illinois company, which serves 198 cities, on May 1 had 10,184 stockholders.

Says the Commonwealth's statistician: "If the stockholders of the Commonwealth Edison company linked hands and stood in a straight line, they would form an unbroken chain reaching from Evanston to South Chicago and stretching out eight miles beyond."

Magnetic Pole Moves

BY SELBY MAXWELL.

The earth's magnetism is changing, Dr. Louis A. Bauer of the Carnegie institution, Washington, announced recently before the American Philosophical society in Philadelphia. He says that earth's magnetism has decreased about one-thousandth part of itself from what it was a few months ago. He also states that the magnetic police is shifting west and south.

Dr. Bauer does not give any explanation as to what may be the probable cause for these changes. It has been known for many years that the magnetic pole changed its location. When Columbus discovered America the compass apparently pointed to Greenland. Now the magnetic pole is on the Boothia peninsula in Canada.

As the magnetic pole swings south it would carry the center of the earth's magnetism nearer the United States, and render auroras and telegrapher's electrical storms more frequent. But a decrease in the earth's magnetic strength would work in the reverse way, and decrease the pull on celestial electricity.

Should these two changes keep up for any length of time they will affect the direction that our compasses point, and the rapidity of the swing of the magnetic needle.

LAWYER GIVEN YEAR IN A CELL FOR CONTEMPT

3 Damage Suit Witnesses Jailed for Perjury.

What is believed to be a record Chicago punishment for contempt of court was imposed yesterday when Judge Harry A. Lewis sentenced Attorney Irving G. Zazove to serve one year in the county jail.

IRVING G. ZAZOVE.

Two witnesses, who admitted they had perjured themselves for $10 offered them by Zazove in his effort to collect heavy damages from the Chicago Evening American, were sentenced to six months in jail, while a third was given a thirty day jail sentence.

Two Others Face Charges.

Two other attorneys, Louis Jaffe and Charles H. Kaplan, counsel for the Purity Beverage cpomany, defendants in a Superior court suit, were given five days to show cause why they should not be sentenced for alleged contemptuous statements in a petition for a change of venue, presented to Judge Denis E. Sullivan.

Zazove, as counsel for Mrs. Susie Kryza of 2618 Bosworth avenue, who claimed $10,000 damages from the newspaper for injuries sustained in a collision with one of its delivery trucks, summoned Isadore Schwartz of 1146 West Taylor street and Michael Baron of 1316 West 13th street as "eye witnesses" to the accident. Both men declared they had seen the truck, traveling at high speed at Franklin and South Water streets, strike the woman and hurl her several feet. On their testimony and that of Mrs. Tillie Brown of 800 South Crawford avenue, who asserted she had written the names of "witnesses" on a slip of paper to be thrust into the injured woman's pocket, a jury awarded Mrs. Kryza $7,500 damages.

Confess Taking $10 Fees.

Schwartz and Baron confessed they received $10 to testify, although they had not seen the accident, while Leo Kryza, the injured woman's son, declared Zazove had given him a slip of paper with the admonition, "Now, go in and testify you found this paper in your mother's pocket."

Attorneys Jaffe and Kaplan, in a hearing of the suit of the United States Brewing company against Julius Taxey and the Purity Beverage company, sought a change of venue based on affidavits of belief in Judge Sullivan's prejudice which were signed by Taxey, Morris Bernatt and Sam Rosen.

The three men asserted they had never heard of the petition.

RADIO TO REGAIN POPULAR SONGS, JAZZ THIS WEEK

An arrangement between broadcasting radio stations and independent music publishers, by which popular songs and jazz music will be made available, was announced yesterday by Frederick Smith, secretary of the National Broadcasting league. The supply of music will be available beginning next Wednesday, when popular songs will reappear on radio programs.

For several weeks copyright songs have been absent from radio programs, taken off after the demand of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers that license fees be paid for their use.

Secretary Smith said the new arrangement brings a return of popular songs to league members in twenty states.

GIVEN 60 DAYS, WOMAN TURNS TO BATTLING FURY

Miss Hazel May, 30 years old, colored, living at 3739 South Wabash avenue, gave one piercing shriek. Then, as Sergt. Edward McGuire approached her to take her to the house of correction to which she had just been sentenced for sixty days for pocket picking by Judge Arnold Heap she let off with a straight left, followed it with a right uppercut, and instantly became a scratching, biting, kicking fury.

Bailiffs rushed to the sergeant's assistance and the young woman was carried from the South Clark street court by sheer force of numbers.

She had been arraigned at the instance of Miss Frances Hammell, who alleged that Miss May had taken $16 from her handbag as she was shopping in a loop department store. Store detectives said Miss May had a previous record of shoplifting.

HEALTH RESTORED BY RADIUM

The wonderful curative power of Radium has been known for years. However, the benefits of this precious health-giving substance have in the past been only within the means of persons of wealth.

The North American Restaurant is open EVERY day in the year from 7 A. M. to midnight

Do you realize that while most other dining places, where "Self Service" is the rule, close at or before 8 o'clock, and close entirely on Sundays and Holidays, the North American Restaurant is open every day in the year—Sundays and Holidays too—from 7 A. M. until midnight?

Did you ever wonder why? Perhaps it is due to the fact that week day lunches are usually hurried affairs—a matter of getting a "bite" quick. And so often the restaurant closest is patronized. But in the evenings and on Sundays and Holidays, when folks naturally wish to dine well and have the time to dine where they wish, the North American is the favorite spot. Our greatest volume comes in the evenings, and on Sundays and Holidays—the very times when lack of business forces many restaurants to close. Yet our week day lunch business is also far greater than that of any other Chicago restaurant or hotel.

There is a "sermon" in these facts, particularly for you people who have never tried the North American Restaurant. It is just one more bit of evidence which proves that in spite of our low prices, North American food is second to none.

Combination Salad—one of the 16 salads always ready for you here. One portion is usually big enough for 2 - - - 30c

Sefton Varnished Cartons Increase Sales

Varnish! No illustration can truly show you why Sefton Varnished Cartons are actually "superior."

Varnish adds a pleasant, soft glow to neutral colors; a brilliant lustre to bright colors. Why are automobiles—furniture varnished? Varnish makes a carton look rich, and invites a high appraisal of the contents.

Varnish keeps finger prints from soiling. It bids dust pass on without settling. It reflects light and enhances color combinations. Its personality stands forth, and secures the favorable attention it seeks. Varnish can make your cartons more successful. We invite examination and comparison. Send a few to Sefton. They will return to you—varnished.

The process has been perfected in Sefton's own way—so it's economical. Telephone, wire or write for our representative.

RICHARDSON
Product

From the makers of Flex-a-tile Housetops, Vitkalit, Membrane Roofs, Vitkote, Wall Board, and similar products

1 More water-proofing

The upper micrometer tells the story—50% more thickness in the felt base of the Super-Giant, as compared with the standard Shingle below, and consequently 100% more actual water-proofing

The Super-Giant is 37% larger than the ordinary shingle, hence 35% lower in cost of laying

Better felt

Note under the microscope how the fibres of Richardson felt interlock to catch and bind the asphalt into a solid, weather-proof armor

Exclusive surfacing

The weathered brown slate in flakes, used exclusively on Richardson shingles, gives permanent protection against fire and weather and brings a rich, new beauty to your roof

In every way—a super shingle

NOT on any one point of excellence, but on a basis of out-and-out superiority in every feature that goes into the making of a roofing, the Richardson Super-Giant Shingle is the finest slate-surfaced shingle produced.

Start at the base—with the felt upon which depends the very life of your roof. The Richardson felt used in the Super-Giant Shingle averages 90 points thick instead of the standard average of 55 points. For over half a century it has been recognized and used as the best; its microscopic structure, shown at the left tells you why.

This felt is impregnated with asphalt refined from the highest grade raw materials by the Richardson process. Because the felt is thicker it holds more of this superior asphalt; because of its fine quality it binds this asphalt into a solid, weather-resisting armor with no weak spots, as in ordinary roofing, for the weather to pierce.

The weathered brown slate surfacing, enameled under pressure upon this foundation, is found only at the Richardson quarries. It is in overlapping flakes and seals the shingle permanently against fire and weather hazards.

PLUS in every detail

The Richardson Super-Giant Shingle is 50% thicker than the ordinary shingle, and therefore gives longer wear and greater protection. Also, this greater thickness casts a deeper shadow line that gives life and interest to the roof.

It is 100% stiffer, remains rigid in the strongest wind, and makes your roof twice as strong and firm.

It is 37% larger than the ordinary shingle. Fewer are needed to cover your roof, and the cost of laying is thus 35% less.

It has 100% more actual water-proofing value, due to the ability of its thick felt base to hold more asphalt.

And with these plus features you get in the Richardson Super-Giant Shingle a new beauty that is utterly unrivalled.

Beauty hitherto unknown

On this super-shingle exclusively is used a rare color in slate hitherto unknown.

This new weathered brown gives to your roof the beautiful russet of November fields. It becomes only more deeply and richly beautiful with age, as the tan of rocks on the shore deepens under the ceaseless wash of ocean waves.

It brings to your home new beauty, architects say, especially when blended with other Richardson shingles of jade green, tile red, or black pearl.

Prove the facts yourself

Here is a super-shingle indeed, when you weigh its points one by one. First—exceptionally high test standards in its three basic materials: felt, asphalt, and slate surfacing. Second—unusual dimensions which give you added roofing protection at ⅓ less cost of laying. And finally—new, beautiful and absolutely exclusive color effects.

Go to your nearest dealer in lumber, hardware, or building material, whose name is listed below or to your contractor, and ask to see the Richardson Super-Giant Shingle in weathered brown. Feel it, weigh it, measure it, note the rare color. Then compare it with ordinary shingles—the difference will convince you.

Meanwhile, send for our beautiful new color chart showing the exclusive color combinations of Richardson slate surfacing, and containing valuable facts on roofing. Perhaps, too, our booklet, "Roofing on the Farm," can help you.

ST. ANDREWS, May 19.—[Tribune Radio.]—A fateful putt on the thirty-fifth green in the last match of the struggle between the United States and Great Britain for possession of the Walker international cup decided the classic at St. Andrews this afternoon and the cup will remain in the United States, whose players won the initial contest there last year. Dr. O. F. Willing of Portland made the putt which clinched victory for Uncle Sam.

And it was a notable victory, as the invaders, having lost 3 of the 4 four-some matches the preceding day, had to win six of the eight singles today. They won five and halved the other, taking the cup series, 6½ points to 5½.

British Laud Yanks.

The courtesy of the Americans in coming over to defend the cup, which they won in the initial competition at Southampton, Long Island, last year, was appreciated, and tonight thousands of spectators are loud in their praises of the fighting qualities of the losers.

It looked gloomy for the Americans at the noon hour, when five of the matches had leads of from one to three holes, while the honors were even in the remaining matches. Holderness was 3 up on Wright, Mackenzie 3 up on Rotan, Hope 1 up on Marston, Wethered 2 up on Ouimet, and Tolley 1 up on Sweetser, while Gardner and Harris, Willing and Murray, and Wilson and Herron were on even terms.

Yanks Come Back.

Rotan and Marston both played finely in the afternoon and had comparatively easy victories. The others were all keenly fought.

One had to pity Dr. Willing and his London Scottish partner, Willie Murray. They were so placed they had to stand all the jostling of the crowds traveling home with the incoming matches. This pair had a great struggle during the first round, Murray taking one to the good at the turn.

They were even at the fifteenth this afternoon, and then Willing proceeded to lay down a ten foot putt on the six-teenth green to give America the lead of the match. Each was very careful when playing to the notorious seventeenth, and when they got to the green Willing was away and had to shoot first. With calculating coolness he laid down his seven foot putt.

Murray, playing from a lesser distance, putted carefully to halve the hole, but his ball just hovered on the brink and the hole went to Willing. That seven foot putt had settled the whole issue of the destination of the cup.

Gardner Wins.

Bob Gardner in the afternoon had an interesting struggle with the leader of the opposition, Robert Harris. He took the lead at the third hole and then had the misfortune to find a nasty sand bunker from the tee on the sixth. The lie was so bad he had to play out, and there his lead went.

At the turn Gardner collared the tenth and eleventh, but he was uncomfortable in the wind at the fourteenth and fifteenth and lost these holes. Even in the Olympic games, the Chicago pole vaulter would have been hard put to get himself at the eighteenth, but he did it, all right.

Fred Wright against Ernest Holderness, former amateur British champion, took full advantage of the mistakes of which the latter was guilty in the last three of the match.

Holden was six down at the four-teenth hole in the morning, but won the fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth holes.

ninth time today on historic Churchill Downs track, was first contested in 1875. That inaugural of what has become the greatest 3 year old race of the year was won by Aristides, affectionately known as "The Little Red Horse," a scion of the imported Leamington.

For his owner, H. P. McGrath, Aristides earned the sum of $2,850, contrasted with approximately $60,000 value of first place today.

In those days the route was the true Derby distance of one and one-half miles, the same as when we had Derbies at Washington park. Starters, however, carried much lighter imposts. Aristides was weighted with only 100 pounds (while colts now carry 126 pounds) and covered the distance in 2:37¾.

In 1896 the Kentucky Derby distance was reduced to one and one-quarter miles, as the scale of weights had been raised, and it was considered too severe a test for young horses so early in the racing season.

Many great thoroughbreds, including Hindoo, Spokane, Ben Brush, Plaudit, Lieut. Gibson, Allan-a-Dale, and Judge Himes have won the event, but strangely enough, no winner ever succeeded in repeating in the American Derby at Washington Park. Only one filly has ever captured the rich stake—Regret in 1915.

The Tribune presents herewith a new method of reproducing photos taken at a distance—no matter how far it may be.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

ZEV A BIT CHESTY.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 19.—[Special.]—After the Derby, The Wake scught Zev and found him in his stable enjoying a little smack of rolled oats. We admit he seemed a bit chesty, but we could scarcely blame him, at that. As we approached, Zev neighed, "Well, I did it, didn't I? It's a laugh. They said I quit in the Preakness, would quit again if anyone caught me. Well, they didn't catch me, did they? Haw Haw Haw," and Zev gave a horse laugh which came from the depths of his chest.

"Where do these poor western boobs get the idea they can run? Where was that early speed that was going to kill me off?

"They say I'm lucky. They're lucky I didn't beat them farther. I had only one uneasy moment. That was when Enchantment made his bid. When he fell back again, I knew it was over. Come on down to Saratoga, Harv, and see me win some more big stakes."

He Needed Help.

Presiding Steward Charles F. Price, veteran racing official, tells this one on himself. Several years ago when officiating at New Orleans, where books rather than mutuels were the medium of speculation, the judges heard a rumor that there was to be a "shoo-in" in the last race.

Judge Price sent for the owner of the supposed caucus nominee to come to the judges' stand and put the question squarely to him. The owner, looking Judge Price squarely in the eye, replied: "Judge, I suttingly hope it's true. It's the only way my hoss could win."

Visitors from Chicago.

Conservative estimates of the amount of money spent by Chicago visitors to see the running of the Kentucky Derby, decided in slightly more than two minutes of actual racing time, is $1,500,000.

Again we ask, do Chicagoans want racing? And again we answer, they do.

Do You Remember Way Back When:

Long lines of horse drawn vehicles, with clanking chains and liveried coachmen, formed a procession down the south side boulevards to old Washington Park track on Derby day?

JOCKEY SANDE IS 21, BASHFUL, AND OWNER OF $5,000

BY FRENCH LANE.

Louisville, Ky., May 19.—[Special.]—Jockey Earl Sande's share of the Derby day spoils will be a gift of $5,000 from Harry F. Sinclair, owner of the Rancocas stables. There will be other gifts from friends of the stable and friends of Sande, it is expected.

The kid who brought a fortune into the Sinclair holdings by his victory today did not linger long in Kentucky. He arrived from New York early this morning and made a dash for a train back east as soon as he could escape admiring friends and get into his street clothes.

Riding Since 1918.

Sande has been riding since 1918. Most of that time has been spent on the big tracks, for old timers say he was a finished rider when he broke into the game. His home is in American Falls, Idaho. He delayed his dash for the train long enough to send a message to his mother in Salem, Ore., telling her of his victory.

"They wanted me to be a telegraph operator," Sande said. "But I was brought up on an Idaho ranch and was riding horses when I was so small they had to lift me into the saddle."

Bashful as Hair Is Sandy.

Earl is not quite 21 years old and is as bashful as his hair is sandy. Riding for some of the greatest stables in the country during the last few years, he has picked up quite a fortune, and has saved it, his companions claim.

This was his third trial for Derby honors. In his first effort he finished out of the money on American Eagle. He was second on Billy Kelly the year Sir Barton won it.

"I had what we call an easy ride on Zev today," Sande said. "That was because we were always in front. At the stretch I gave him his head and let him run, but somebody was coming fast behind me and I had to drive him the last hundred yards. He was tired at the finish, but not done, by any means."

Greatest of Crowds Jams Churchill Downs for Derby

BY HUGH FULLERTON.

Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky., May 19.—[Special.]—Zev, the sprinter, who, the world said, could not run a distance, superbly ridden by Earl Sande, captured the Kentucky Derby today from the largest field that ever faced a starter in that event and climaxed the greatest turf spectacle of the year.

The crowd, estimated at close to 80,000 persons, banked in a half mile stretch on both sides of the track, cheered wildly as Sande, his boyish face alight, his blond hair unrumpled, lifted the floral horseshoe and the great masses of American Beauty roses to the neck of the beautiful brown colt while the twenty defeated candidates for the highest three year old honor of the turf walked slowly away, drooping in their blankets.

The spectacle, aside from the thrilling two minutes, five and two-fifths seconds of stirring struggle, was the most brilliant in the history of the classic race. The movement toward the Downs started before 10 o'clock this morning. The police had scouted the grounds and routed out the army of sleepers—and Louisville, after a night of excitement, woke, yawned and started to the track.

Solid Mass of Humanity.

The four miles between the downtown district and the track were one moving mass of humanity, with solid lines of street cars, double ranks of automobiles, and thousands of marchers trekking slowly toward the vividly green square mile of the Downs. Before noon the huge stands were crowded and the clubhouse and lawns were filled with the beauty of Kentucky. Gay luncheon parties filled the clubhouse, the women, blossoming forth for the first time in their summer finery, adding to the beauty of the scene.

By 1 o'clock the immense parade plaza in front of the stands was packed with people and the betting ring was one mauling mill of perspiring shoppers. The advance betting on the Derby started shortly after noon, and a solid stream of bettors surged down upon the windows, seemingly backing every horse in the race.

Before the first race was run more than 70,000 persons were packed in the stands, and upon the terraces and the lawns before the clubhouse were masses of gorgeous gowns, bright parasols, and gaudy colors. As far as one could see with field glasses looking toward the city was a moving army of men and women.

Chief of Police Braden estimated there were more than 6,000 automobiles from out of the city adding to the riot and congestion, and everything movable in Louisville was creeping toward the Downs.

Just after the finish of the first race the crowd, packed along more than half a mile and massed in the huge stands, overflowed to the infield, and in a few minutes more than 5,000 persons had rushed to vantage points on the flowered terraces.

The scene was one of magnificent beauty, the bright sunshine tempered by fleecy clouds, the rain washed green of the infield, the gay gowns of the women, the steady roar of the immense throng rising to shrillness as the horses battled for the lead down the perfect track, making this the brightest and most colorful of all Kentucky Derbies.

Meantime the crowd kept pouring into the track. They came in antiquated hacks, in automobiles, street cars and airplanes—one of the latter bearing Pierre Lorrillard from New York, another from St. Louis, and one from Dayton bringing belated visitors.

Many Notables Present.

The governor and both senators from Kentucky, senators from other states, cabinet members, high army and navy officers were present. The millionaire horsemen and society leaders of New York, Maryland, Kentucky and Chicago mingled with the great, jostling, good natured crowd.

It was Derby day—a day such as Chicago used to have, and may have again some day.

How much was wagered today never will be known. At some of the windows the figures clicked off on the registers indicated that more than 2,400 different bets had been made, and the big-money windows at the clubhouse clicked almost as fast as the two-dollar windows did.

But the crowd itself was the picture—sweating, struggling, laughing—making a holiday of the crowning of the horse.

TRAINER WON'T BELIEVE

NEW YORK, May 19.—Sam Hildreth, Rancocas Stable trainer and the man largely responsible for Zev's victory in the $50,000 Kentucky Derby today, had to be assured three times tonight that his charge had led the field.

"Are you sure you're right?" he asked when told that Zev had won. "I don't want to get all worked up and then be let down again."

Twice reassured, he twice doubted and, chuckling, said: "That's good news. But call me up again when the red board goes up."

Scott, Giant Slab Star, Out with Broken Hand

New York, May 19.—Pitcher Jack Scott, one of the Giants' leading pitchers, will be out of the game for at least a month with a broken bone in the palm of his right hand. An X-ray examination today revealed the fact that in addition to several bruised fingers Scott had a broken bone in the hand.

Seattle Takes Ball Row with McCarthy to Court

San Francisco, Cal., May 19.—The battle over the purchase of the Seattle baseball club by former Los Angeles club officials was thrown into the courts today. The Seattle Baseball club, a corporation, filed a suit in federal court, asking an order commanding President W. P. McCarthy of the Coast league to accept and record credentials of Charles Lockard, president of the Seattle club, as a Coast league director.

MARTINGALE IN SECOND PLACE AND VIGIL THIRD

Nassau Only Western Horse in Money.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

Louisville, Ky., May 19.—Harry F. Sinclair's Zev, at one time winter book favorite, but lightly regarded since his poor showing in the Preakness stakes, won the forty-ninth Kentucky Derby from a field of twenty other starters at Churchill Downs this afternoon before 75,000 spectators.

Zev's victory was an upset. If you had asked any horse wise person in this vicinity last night what he thought of Zev's chances, he would have replied: "Zev is only a sprinter."

Because of this opinion $2 mutuel tickets on the son of The Finn—Miss Kearney paid the liberal price of $40.40, $30.60, $18.40.

Whether or not Zev is a sprinter, he led his field practically the entire mile and one quarter route in 2:05 2-5, comparatively slow time considering the fast track. This is two seconds slower than the Derby record of old Rosebud established in 1914.

Ridden Hard at Finish.

Zev won rather easily at the finish with a margin of one and one-half lengths over Martingale, owned by J. S. Cosden, another oil man. He was tired but not all out. Jockey Earle Sandes said after the race that he found it necessary to urge Zev at the start, and that he rode him hard late in the stretch lest the colt quit as he had done in the Preakness.

Still another length back in third place was Vigil, winner of the Preakness, who had gradually worked his way up from tenth position and came strongly enough at the end to pass Nassau and Chittagong, who finished neck apart in fourth and fifth position respectively. Martingale paid $25.80 and $16.80 place and show. Vigil was at the surprisingly good odds of $12.30 to show.

From a sectional viewpoint, it was a field day for the east, which ran one-two-three. It was a great Kentucky Derby, but it was not a great Derby for Kentucky. Back in the ruck, with the exception of Nassau, were the youngsters which had commanded the affection and the dollars of this section. In this category were the widely touted Bo McMillan, Prince K, and Bright Tomorrow.

Applause Rather Faint Hearted.

There was the customary applause for the victor as Zev's rider cantered back to the judges' stand to receive the traditional floral horse shoe. There would have been salvos of applause had a Kentucky or western horse led to the wire. Only traditional Kentucky courtesy kept Zev from receiving a cold reception. Money on the colt was mostly wagered by eastern visitors.

Even had Whitney been in the money it would have been more popular, for this eastern turfman sends his best here every year to run in the great race. Trainer James Rowe elected to send four to the post in an effort to take down the first money of $54,125. They failed.

Enchantment, best of the lot, was sixth at the wire after having made his effort rounding the last turn. It took him past part of the field, but at the end there were several going faster than he.

Triumph of Zev was true to the tradition of the last four Derbies seen by the writer—victory of a front runner. Coming past the stand, the first time, Zev was leading, with Martingale second, Prince K. third, and Nassau fourth. The others were close together, considering the size of the field.

Vigil Going Great At Finish.

Vigil's boy was seen trying to edge through the crowd along the back stretch, but no opening presented. He didn't really get to running freely until well into the stretch, from where he finished with a fine burst of speed.

General Thatcher, which had been so generally feared on a fast track because of his second in the Preakness, was away in the rear division and outfooted all the way. His effort was a distinct contrast to his eastern race.

After a short delay at the post and the field had gone four furlongs, Zev was still rating along comfortably in front with Martingale in attendance. Nassau was third, Enchantment fourth, Aspiration fifth and the Chicago owned Chittagong seventh. The latter had shown more early speed than expected and seemed to have a chance.

When the three-quarters of a mile had been traversed the order was the same except that Chittagong had moved to fourth position with Enchantment fifth and Vigil sixth. Coming into the stretch the first three held the same positions with Vigil now fifth. The finish already has been narrated.

Bright sunshiny weather instead of the showers predicted greeted the record breaking crowd which started wending its way toward the track long before noon and soon occupied every seat not reserved for holders of boxes.

All the settings were perfect—the greatest crowd, the greatest field, and the greatest enthusiasm of forty-nine years. All that was lacking was the victory of a western or Kentucky owned thoroughbred.

Even Owner Sinclair was not present to receive the gold plate given by the Kentucky Jockey club to the winner. Rumor said the recent slump in Wall street took some of the joy out of his life. Neither was Trainer Sam Hildreth. Second Trainer Dave Leary received the gold plate in behalf of the owner.

Zev was the last of the eastern eligibles to arrive. He came Thursday night, after being considered a doubtful starter. He vindicated the old saying, "When it comes to a stake, look out for Hildreth."

Governor Presents Gold Cup.

Gov. Morrow of Kentucky presented the gold cup to the owner's representative in a speech in which he extolled the value of the thoroughbred in our national life and the breeding industry of the state whose highest official he is.

While the race, as a whole, was truly run, those who profess to know horses think that several of those which finished behind the winner will outfoot him before the season is over at the same or a longer distance. Indeed, many thought that had any of the party had the foot to reach the leader they would have made him quit, but such conjectures, of course, take the makers thereof into the "If club" which is holding a protracted session tonight, which will be resumed tomorrow.

Many persons in Chicago were interested in the showing of Chittagong, recently purchased from J. O. Keene of Lexington by Mrs. John Hertz at what was reported to be a fancy price. This son of Luke McLuke, which also was included in the sale, really gave a creditable account of himself, far better than generally expected.

Hertz Expresses Satisfaction.

Instead of being badly outrun from the start and trailing in the rear division, Chittagong was ninth at the quarter, seventh at the half, fourth in the scramble around the far turn at the three-quarters, sixth in the stretch, and fifth at the finish—beaten less than four lengths for first money.

In an interview in behalf of the owner, Mr. Hertz said after the race: "We are satisfied with the race run by Chittagong and that he is worth the price paid for him. He ran against the best 3 year olds in the country. Four finished in front of him, and sixteen behind him. That's making a pretty good showing for an owner who bought her first Derby prospect only two weeks before the race.

"Chittagong, in my opinion, will win some good stakes before the season is over. We will send him after the Latonia Derby, which is one-quarter of a mile longer. I'd like to give a dinner to my Chicago friends who wagered on him; but they tell me the Coliseum wouldn't be large enough."

The writer, while here, saw three Chicagoans who had tickets in the winter books at 100 to 1 worth more than $10,000 each if the Hertz entry had won.

GREAT RACE—GREAT DAY

BY FRENCH LANE.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 19.—The day dawned a trifle cloudy, then came the sunshine, but more clouds at 8 o'clock. An hour later the sun was beating down in all his springtime glory, and even at this hour the crowd was in full motion toward Churchill Downs.

Thousands of weary visitors still smiling despite a night on the street, in the parks, depots, hotel lobbies, in automobiles and garages helped arouse Louisville for its greatest day. Then a score of special trains, fifteen from Chicago, started pouring the thousands into town. Downtown Louisville was swarming with happy humanity, and it was evident at 10 o'clock that track transportation facilities had fallen far short. Thousands must walk three miles to the scene of the great race. And they walked, some smiling, some laughing, and many cursing the fates that sent so great a sporting event to a city that could not better handle it.

Chicagoans were everywhere in the crowd. Two thousand were wearing small badges inscribed "Boosters, Chicago Racing." They came on the specials operated by the Chicago Business Man's Racing association. They packed and jammed the lawns and paddocks, their bank rolls fairly rolled into the parimutuel machines, and the more fortunate went on society's parade on the clubhouse lawn.

The Meekers, the Swifts, the Fields, the Foremans, the Lehmans, the Wallaces, and many others familiar to Chicago were seeking the bandstand. On the clubhouse lawn were Bob Sweitzer, State's Attorney Crowe, A. N. Dever of Chicago; Senator Frank Ryan and other politicians.

"This Derby breaks all our records," General Manager Matt Winn said. "It is the greatest crowd ever gathered within the enclosures with the financial, social and public life of the nation here to see the great race. It was well worth all the money and energy expended to make it a success."

J. S. Reylogle, the steel magnate, Harry F. Sinclair, the multimillionaire oil operator and owner of Zev, today's winner; Benjamin Block, whose Morrich carried away the rich prize a year ago; Harry Payne Whitney, who failed with four entries to get in the money this afternoon, and Walter Salmon were in the New York delegation.

Whisky prices fluctuated at a Wall street panic clip. A quart carrying most any kind of a Kentucky label could be had for $12 three days ago. Twenty-five dollars was the price on the opening this morning and it had hit $40 long before post time.

Kentucky's first citizen, Gov. Edwin P. Morrow, with his family, viewed the race. When the bugle sounded the governor made his way from the clubhouse to the stand and watched the Derby with the officials. Senators Ernst and Stanley of Kentucky, and State Treasurer John J. Craig, were in the state's official party. Former Senator Tom Taggart of Indiana, also was present.

The huge army dirigible, T. C.-1, en route from Belleville, Ill., to Dayton, Ohio, passed over and circled the Downs shortly after 2 o'clock. Several airplanes bringing belated Derby visitors were arriving throughout the first two hours of the program.

George Brennan, the Democratic leader, and wife, entertained Mr. and Mrs. George H. Porter, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Carr, Mr. and Mrs. Tim Ryan, Alderman and Mrs. Joseph McDonough, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Doyle and Mr. and Mrs. William J. Graham. They occupied one of the jockey club boxes.

Congressman Nick Longworth of Ohio, son-in-law of the late Theodore Roosevelt; Senator James E. Watson of Indiana, and Congressman Henry D. Hawes of Missouri, were among the many representatives at official Washington in the crowd.

ENGLEWOOD, 4; CULVER, 1.

STAR CARD BACKS BENNIE LEONARD-MITCHELL BOUT

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Jim Mullen, local promoter who will stage the ten round bout between Bennie Leonard, lightweight champion, and Pinkie Mitchell of Milwaukee, holder of the junior welterweight crown, at Dexter park pavilion on May 29, has announced the complete card, which includes many well known boxers.

BENNIE LEONARD.

In the ten round semi-windup, Joe Burman, Chicago's popular bantamweight, will meet Pasty Flannigan of St. Louis. They will scale 121 pounds and this bout is sure to attract its share of attention. Both are hard right hand punchers and it will be Burman's first fight since he won a popular ten round decision over Joe Lynch, kingpin of the bantams, in the same arena a short time ago.

Bud Taylor, the Terre Haute Tiger, will open the show in an eight round clash with Lew Hurley of New York. The latter is a stablemate of Leonard's and under the management of Billy Gibson. They have agreed to scale 118 pounds at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the contest.

Mandell and Garcia.

This bout will be followed by another eight rounder which will bring Sammy Mandell of Rockford and Frank Garcia of Memphis together. It will be the first meeting of the pair since Garcia knocked Mandell down at one of the Commodore shows last winter. As a result of the clean knockdown, Garcia won the decision. They will weight 126 pounds.

In the other eight round preliminary Harold Smith of the stockyards will meet "Pewee" Kaiser of St. Louis. The Mound city miller is in the city and training at the Arcade, while Smith is working at Ferretti's. The weight for this bout will be 118 pounds.

This is one of the most attractive cards arranged since boxing has been permitted in Chicago. Each bout speaks for itself and the fans will have something to talk about in addition to discussing the relative merits of Leonard and Mitchell. All boxers will be hard at work at local gymnasiums this week and it will be interesting to follow their preparation.

Pinkie to Avenge Richie.

It will be the first meeting of Pinkie and Bennie. The lightweight title holder defeated Pinkie's brother, Richie, on two different occasions, and Pinkie is bent on avenging these defeats. The pair were matched to meet in Milwaukee over a year ago, but Mitchell hurt his arm and the bout was called off in the morning of the day it was to be held.

Leonard was an interested spectator at the Mitchell-Droney fight in Louisville last Friday night, and will resume training tomorrow with first hand information regarding the Cream City fighter's style of milling. Not only was Leonard at the ringside but his crafty manager, Billy Gibson, also lamped the affair very closely.

Leonard and Mitchell can scrap with their rights hands, while no one disputes Bennie's right to be acclaimed a master boxer. In this respect he will have the edge on Pinkie, who will have the natural advantages of height and reach. There will be no material advantage in weight, and it is expected both will scale around 140 pounds.

As it is one of the most natural matches made in the middle west in years, there is a vast demand for tickets from fans in both Chicago and Milwaukee. Promoter Mullen will open an office on either Clark or Dearborn street early in the week to dispose of the pasteboards, which will sell for $5, $10, and $15.

Although the stockyards show is commanding most attention of static fans, the bouts to be conducted by Mrs. Olive Sheerin at the Ashland Boulevard Auditorium tomorrow night are not being overlooked.

Another Good Card.

In the main event Sammy Mandell of Rockford will meet Freddie Jacks of England at 126 pounds. Kid Herman, the Mexican welter, will clash with Jimmy Gory of South Chicago in the semi-windup. Jimmy Anderson and Harry Simmons, local 140 pounders, will open the show. Glen Mulligan of Iowa and Jack McGurn of the west side will mingle in the second prelim. Herbie Schaeffer, local 118 pounder, and Joey Schwartz of St. Paul will follow in another six rounder. Al Gruman, Los Angeles 135 pounder, and Johnnie Williams of Brooklyn will be the principals in the next contest, which will be followed by Joe O'Hara of Fort Dodge, Ia., and Johnnie Tillman of St. Paul.

LEONARD TO GIVE EXHIBITION HERE ON WEDNESDAY

Bennie Leonard is to give an exhibition here Wednesday night. He has volunteered to appear at the La Salle theater as a headliner for an athletic program for the men's divisional rally in the Jewish united drive for $2,500,000.

Leonard will pick his opponent for the five or six round go. Other features of the athletic program will be wrestling matches in which participants will be Fred Meyer, 192 pound amateur heavyweight champion member of the United States wrestling team at the Olympic games; Herman Magida, amateur middleweight wrestling champion, and Walter Maurer, 175 pound amateur champion and member of the 1920 Olympic team.

AUSTIN UPSETS LOWELL.

Austin	201	111	000—6
Lowell	200	000	000—2

LOYOLA, 16; MORGAN PARK, 1.

Loyola crushed Morgan Park Military academy, 16 to 1, in an exhibition game at the cadet field. Winn of Loyola was touched only four scattered times and hit safely thrice.

RIVERSIDE TRACKMEN WIN.

Riverside defeated Morton in both classes of a dual track meet at Riverside yesterday. The seniors, led by Johnson, who scored 21 points, won, 75 to 25, and the juniors, 43 to 34. Zopelos of Morton topped the junior athletes with 15 markers. Dinker was Riverside's ace.

Two base hits—Peck, Kamm, Hooper. Three base hit—R. Collins. Home run—Bluege. Struck out—Johnson, 6; Mack, 1; Russell, 1. Base on balls—Robertson, 1; W. Johnson, 2. Hits off Robertson, 5 in 7 innings; W. Johnson, 9 in 8 1-3 innings. Hit by pitcher—by Robertson [Harris]; by W. Johnson [Rigney]. Time, 1:53. Umpires—Connolly, Dineen and Owens.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Although they reared up in the ninth and sent the great Walter Johnson careening to the side lines, Glenn's White Sox passed out yesterday with the tying runs on the bases, and Washington copped the final of the series by 6 to 4. A hit by Earl Sheely in the closing moments would have brought on a tie, but the big fellow fanned, to end a rally that netted the home gang three runs.

On top of defeat the winning streak of Charles "No Hit" Robertson was bested to smithereens. Lacking his usual control, he was forced to "lay 'em in there," and the Senators picked on the cripples, notably Oswald Bluege, who poked the ball into the left field seats with a man on in the fifth.

Sudden Finish for Walter.

Walter Johnson's finish was both sudden and unexpected. For eight rounds the faithful old war horse had hurled beautifully, allowing six hits and fanning as many batters. Then he lost control in the final frame, and after three had scored he was ready to accept a helping hand. Allan Russell gave it to him, and ended the struggle with the aforementioned strikeout of Sheely.

Washington's first run, which crossed in the second, was no fault of Robertson's. Ernie Johnson, back at short after a couple of weeks on the bench, heaved high over first on Gharrity's grounder, and the runner made two corners on it. Peckinpaugh sacrificed him with a single. The Sox got back this run in the third on a single by Robertson and triple by Collins. Bluege's homer put the Senators out in front again in the fifth, and there they remained.

Rally Falls Short.

Four singles in a row in Washington's ninth, one by Johnson driving in two runs, preceded the stirring windup. In the home half, Falk walked, and Kamm forced him. Schalk singled, and Elsh, batting for Mack, was safe on Gharrity's muff. This filled the corners, and Hooper cleaned up with a double to right. Johnson retired here. Russell himself threw out E. Johnson, and then walked Collins, who stole second. Then Sheely whiffed, and it was all over.

HAWKS TRAMP ON MAROON NINE WITH EASE, 2-0

Herbert Marshall of Iowa pitched a one hit game against Chicago yesterday afternoon in a battle in which only four hits were made. Roy Arnt led the Maroons on the slab and allowed only one blow—a three base knock. His weakness was in issuing passes, two of the seven allowed netting runs for the Hawkeyes by Poepsel and Locke. Marshall was backed by airtight support, particularly by Locke and Scholoupka. Bobby Howell was the only Maroon to reach first. Score:

PURPLE, 4; NOTRE DAME, 1

Ralph Bengsten held Notre Dame batters at his mercy yesterday and, while his mates supplied support of a new brand for Purple ball teams, Northwestern won, 4 to 1, in a tight game on the Evanston field. Northwestern surprised the visitors and everybody else by counting two runs in the first inning off Paul Castner, who went the route. Johnson and Stegman scored on a knock by Taber, aided by an error by Sheehan. The other two counters were made in the eighth when Castner weakened and allowed Stegman, Palmer and Dempsey to hit.

The losers' lone run came in the sixth when Foley whanged out the only three base hit of the day, scoring Sheehan.

OAK PARK HIGH HALTS MORTON WINNING, 6-5

BY GEORGE BUCKLEY.

Morton's victorious dash through the ranks of the Suburban league was brought to an abrupt end by Oak Park yesterday at the winner's field. The home team nipped the heretofore unbeaten invaders, 6 to 5, largely through the brilliant all round performance of Ferrette. Ferrette scored the winning tally in the fifth by tripling and scoring on Bernard's single. It was the first defeat of the season for Dahlquist, who was combed for eleven solid bingles. Score:

With a list of seventeen courses on which the public can play Chicago easily leads any city in the world. Despite this number the game is growing so fast here that more courses are needed and the most available space is in the Forest Preserve District, which now has Palos Hills and Edgebrook courses, while the Glencoe community, which was financed by private capital is on Forest Preserve property. Work has just been started on another similar course which will be located west of Evanston and east of the Glen View club.

In response to frequent inquiries as to where the public can play THE TRIBUNE has compiled the following list, giving daily fees and other particulars.

TOMMY GIBBONS AND HIS HAPPY FAMILY

"Jack Dempsey has to fight me, my wife, and three husky boys at Shelby, and he has to beat every one of them to win. I will be fighting for them and they will be fighting for me," said Tommy Gibbons just before he posed for the above pictures. The group on the left shows the family at the Gibbons home in St. Paul. The challenger is shown holding Jack, 3 1-2 years old. Mrs. Gibbons is holding the baby, Dick, 8 months, and John, the oldest, 5 1-2 years. At the right Dick was snapped trying to slip his mitt in one of his daddy's boxing gloves.

FATE PLAYS STRANGE PRANKS

BL CAPT. EDDIE RICKENBACKER.

ARTICLE III.

FATE plays strange pranks. I know men who have felt the sharp edge of the powerful scythe of the Grim Reaper numerous times, have drawn back in an almost superhuman effort, and were not even scratched. Other methodical men, who seemingly never take a chance, trip on an unfastened shoelace and fall to eternity.

Sometimes I feel that those of us who escaped from seeming impossible situations are being spared for a worse end. I advanced that theory to a group of brave lads disabled in France, who I recently visited in a hospital where they are making a valiant effort to recover. On and on they fight in their little cots, without the aid and encouragement that comes with physical competition.

Robert Burman, a racing driver, completed a spectacular career at Corona on April 8, 1916. "Wild Bob" they called him. He was a driving scamp. Hazards were overshadowed by visions of victory. Just before the start of the race the Peugeot speed creation which he was driving developed clutch trouble. Undaunted, he jacked up the rear wheels and started his bellowing motor. The wheels, suspended on the jacks, spun around at a terrific rate. He couldn't throw out the clutch.

Oil was sprinkled in quantities on the ground beneath the whirling rear wheels. Calmly he donned his driving gloves, snapped down his goggles, and jumped into the car. When he was as comfortably adjusted as one can be in a racing car he signaled pit attendants to push the car off the jacks.

The rushing wheels assaulted the ground at the sudden revolt of contact, but the oil smoothed the way and the car rolled on. Around the course Burman thundered, leading the field at a pace of 108 miles an hour. As a citation of his desperate drive, the race was won at an average of ten miles an hour slower than his gait.

Spectators were in his path as he speeded along. He turned out to evade them. He couldn't throw out or disengage the clutch, the connecting link between his powerful motor and the transmission which was absorbing the power and causing his rear wheels to drive him on at wind burning speed. He lost control of the car. It headed for a telegraph pole. In the dash to doom the car straddled a guy wire rigidly staked in the ground and securely fastened near the top of the pole.

The runaway car skidded up the wire gracefully, and seemingly the speed of the heavy race creation never slackened. Headlong it crashed into the pole, which broke off at the top, described an arc, and with its power and fury struck the rear of Burman's head as he sat upright in the car, battling for his safety to the very end. Again the car lunged and turned over. When spectators rushed to Burman's assistance he was dead. Racing had lost a daring pioneer. He was a martyr to transportation.

In direct contrast to the spectacular end of Burman was the sad death of John Aitken, one of the most daring and skilled wheelsmen who ever sat behind the prancing mechanical steeds which power a race car at high speeds. Survivor of many a close call on the track, Aitken was taken ill with "flu" in 1919. He died in a few days.

Then, too, the hand of fate shed tragedy over the life of Louis Strang, another hero of speed duels, who had left the trumpet call unanswered in many close brushes on the track. Strang was pacemaker for an automobile dealers' reliability run in July, 1911. After escaping serious injury or death numerous times at high speeds, he was killed as the result of an accident to his car while traveling eight miles an hour. He was driving on a narrow road. A wagon was approaching. He turned out to make passing space. The road gave way, the car turned over, landed at the bottom of a ditch—and Strang's neck was broken.

Spencer Wishart, a beloved son of speed, died at the wheel of his racing car at Elgin during a race on Aug. 14, 1914. Spencer was storming down the track at the wheel of his car in a radiator to radiator sprint with an opponent. The two cars came together for an instant, wheel hubs met, then parted. Wishart's car dived into a tree. Not a bone in his body was broken by the impact. Apparently he was uninjured. Death was caused by heart failure, it was said. An unusual culmination to the feats of a man whose sturdy heart had driven other pilots off their wheels in tight places where it took all the nerve and heart in a man to go on. But so it is.

It is these byplays of fate—humorous, sensational, or pathetic, as the case may be—that gives other men engaged in hazardous endeavors courage to go on. After all, the percentage is not all against them. In the last two years only two of the better known racing drivers have driven to their Maker in a fleeting chariot of speed.

JOLLY BEATS HAGEN IN BRITISH PRO MEET

LEEDS, England, May 19.—[Associated Press.]—H. C. Jolly, young professional of the Foxgrove club, by his steady playing and long driving, today won the 700 pounds professional golf tournament conducted by the Yorkshire Evening News, defeating Walter Hagen of New York, 3 up in the 36 hole final.

Jolly's ability to get great length from his shots on the fairway more than offset the brilliant work of the American on the greens, and the latter was never able to get the lead. Starting the afternoon round one up, Jolly increased his lead by winning the fifth, sixth and seventh holes. Then, by a wonderful exhibition of iron shots, Hagen overhauled his opponent to square matters at the thirteenth.

The next three holes were halved but Hagen's drive on the seventeenth landed in a bunker, while Jolly holed a seven yard putt for a birdie 2. Hagen lost the match when he missed the cup by several feet in his putt on the eighteenth green. A gallery of more than 2,000 followed the players.

PITTSBURGH CLUB TO BUILD LINKS FOR USE OF WOMEN ONLY

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 19.—A nine hole golf course for exclusive use of women will be added to the Longue Vue club, here, late in the summer. It will adjoin the eighteen hole course recently completed for male members, and is designed to provide facilities for wives and daughters, who in other clubs are relegated to "women's hours" or "women's days."

The Longue Vue club owns a fine stretch of country on the hills skirting the Alleghany river, ten miles from the city, and because of its $3,000 entrance fee, is known as the "millionaire's club." Approximately $1,000,000 is being invested in the club house and playground of 350 acres.

YALE'S CREW SPURTS TO HUMBLE CORNELL

Ithaca, N. Y., May 19.—[Associated Press.]—Breaking the heart of a gallant Cornell eight in the last half mile of a spectacular varsity race, a mighty Yale crew, rowing with irresistible power and precision, swept to a dramatic victory late today in the closing race of the triangular regatta over the two miles Lake Cayuga course.

The blue shell led its red rival by two full lengths over the finish line, with Princeton, the other participant, fully six lengths behind Cornell. The Tigers held on gamely for the first mile, but dropped back steadily in the last half of the race.

Yale's brilliant triumph, witnessed by a throng of probably 14,000, was a crowning stroke in the blue's comeback this season under the American method coaching of Ed Leader, youthful rowing mentor, who began his tasks at New Haven this year after achieving unusual success at the University of Washington.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." For today's question Harry M. Lipsky, 6327 Harper avenue, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

What chance do you believe Tom Gibbons will have against Jack Dempsey in their July 4 bout at Shelby, Montana?

Where Asked.

Clark at Washington street.

The Answers.

F. W. Love, U. S. Hospital, Maywood, accountant—I don't believe Tom Gibbons has much of a chance with Dempsey. If he goes five rounds he'll be doing mighty well. Dempsey is the greatest fighter of the age, and I don't see where any of the heavyweights can cope with him. He is in a class by himself.

Albert Margolis, 1322 South California avenue, druggist apprentice—I don't believe Gibbons with all his science can whip Jack Dempsey. Dempsey is so rugged and delivers a punch so powerful that Gibbons will make a fine showing if he lasts more than six rounds.

B. F. Lucarz, 1513 West Superior street, bookkeeper—I don't believe Gibbons will last four rounds, judging from the way Willard got his. Willard was much the heavier of the two, but Dempsey had the speed and the skill. Gibbons may be a game fighter—if he wasn't he wouldn't have signed the contract with Dempsey.

George C. Dreier, 4705 Lake Park avenue, photographer—If in this contest Gibbons is able to stand up against Dempsey for more than, say, seven rounds there are going to be a lot of surprised men around Chicago. Dempsey isn't going to meet his doom by a man by the name of Tom Gibbons or by any other name—not just yet.

Sol Friedman, 1560 South Albany avenu, student—I don't believe Gibbons stands a chance against Dempsey. That was shown when Harry Greb, the Pittsburgh bouncer, licked Gibbons in their bout last season. I was hoping that the fight would be between Dempsey and Willis.

PARCAUT VS. TALABER.

They Go Anywhere in Their Smooth-Riding, Able Jewett

YOU and YOUR family, also, can go anywhere in your Jewett. It is serving blithely everywhere—doing more than is usually expected of a car—because of its ample power and rugged construction.

Jewett owners enjoy big car riding ease at small car expense. Jewett's springs are 80 per cent of the wheelbase. Jewett weighs 2805 pounds—200 pounds more than any car of its size. Stable riding, restful motion over rough roads, as in far more costly cars.

Jewett is the only car of its class built by a maker of finest quality cars. This means Paige-built motor, Paige-type clutch and transmission; Paige-Timken axles front and rear. Ball-bearing steering spindles. All-steel universal joints with sealed-in oil—not grease—good for 15,000 miles without oiling. Six-inch-deep frame; beautiful, well-built bodies.

And Jewett STAYS GOOD! High-pressure, hollow crank-shaft oiling system forces 2 gallons of oil per minute through all main and connecting rod bearings. Wear is long postponed; smooth silence is Jewett's assurance for thousands of miles before overhauling need be thought of.

Paige engineering shows in Jewett's every feature, particularly in its ease of handling. Women love to drive it. They don't have to learn how. Simple, silent gear changing with a bare 3-inch movement of the lever. Clutch is gentle and gradual. Brakes work easily, positively.

The 37,000 Jewett owners drive from 2 to 60 miles an hour in high—a crawling pace in traffic, flashing speed in the open. Up most any hill in high, fast or slow [a terrific test]. Accelerate from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds in high gear. [Try it with any other car.] Thousands of Jewett Six owners are glad they graduated from fours.

Little wonder that Jewett has won warm appreciation as a family car. And never has the demand for Jewett been so great as it is right now. A demonstration will delight your family. No obligation, of course. [30-C]

MOTHER:—"Why didn't we ever find this place before?"

DAD:—"We never had a car that could make that sand hill until we got the Jewett."

WANT TO LEASE AN ISLAND?

WANT to spend your vacation this season on an island in Robinson Crusoe style? Well, you can do it in the state of Wisconsin without it costing you much either, as that state has several hundred islands which it will lease for camping purposes.

For a number of years Wisconsin has had on hand a fine assortment of islands but apparently not many people have been interested in leasing them. Islands galore have been on the bargain counter without many customers. These bits of land are not buried in the heart of nowhere. They are all sizes and descriptions.

If you are interested in this island leasing business get in touch with the Wisconsin conservation commission, Capitol building, Madison, Wis. They will send you a complete list of the islands that are available for leasing and then by means of your map you can determine just where it is located.

After all is said and done there is nothing like a lowly garden hackle for trout fishin' early in the season when the streams are high and the water dirty. At that stage in the trout fishin' game a small spinner and worms are the berries, although, for various reasons, the trout fans are reluctant to admit that this combination is ever used. But here is J. V. Knight of Kalamazoo, Mich., reporting on his early season luck, and note how the trick was turned.

"Just returned from Irons where two of us had some real sport for several days. We landed several dozen fine trout. These were mostly rainbows which were caught in the Little Manistee river. We got one rainbow that weighed four pounds and he was some scrapper. The biggest brook weighed one and one quarter pounds. We caught most of them with a small spoon and worms, a few on a fly. Fishing is not very good there yet as it is too early. We were also fishing a small creek a short distance up the river from Irons and from it took about thirty of the prettiest brook trout I ever saw. These ran about eleven inches in length."

Walter Wesbrook of Detroit will return to Chicago Saturday to defend his title in the Sherwood cup tennis tournament to be held here from May 26 to June 3. Wesbrook copped the singles last year. SPORT HERRMANN ONE OF CREW ON YACHT IN FAMED BERMUDA RACE

CHICAGO will be represented in the annual New York to Bermuda yacht race which starts on June 12, U. J. [Sport] Herrmann having been selected by William H. Hand of New Bedford, Mass., internationally famous naval architect, to help sail the Blackhawk in the race. With the exception of being three feet longer, the Blackhawk is a duplicate of Mr. Herrmann's 55 foot sailboat Swastika, now in the Chicago harbor.

The New York-Bermuda race is considered the greatest American yacht race, and the conditions provide that the boats must go to Bermuda under sail. On the return trip, due to head winds, each boat is permitted to carry and use an amount of gasoline equal to the amount carried by the smallest entrant in the race.

Mr. Herrmann, winner of many sailing races on the great lakes, probably will be the only inland sailor on any boat in the Atlantic classic.

The Old Copyreader

"Many a story is hopelessly written, but the story of life is hopelessly rotten."

NOT SO'S YOU NOTICE IT.

Here is a hat shop and there is a shoe store,
Next is a gown joint, a fur place, and so on;
Two doors away they are fixing a new store
Lingerie: silk—and the further you go on
More will you find of the self-same creation:
Block after block, it's alike everywhere:
Costly displays whose distinct conversation
Speaks but the waste of the sex vulpit fair.

Candy, cosmetics, gems, corsets and mysteries
Not comprehensible to the male noodle;
Lotions and notions and doodads whose histories
Man knoweth not—and the whole darned caboodle
Stacked up to play as His one slickest card
to Her;
All of it fashioned to win Her faint praise—
Yet some have the nerve to remark in regard
to Her
That it's the Woman who pays and who pays!

BACK OF EVERY TELEPHONE IN CHICAGO

GREATER CHICAGO is a wonderful place in which to live and own an Overland or a Willys-Knight motor car. Back of you and your Overland or Willys-Knight are twenty-four local bulwarks of responsibility. Twenty-four strongholds of service. One in every neighborhood close-by. And closer yet by the reach of your telephone.

All twenty-four have a family interest in you and your car. All twenty-four feel bound to you by the bond of your ownership. All twenty-four pledge you the enjoyment of more than the usual motoring satisfaction.

The new Overland and new Willys-Knight are well worthy of this staunch backing. They are the greatest cars Willys-Overland ever produced—and at the lowest price. The public recognizes in them a greater value far beyond the measure of price.

No other car near Overland price gives you an all-steel body, with a lasting baked-enamel finish—or the buoyant riding ease yielded by Triplex Springs (Patented)—or duplicates the sturdy Overland axle construction, with so many Timken and New Departure bearings. Remarkable economy is derived both by great dependability and a gasoline mileage of twenty-five to the gallon.

The Willys-Knight is noted for both its beautiful coachwork and the marvelous Willys-Knight sleeve-valve engine—the engine that actually improves with use. It is even smoother and more powerful at 15,000 miles than when new. Carbon only makes it better. There are no valves to grind. And many Willys-Knight owners report 50,000 miles and more without a single engine adjustment. With cars so built, and service thus organized, it is plainly evident why Overland and Willys-Knight are so rapidly multiplying on the streets of Greater Chicago.

MOTOR-DOM

Race Stars Groom Mounts for Great Speedway Contest

Experts Find Light Cars Tend to "Shimmy" in Trials.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 19.—Unusually bad weather in Indianapolis drove the straw hatted California daredevils of racing to the garages and hotel rooms this week, but still they continue to arrive for the practice laps in preparation for the international 500 mile race at the speedway Wednesday, May 30.

Tommy Milton, who drove the fastest official mile on wheels—at the rate of 156.4 miles an hour—winner of the 1921 international event and runner-up in last year's championship, arrived from California in his touring car. He made the long drive to get hardened for the race and was in excellent condition on his arrival. Despite the cold spap, he hustled his racing car to the track to get set to take advantage of better weather.

Bennett Hill, diminutive jockey of racing cars, who has caused Jimmy Murphy plenty of trouble in recent coast races by hounding him every step of the distance of the events and finishing second to the champion by feet in several drives, is also in town and ready to start the task of shrinking his 183 cubic inch Miller special down to the 122 cubic inch regulation required for the Indianapolis race.

Several of the cars are being altered to meet the local requirements, which will be adopted for future racing events throughout the country. By shortening the stroke of the motors this is accomplished and in some tests these remodeled cars have been practically as rapid as the brand new 122 inch mounts which have been built up for future competitions.

Jerry Wonderlich, the only driver so far named to man the three car Duesenberg team, is ready for the track, but the Duesenberg cars are not quite ready for the bricks. Wonderlich is spending the time playing hand ball, and golf when the weather permits, getting in condition for the gruelling 500 miles.

Leon Duray and Frank Elliott, two of the husky laddies of speed, large enough to challenge Jack Dempsey, are working away on their mounts and will take to the track at the first beckoning rays of Old Sol.

Jimmy Murphy, the champion; Eddie Hearne, Harry Hartz, and Cliff Durant, all members of Cliff Durant's expensive racing outfit, are on hand, and Earl Cooper, the other member of the five car squadron, is expected within a few days. Harian Fengler, "boy speed king," only 23 years old, is training at the track.

Count Zborowski, Polish nobleman and American citizen; Prince de Cystria, of old line French aristocracy; Pierre de Viscaya of Spain and Paris, Raoul Piganti and Martin de Alsaga of the Argentine, all members of the French Bugatti team, are on hand for the trials.

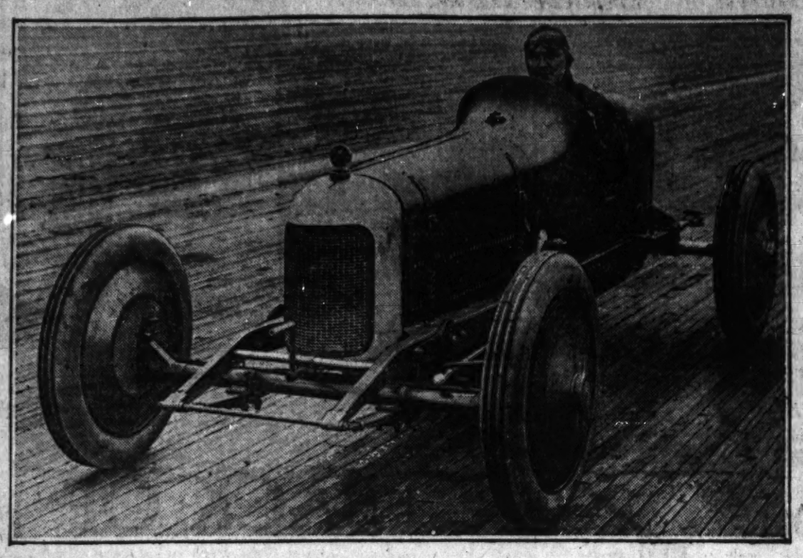
The Durant outfit has been spending most of its time working behind closed doors. It is an open secret that there is considerable anxiety on the problem of holding the fast flying Durant speed bugs to the track. That they have the speed is universally conceded by all drivers and mechanics.

But the cars have shown a tendency to shimmy on the turns and get their rear wheels in the air. The Buggatis are not as highly finished as the Durants, but they are sturdy and able to keep a fast, steady pace.

THINGS TO LOOK AT.

When the motor fails to start there are three systems to inspect—valve system, ignition system, and carburetion system.

INTERNATIONAL STARS TO FLASH ON SPEEDWAY.



Cliff Durant, millionaire sportsman and one of the most daring of the big league speedway stars, is preparing to prove in the Indianapolis speed combat just how light an automobile can be made and still preserve its margin of safety at sustained speeds. Here he is in one of the 122 cubic inch displacement Durant Specials now competing in the speed trials on the Hoosier oval. It is one of the smallest and at the same time most sturdy of the 1923 motor thoroughbreds.

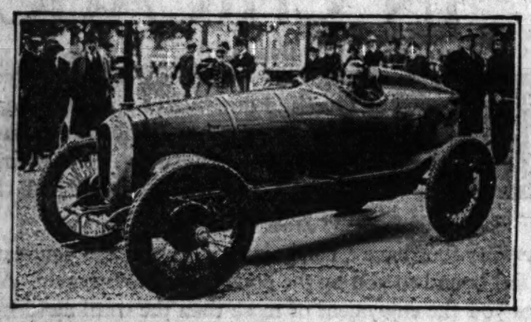
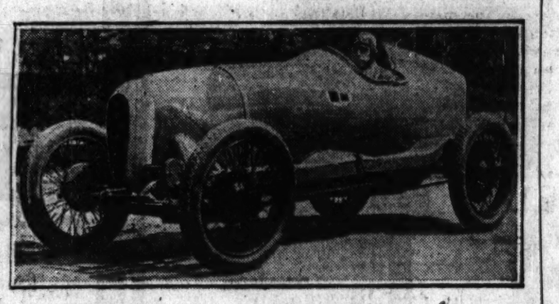
Meet the international racing champ! Jimmy Murphy, with the mile of Irish smile, is ready for all comers desiring to wrest away his title in the Indianapolis speed argument. He is driving a Durant Special in the big race. He won last year's classic with an average speed of 94.48 miles an hour and is the only American to annex the French Grand Prix title, having taken the Le Mans race in 1921.



Ancient Spanish traditions stretch behind Pierre de Viscaya, captain of the Bugatti race team, pictured here in the mount he will ride in the Decoration day speed joust. Son of a Spanish marquis and an all around athlete, he has annexed many championships on continental tracks.

[Keystone View Photo.]



Bertrand de Faucigny-Lunings, Prince de Cystria, is the formal title which this real he-prince leaves behind him when he tilts his tiny Bugatti Special on to the speedway bricks. He is another international light entered for the Memorial day classic.

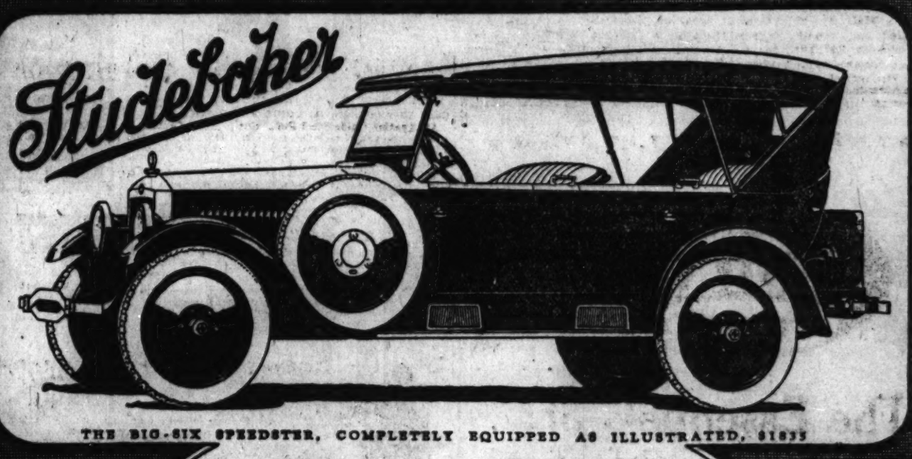
Studebaker



THE BIG-SIX SPEEDSTER, COMPLETELY EQUIPPED AS ILLUSTRATED, $1835

$45,000,000 Worth of Studebaker Big-Sixes in 1922

The public paid more than forty-five million dollars for new Studebaker Big-Six automobiles in 1922, buying more of this model than of any other car selling for the same or a greater price!

In the entire world there were only eleven other automobile manufacturers whose total sale of all models equaled the sale of Studebaker Big-Sixes for 1922, and no other manufacturer sold as many cars of the Big-Six class. In addition to the Big-Six, Studebaker builds the Special-Six and the Light-Six in large volume.

For the first quarter of 1923, Big-Six sales showed an increase of 70 per cent over the same period of 1922, evidencing the growing popularity of this model.

Big-Six popularity is the result of Big-Six superiority. Materials and workmanship are unexcelled in any car at any price, and unequaled in any other car at the Big-Six price.

With its long 126-inch wheel base, big 4½-inch tires, heavy frame, scientifically distributed load, long Studebaker-made springs, the Big-Six Speedster rides more comfortably than most cars selling at much more money. Its 3¼ x 5 motor delivers a world of power, plenty of speed and a quickness of getaway hard to equal.

The price is the result of quantity production.

The name STUDEBAKER is assurance of quality. It has stood for high grade transportation for seventy-one years.

Two extra wheels complete with tires, tubes and tire covers. Trunk and dust-proof cover. Nickel-plated bumpers, front and rear. One-piece, rain-proof windshield. Automatic windshield cleaner and glare-proof visor. Courtesy lamp. Tonneau light with long extension cord. Combination stop-and-tail light. Quick-action cowl ventilator. Eight-day clock. DIXIE TURNS TO EUROPE TO FILL NEGROES' SHOES

South Is Disturbed Over Move to North.

Washington, D. C., May 19.—[Special.]—Disturbed by the continued migration northward of the south's Negro population, southern statesmen have launched a movement to draw immigrants from Europe, particularly from the Scandinavian countries, to remedy the labor shortage which now menaces its agricultural prosperity.

Senator Dial [Dem., S. C.] announced the first step today following conferences with Minister Wallenberg of Sweden, and Minister Steen of Norway. Additional efforts will be made by industrial agents and commercial organizations to persuade immigrants from northern Europe to settle in the south.

Urge Diverted Crops.

In the same connection, southern leaders are going to try to encourage their land owners to divert some of their attention from cotton and produce a variety of crops.

Senator Dial said that the northward drift of the Negro population has brought the south face to face with a very critical labor situation.

"Our Negro population is leaving rapidly and I am satisfied that many more are going to leave," said Senator Dial. "While many people think that this is to the advantage of the south—and it may be in the long run—yet serious consequences will result to many land owners in the very near future.

Will Stay North, He Says.

"Furthermore, others will say that the Negroes will come back from the north, but this I do not believe—certainly not to any great extent, for the reason that the Negro can live on less than a white man, either at the north or the south and he can underbid the white man in the price of his labor."

PIGGLY WIGGLY HEAD SUED FOR $30,000 ON NOTE

Says He'll Contest Its Legality.

Memphis, Tenn., May 19.—Sidney V. Souers of New Orleans today filed suit in Chancery court here against Clarence Saunders, head of Piggly Wiggly Stores, Inc., to recover $30,000 on a note which, Souers stated, was executed March 28, 1923, and due May 1, payable to the order of the Interstate Trust and Banking company of New Orleans.

Herbert Gannaway, Memphis attorney, said Souers bought the note from the New Orleans bank, and he understood the note was given for money advanced Saunders to aid him in his recent operations in Wall street.

Mr. Saunders announced he would contest the legality of the note.

Mr. Saunders today still claimed the upper hand in what he characterized as an attempt by certain of the "out of town" pool members to oust him from control.

QUIT MEXICO IN 72 HOURS, THREAT TO YANKEES SAYS

Mexico City, May 19.—[By United Press.]—Enemies of the Obregon government have begun a reign of terror here in an attempt, it is believed, to prevent satisfactory solution of the recognition conference now in session. In addition to three attacks made against Americans since the first of the month, it is learned today that officials of the United States in Mexico City have received letters threatening their lives.

United States commissioners at the conference have received numerous anonymous threats ordering them to leave the country within seventy-two hours. At the Landa home, where American Commissioners Charles B. Warren and John Barton Payne are living, police were encamped throughout the night and prevented automobiles passing within two blocks.

President Obregon stated he believed the attacks "of a political nature," and he was "profoundly sorry," because it would have a "bad effect" upon the conference. Despite the threats, the conference continued in session today.

Business Leaders to Invade House in Highway Fight

Springfield Public Hearing May Be Bond Issue Crisis.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

BUSINESS interests in Illinois are preparing to bring Gov. Len Small's political highway bond issue battle to a public crisis in the immediate future through a hearing in the house of representatives on all phases of the $100,000,000 bond bill.

A formal request for a public hearing and debate on the bill has been made by the Associated Road Organizations of Cook County, a federation of the leading highway and motor associations of the state. It is expected that the request will be granted soon after the governor's bill reaches the house. Representatives of twenty-three powerful bodies, civic, commercial, and social, will attend the hearing. They contend that the huge bonding proposal is an economic mistake at this time, and hope to convince legislators that its adoption will result in a certain increase in general taxation.

The men who plan this concerted public opposition have been identified with highway improvement in Illinois ever since the road problem became a transportation issue in the state. They were responsible for the sweeping campaign which first stirred public interest in better highways and which resulted in the original bond issue of $60,000,000 to build the 4,800 mile system of through routes which serves the entire state. They contend that more paved roads are essential and advocate highway building to the last degree, but are opposed to abnormal building methods and the gigantic interest and public costs proposed by the present administration.

Briefly, the association has outlined its opposition on the following grounds: First, that the system of state roads proposed in the bill is, in general, a secondary system of roads of benefit to individual communities rather than to the state as a whole, and as such should be constructed by the accepted county building plan. Second, that the bill places an unfair burden of taxation on some twenty-five counties of the state and will, if bond funds are not sufficient to meet the entire cost, place a huge general tax burden on all of the counties; and third, that the $100,000,000 in bonds will fall far short of accomplishing the work while the unprecedented building program will increase the cost of every building enterprise, public and private, while the rush road job is going forward.

Automobile interests, represented by motorist associations and automobile dealers, point out that car owners are already carrying a maximum tax load and should be protected against the probability of additional class levies to make up any new bond deficit. They have gone on record in favor of adding to the state's mileage each year by using motor license fees as actual road building and maintenance funds rather than paying an estimated interest cost of $40,000,000 to rush through the improvements.

Engineers, after studying the mileage in the new routes drawn by the Small bill, report that the new system totals just 4,500 miles. The bill also proposes to build 1,200 miles of the old state system out of the new fund, or an actual total of 5,700 miles. This work, even at the lowest possible price of $26,000 a mile, they estimate, will cost $148,200,000, without interest, maintenance, or administration charges.

The civic interests are prepared to show that the bill will make twenty-five counties of the state pay for more road mileage than they receive. This unbalanced ratio, they declare, is justified where the roads to be built are through routes serving general traffic. They question the justice of a few counties paying for local roads and short cut routes in communities off the beaten track and hundreds of miles away. In checking up the cost of the proposed roads in relation to assessed valuation they have found that the roads in some counties will be worth more than one-third of the property value of given districts.

It is expected that the main fight in the house of representatives will center on whether Illinois roads of the future shall be built under normal construction methods at a rate of several hundred miles yearly, and paid for by available current funds, or whether they shall be forced through at a rate of 1,000 miles a year by a thirty year public mortgage.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your questions to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." For today's question Mrs. R. Knight, 934 Lorel avenue, Chicago, was awarded $5.

THE QUESTION.

What are the most common discourtesies practiced by autoists?

WHERE ASKED.

State at Randolph street.

THE ANSWERS.

Albert C. Ruthe, 4939 Sheridan road, merchandise man—Every violation of traffic regulations is in itself a discourtesy. As for discourtesies that are not immediately looked upon as traffic law violations the following examples are of common occurrence: disregard for the pedestrian in crowded thoroughfares; driving at night with the cut-out open. By the way, it has rained recently, and perhaps you noticed the pains motorists take in giving you a fine mud spray.

Swan Skogland, 25 West Huron street, plumber — I would say fast driving here on the city streets or speeding on the highways — dangerous to both life and property, therefore a double discourtesy. And the way taxi drivers and a few of the other autoists run right up on you. Of course, they feel safe; their brakes are secure, and all that, but it certainly startles one.

E. K. Wilson, 1515 Monroe street, draftsman — I don't drive a car. I'm only one of three million pedestrians in this city. Individually, we are small and don't occupy much space as compared to an auto, but we are more sensitive, and we are more easily hurt and put out of commission. The point is, iron-hearted autos ought to be a little more considerate of us mortals.

Edgar Barron, 6558 University avenue, hardware dealer—Cutting off other drivers at crossings, and not observing the right-of-way rule to the right hand man. Every driver knows that rule, but he nearly always violates it. Every man for himself isn't courtesy. And all drivers should give a signal before making a turn or coming to a stop. I have noticed that some stop lights don't work.

John Danesky, 2430 North Albany avenue, mail clerk — Reckless driving and speeding. Those are the worst things. Our streets are not railroad tracks or speedways. Next in importance, I believe would come the disobeying of policemen's orders at street crossings. Another annoying habit is hogging the road, preventing one from going ahead safely on the left side.

The Supremacy of the V-Type Principle

In 1914, Cadillac first devoted itself to the manufacture of motor cars equipped with V-Type ninety degree eight-cylinder engines which would be Standard of the World.

Since that time, this Company has produced, with constant refinements, more than 150,000 V-Type eight-cylinder engines and not one of them has ever been replaced by the factory for any reason.

Moreover, in recognition of the supremacy of the V-Type eight-cylinder principle, and of Cadillac's position as its leading exponent, more people have purchased Type 61 than all other cars combined at or above its price range.

Speeding Wheels of Motor Plants Set New Records

Detroit to Produce Total of 370,000 New Cars in May.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., May 19.—[Special.]—The same activity that has prevailed in automobile and truck plants for the last four months or more is continuing unchecked. The industry is now "in high," every department running smoothly, and every manufacturer has his eye on the midnight hour of May 31. It is now almost a foregone conclusion that May will set a new high record for automotive building. The track is clear; the raw material and accessories are being received in sufficient quantities; freight conditions have righted themselves with the full opening of navigation.

Those foremost in the business are confident that the checking up at the end of the month will show figures never before reached. They anticipate a collective output of approximately 370,000 vehicles.

Signs of slowing down were noted this week in but one or two factories. But more than offsetting this, at least six of the larger companies plan to make far more cars during the present month than they did in April, and especially encouraging is the fact that this latter group comprises some of the largest and best known plants.

The advances in the production of Ford cars and trucks alone guarantees a new high total for the month, the schedule of the Ford company for May calling for approximately 140 cars a day more than were produced in April. That plant is now selling twice the number of vehicles as were sold at retail during the same period one year ago. For every ten cars sold orders are received for an even doen.

The Cadillac plant is enjoying its most active period. Factory shipments are averaging 25 per cent more than during the best previous month, and deliveries to owners are also setting new marks. With the plant working on an overtime schedule, the end of the continuance of maximum production and shipment is not visible.

Since Jan. 1 capacity production has been the good word at the Hupp plants. The drive has resulted in sales of nearly as many cars in the first four months of 1923 as for the first six months of 1922, which will be recalled as an active period in the industry. By the end of May more than one-half of Hupp's scheduled 1923 output of 40,000 cars will have been made.

Since the first of the year Columbia cars have been oversold. In April all previous records were broken, and, with greatly increased facilities, the factory expects to ship a maximum of 1,350 sixes this month.

Dort is now stronger than ever before. Orders on hand guarantee peak production for the next four weeks, and a production above normal is assured until the middle of July at least.

Out at the Rickenbacker plant a little squeeze is felt on account of a shortage of material, which is the only limiting factor. The progress of this car has been steady, with a conservative increased production noted each month. Since the first car turned out eighteen months ago, the output has been one of the sensations of the automobile world. Orders are well in excess of the production of seventy-five cars daily.

In Lansing, at the Olds Motor works, the popular indoor sport is the breaking of production records. This has become a monthly occurrence, April figures holding up the marks since the first of the year. A 56 per cent increase in business over the preceding April was recorded by this company.

Stop the Glare.

Believing that hundreds of lives may be saved and thousands of automobile accidents avoided in this country every year by uniformity of laws, the bureau of standards has officially recommended that all states adopt uniform laws regulating automobile headlights.

VACANT LOTS HELP SOME CITIES SOLVE TRAFFIC PROBLEMS

"THE use of vacant city lots is materially aiding the motor traffic situation in some cities," said John C. Long, representing the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, at the National city planning conference at Baltimore. "Louisville has several parking areas of this sort, charging 25 cents per day. San Francisco also utilizes vacant lots in this way.

"Many cities, however, have no open spaces near the business district, and parking buildings are resorted to, where the streets are too narrow to permit parking at the curb for long periods.

"One-way streets are being advocated in some quarters. Portland, Oregon, is shortly to try out such a plan and a similar program is being adopted in Buffalo.

"Many cities, such as Newark, N. J., are finding that there is urgent need for parallel arteries near the present main thoroughfares to care for the growing volume of street traffic."

Model for Modern Automobile Roads to Open in June

WITH the coming of spring work on the completion of the "ideal section" of the Lincoln highway in Lake county, Indiana, thirty-seven miles south of Chicago, has been resumed. The site of the famous road presents a scene of bustling activity, where the contractors, electricians, and the landscape architect's forces are engaged in putting the finishing touches on what has been called the finest section of road on the American continent.

Officials at headquarters of the Lincoln Highway association in Detroit state that all work on the ideal section may be completed by June 15. The paving and the bridge and culvert incorporated in the section were completed last season and the work now being done comprises the grading of the shoulders, construction of the gravel pathway for pedestrians, the installation of the illuminating system for night traffic, and the beautification of the roadsides.

This beautification work, which is under the direction of Jens Jensen, landscape architect, of Chicago, is expected to set a precedent in the handling of roadsides in America. Nothing but native plants and shrubs indigenous to the country in which the section is constructed, will be used, but every effort is being made to develop a harmonious plan which with modifications can be adapted along the Lincoln highway and other main roads anywhere between Omaha and New York.

Interest in the development and maintenance of the ideal section has developed in Lake county. An organization of all property owners along the highway in the county has been proposed, the aim being continuous maintenance of the roadsides and abutting property, as well as the road itself.

The object lesson effect of the section, which was the main purpose behind the generous contribution of the United States Rubber company which enabled the Lincoln Highway association to build the section is being widely noted. Headquarters of the association receive inquiries from every part of the world asking for the specifications and for details in regard to its cost and method of development.

Some time will be required for the beneficial results of the landscape work and planting to become apparent and the association plans to delay the opening ceremony until some time during the summer, when every detail in connection with the project is in final perfect condition.

Carry Bill of Sale.

MOTORISTS touring into Pennsylvania are advised by the Cleveland Automobile club to carry with them either the bill of sale or the license registration card for their car. This is a warning issued yesterday by Secretary Fred K. Caley.

The club has been notified by the Ohio State Automobile association that the Pennsylvania state police are stopping all automobiles from other states, demanding that they show either one or the other.

To avoid delay and annoyance, the warning says, motorists should be prepared to comply promptly upon request of the state police.

Pure Bred Buyers Resent Delays in Receiving Papers

By Frank Ridgway.

Unnecessary delays in the transfer of pure bred cattle certificates of registry from buyer to seller have been reported by farmers to this department. The experience of Charles Holmberg of Libertyville, Ill., related in the accompanying story, is an example of the nature and seriousness of such practices. Perhaps other pure bred breeders are having similar trouble. The Tribune wants to help farmers in these difficulties. Breeders needing help should write to the Agricultural Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

DELAY in the delivery of registration papers on pure bred cattle is becoming one of the most serious handicaps in the agriculturists' campaign to build up better herds of live stock in this country.

Several costly and unnecessary delays in the transferring of certificates from one owner to another have been reported to this department during the last few months. The practice is discouraging, especially to beginners in the pure bred live stock business, and is resented by reliable breeders who know and appreciate the value of carefully kept records.

Typical of the Difficulty.

The experience of Charles Holmberg of Libertyville, Ill., manager of a farm owned by J. M. P., an employé of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, is typical of the breeder's difficulty in getting papers delivered on pure bred animals bought from farmers or through sales organizations thät are inclined to be neglectful in delivering the certificates of registry and transfer to the new owner.

On Nov. 30, 1921, Mr. Holmberg was sent as the representative of J. M. P. to buy Holstein cattle at the dispersion sale of the Robert C. Wahl herd and animals selected from other dairy farms in Waukesha county and held under the auspices of the Waukesha County Holstein Breeders' association at Waukesha, Wis. He bought ten pure bred cows—three from the Wahl herd at Sturgeon Bay, four from W. J. Mann & Son of Waukesha, one from August Kaun of Waterford, two from the Mielenz Dairy and Produce company of Pewaukee, and one from W. J. Leonard of Brookfield.

Some Papers Lost.

The papers on the cows coming from the Kaun and Mielenz herds have been delivered, but on four of the animals—two from the Mann, one from the Wahl, and one from the Leonard herd—the complete delivery of the papers has not been made. And the sale was held a year ago last November. It is generally understood that the breeders' association in charge of the sale sees that the papers are properly delivered.

"Several months ago W. L. Baird, secretary of the Waukesha County Holstein Breeders' association, informed me that he had sent the registration papers on two cows from the Mann herd," explained Mr. Holmberg. "They were sent direct to J. M. P. at THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, but were lost. Since then I have sent the color markings, as requested, two or three times, but so far the papers have not all been delivered.

Call Registrations Held Up.

"I have the registration certificates on the Wahl cow and the Leonard cow, but they are worth little to me because the transfer certificates have not yet been delivered. It is a serious handicap, because during the year and a half we have had the pure breds on the farm these four included in the mixup have dropped seven calves and another one is to be dropped soon, but I am unable to have them registered. They cannot be registered until the papers on their dams are straightened.

"Last fall we bought ten more cows from Wisconsin breeders, and all of their papers came through eventually, most of them in good time. All of these papers, however, have been sent back to the national office for a slight correction. I thought perhaps the trouble I was having in getting the papers on the first cows we bought was an unusual case, but recently other farmers in northern Illinois have told me of similar difficulty in getting registration and transfer certificates delivered on pure bred cattle bought from Wisconsin dairymen," Mr. Holmberg added.

Suggests Calling It Felony.

"Laws should be passed in every state in the Union making it a misdemeanor—I would not consider it extreme to make it a felony—for any man to sell pure bred animals if he is not able to furnish registration papers and transfer certificates within a reasonable length of time after the sale is made," says C. M. Long, manager of field work for the Holstein Friesian Association of America. "I would consider twelve months a reasonable length of time to allow the seller to deliver the papers or make a satisfactory settlement.

"If a man gave me a worthless check, it would be considered a felony and I could have him put in the penitentiary. That law has been in operation several years, and few, if any, have been sent to prison; it has not been necessary; men realizing the seriousness of the offense make the proper settlement. This check law is justified on the grounds of getting money under false pretense.

"The man who sells pure bred animals and does not furnish proper registration papers has just as truly obtained money under false pretense as the man who issues a worthless check. Because the papers on these animals affect the offspring, he has generally done more damage than if he had given the buyer a worthless check."

Careless Cause Trouble.

There is a certain amount of red tape to go through when having animals registered and transfers made, and delays are often unavoidable. The practice of neglecting to deliver papers is perhaps not extensive, but a few careless dealers cause a great deal of dissatisfaction among new pure bred breeders, causing them to wonder if they have not been defrauded and had grade animals instead of pure bred animals sold to them, according to Mr. Long. Of course, older breeders are less suspicious; they know how to get things straightened out. It is only in rare cases that fraud is intended among pure bred cattle breeders.

Breeders usually consider that at least 50 per cent of the value of an ordinary pure bred animal depends upon its registration papers. With exceptional pure bred animals, the grade price has no relation to its value as a breeder.

Making the Transfer.

When a dairyman buys a pure bred Holstein animal, the seller should make out an application for the transfer of this animal to the new owner and, with the proper fee, send it to the Holstein Friesian Association of America, Brattleboro, Vt. When the transfer is completed, the certificate of transfer is forwarded to the new owner. The seller should give the certificate of registry to the new owner at the time the sale is made.

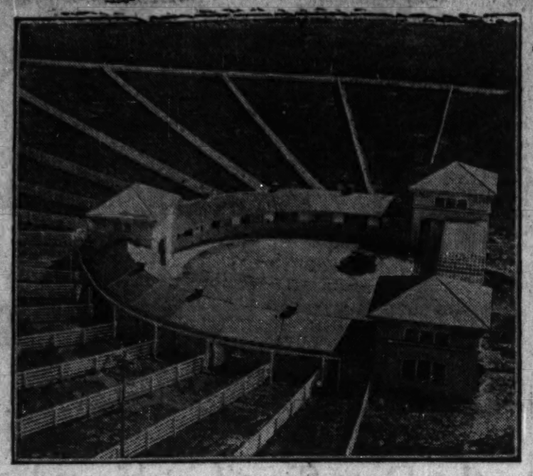
In the case of Holsteins, a diagram on the back of the registration certificate should correspond to the white and black color markings on the animal. In the case of young animals that have not been registered, or the seller is not able to furnish a certificate of registry, the buyer would be justified in placing at least a part of the purchase money in escrow in a bank until the papers are delivered.

Management Holds Money.

At all properly managed consignment sales of pure bred live stock the management holds all money from the seller until the papers are procured, and a prospective buyer at these sales should make sure this is done.

"As a manager of pure bred cattle sales I have held up the entire purchase price pending the delivery of papers on animals," adds Mr. Long, who has been field man working among dairy cattle breeders for six or seven years. "This has occasionally taken six months."

Down on the Farm



[Wide World Photo.]

WHERE ALL LANES LEAD TO ONE BARN—Breaking the old traditional practice of building fences around the barn, W. R. and W. A. Pickering, Hereford cattle breeders of Belton, Mo., have worked out an unique way of making bull pens.

Here is shown their bull barn, built in the form of a horseshoe, with the corral fences radiating from the semi-hug shaped barn like spokes in a wagon wheel, dividing several acres of ground into seven separate runway pastures. In this way they avoid bull fights and save labor and trouble in opening gates.

Send your "Down On the Farm" pictures to the agricultural editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

GARDEN NOTES

Digging dandelions is still regarded as one of the safe methods of getting rid of this lawn pest. They can be kept under control if dug up before the plants mature seed. This must be done early in the season. Plants that bob up on the lawns later in the season must be dug in the autumn.

There are many guesses being made now about how big the peach crop will be this summer. Injury from freezes during March and April are reported from many peach sections. Plums and cherries have been hurt, too, but apples seem to be coming through in good shape.

Get ready for the early invasion of cucumber beetles. A dust preparation is made by mixing one part of calcium arsenate and twenty parts of gypsum. Sprinkle it over the young plants. An Iowa entomologist says that this is one of the best remedies.

Increased yields of potatoes where growers have used certified seed are boosting the acreage of certified tubers and encouraging more and more truckers and gardeners to plant them. The acreage of certified seed potatoes has jumped in this country from 3,750 acres in 1919 to more than 17,000 last year, with a yield of 2,273,900 bushels, according to a government report.

U. S. Bulletins Aid to Farmers and Gardeners

Here is the government's list of bulletins and circulars that are of value to farmers and gardeners in June and may be obtained, free of charge, by writing to the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.:

Farmers' bulletin 833, "Harvesting Hay With the Sweep Rake"; 842, "Methods of Protection Against Lightning"; 863, "Irrigation of Grain"; 871, "Fresh Fruits and Vegetables as Conservers of Other Staple Foods"; 872, "The Boilworm, or Corn Earworm"; 876, "Making Butter on the Farm"; 943, "Haymaking"; 956, "Curing Hay on Trucks"; 959, "The Spotted Garden Slug"; 975, "The Control of European Foulbrood"; 977, "Hay Caps"; 984, "Farm and Home Drying of Fruits and Vegetables"; 1120, "Control of Apple Powdery Mildew"; 1198, "Swarm Control"; 1217, "The Green Bug, or Spring Grain Aphis"; 1225, "The Potato Leafhopper and Its Control"; 1252, "Sawflies Injurious to Rose Foliage"; 1286, "Preparation of Peaches for Market"; 1290, "The Bulk Handling of Grain."

Department circular 98, "The Installation of Dust Collecting Fans on Threshing Machines for Prevention of Explosions and Fires and Grain Cleaning"; 214, "Fusarium Tuber Rot of Potatoes"; 217, "Anthracnose of Muskmelons"; 238, "United States Grades for Potatoes, Recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture."

Bill Before the House.

Coöperative marketing acts have been passed in twenty-six states. A coöperative marketing bill is now before the house in Illinois. It is said California growers want to establish headquarters in Chicago, but Illinois laws do not work with their system of coöperative marketing. If this bill is passed in Illinois, Chicago will at once become the head and front of the coöperative system, farm leaders say.

Co-Op Potatoes Next

In Minnesota, Wisconsin, and North and South Dakota potato growers are organizing a producers' pool to market the 1924 crop of tubers.

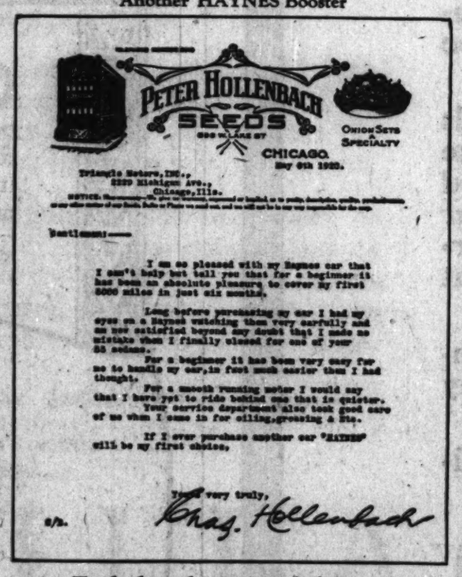
The new improved Haynes 57 Standard Touring Car—5 passengers (Trunks furnished at extra charge)

"The first 5,000 miles are the hardest"
But not for Haynes owners!

Another HAYNES Booster



PETER HOLLENBACH SEEDS — CHICAGO — May 9th 1923.

Triangle Motors, Inc., 2229 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:—

I am so pleased with my Haynes car that I can't help but tell you that for a beginner it has been an absolute pleasure to cover my first 5000 miles in just six months.

Long before purchasing my car I had my eyes on a Haynes watching them very carefully and am now satisfied beyond any doubt that I made no mistake when I finally closed for one of your 55 sedans.

For a beginner it has been very easy for me to handle my car, in fact much easier than I had thought.

For a smooth running motor I would say that I have yet to ride behind one that is quieter.

Your service department also took good care of me when I came in for oiling, greasing & etc.

If I ever purchase another car "HAYNES" will be my first choice.

Yours very truly,
Chas. Hollenbach
s/s.

If there is any time when a car can cause worry—when the slightest trouble can create alarm—it is when a man who has never driven before takes a brand new car out alone.

A car which runs smoothly and performs perfectly then is a car worth having!

Read what Mr. Hollenbach says about his first 5,000 miles in his Haynes. Whether you are a veteran or a beginner, you, too, will find similar satisfaction. See the Haynes 57 Standard Touring Car at $1595 (F.O.B. FACTORY)

Motor Trucks May Solve Tangle for Rail Terminals

IMPROVEMENT of the entire transportation system of the country, through relieving the railroads of costly short haul business, was predicted by Roy D. Chapin, vice president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, speaking at the seventh annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce in New York.

"Actual competition between rail and motor carriers today is negligible," he said, "and where it does exist it is largely due to the fact that the rail lines, suffering from undue regulation, have been cramped beyond reason and, naturally, have been unable to provide adequate facilities.

"The most impressive fact which any survey brings out is that the field of the motor truck is essentially supplementary, usually for short hauls—in fact, 86 per cent of the motor truck haulage is under seventy miles—and conversely the cost of railroad haulage decreases per mile as the length of the trip is increased.

"The railroads instead of coming to the center of the city for freight terminals could afford to move them out, selling their expensive downtown properties. Not only would terminal charges be lessened thereby but the charge to the average merchant would be lowered, since a trucking movement is necessary anyhow, and also his truck could move more quickly if it did not have to go through crowded city streets or wait for hours at overloaded platforms.

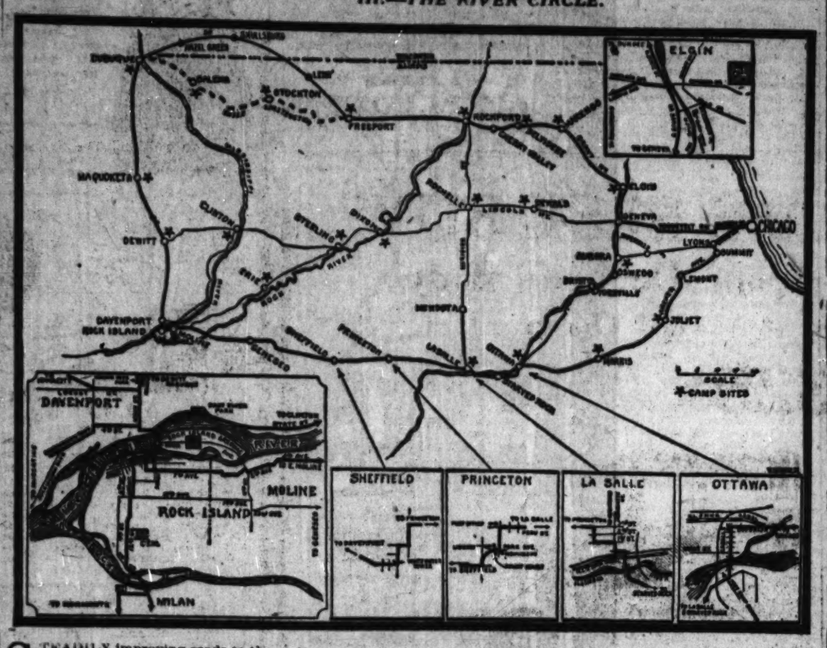
"Since the whole structure of business activity rests upon transportation, it is evident that we must use all our facilities in the most efficient way. There is a field for each form, and the public will demand in each particular case that form which can give the best service."

PRICE TOO HIGH.

South Africa's motorcycle business consists, according to Vice Consul Carpenter, of high prices are reported as do the automobile there.

Tribune Tours

III.—THE RIVER CIRCLE.



STEADILY improving roads to the west and northwest have opened new vistas of the open road to hundreds of touring fans who, for years, have held to the old, beaten paths in country driving through Illinois. Here is a tour suggestion which affords a 500 mile circle trip in fair weather over newly improved roads which will all be completed before the season ends.

From Chicago the trip leads southwest via Ogden avenue and Archer road to Joliet, and follows the concrete Valley way to Ottawa and Starved Rock, a distance of about ninety-five miles. From the park it continues on pavement to La Salle and Peru, using the state-marked gravel detour and the Princeton road to Princeton.

New state paving is complete with the exception of an eight mile marked detour into Rock Island. From Davenport, Ia., gravel and graded dirt roads lead north to Dubuque. They are well cared for, but are always affected by heavy rains. From Dubuque graded dirt, clay, gravel, and some paving leads east through lower Wisconsin to Freeport, a detour for the new Grant highway. From Freeport concrete paving leads back into Chicago with the exception of one short detour around a new bridge between Rockford and Elgin. The exact round trip mileage is 470.4.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

GENERAL prosperity on the Pacific coast is reflected by the heaviest demand for automobiles in the history of the industry, according to J. I. Farley, sales director of the Auburn Automobile company, who has completed a five weeks' tour of the big business centers in the west. The permanent return to normalcy on the coast, he declares, is opening an unprecedented market for eastern manufactured products.

Harry N. Fowler, veteran organizer of Chicago's motor row, is behind a new venture which he intends to make national in its scope. As central west distributor for Blake shock absorbers he has opened a headquarters salesroom at 2121 Michigan avenue, with Ned Jarvis as general manager, and is perfecting a national distribution organization.

Sales of Ford cars and trucks for the first quarter of 1923 reached the enormous total of 395,962, according to factory announcement. This is an increase of 135 per cent over the same months last year.

A system of triple testing and exhaustive running-in of parts on all cars turned out of the factory has resulted in announcement by the Stutz Motor Car company that their models do not require the usual breaking in period experienced by most car owners. Under the system new Stutz cars are driven at seventy miles an hour over long courses as a final factory test.

NEW MAPS READY

New Tribune automobile trail maps are now ready for distribution.

The maps are numbered from 1 to 40. Each map shows the towns and cities, highways, mileages, camp sites, type of roads, and how the trails are marked in the given districts of the United States.

The Tribune is distributing these essential guides at actual cost—10 cents each. All official road information and touring advice is free.

In writing for information, please inclose 12 cents in stamps where a map is desired. The charge to cover cost of the map and return postage. Address "Motordom," Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

Or call at The Tribune Public Service Bureau, 11 South Dearborn street, for personal attention and the new maps.

Big Crown Point Card

Arthur Chevrolet and Clifford Woodbury are among the stars who will appear in races scheduled for this year over the half mile dirt track at Crown Point, Ind. The first event is set for Sunday, May 27.

The Crown Point races are held under the auspices of the American Legion. Manager Guy D. Smith announces improvements in the track and the grand stand which will seat 3,000. Races at five, ten, and twenty-five miles will feature the opening program. The second card is scheduled for Sunday, June 17. Proceeds of the meetings establish a fund for the erection of a clubhouse for the American Legion at Crown Point.

REAR VIEW MIRRORS.

The state of New Jersey has a law making the use of rear view mirrors compulsory on passenger cars and motor trucks.

SHEEP—Western shorn lambs yesterday	12.75@15.60
One month ago	9.25@12.00
One year ago	10.75@12.75

General average price of hogs dropped to the lowest point since December, 1921, at $7.50, while extreme top price equaled the low mark in the same length of time at $7.85, on an uneven week-end trade. Sales yesterday ranged from a shade higher to 15c lower, a number of transactions reflecting the discount, especially weighty "packers," which accumulated during the week and comprised a large part of the 4,000 estimated in the pens at the close. Pigs were 50@75c under the week's high time.

Receipts of hogs last week at 173,800 stands heaviest in about six weeks, being 200 larger than previous week, 35,100 larger than a year ago, and 30,100 above the ten year average. The corresponding week in 1919 was credited with 192,296 hogs, about the largest on record for this time of the year. Estimated average weight at 229 lbs gained 4 lbs over a week ago, stands 4 lbs lighter than a year ago, and 5 lbs. above the ten year average. Last week's general average price at $7.70 equaled previous week, stands $3.00 under a year ago, and $4.50 below the ten year average.

Another short supply helped last week's cattle market, which closed at high point for the month so far, with week's general average price of good beef steers equaling high week of last January at $9.35. The high week in opening month this year top steers reached $11.85, while best offerings the last week went at $10.50. The "spread" in values at present is unusually narrow for this time of the year, few desirable beef steers selling below $8.50. Closing prices were strong to 25c above a week ago.

Sheep Receipts Small.

Smallest week's sheep receipts this year at 52,400, together with a wide outlet for desirable grades, advanced lamb values $1.00@1.50 during last week, while aged stock closed steady to 50c higher. California springers shared in a large part of the advance, selling upwards to $17.50 at the close and carrying considerably lighter "sorts" than earlier in the week, when $17.00 secured the best. California offerings at $17.50 stands 15c above the extreme high time last year and $2.00 above the opening of the 1922 season. Woolskin Colorado lambs at the close experienced the first reaction in some time.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 22,000 cattle, 48,000 hogs, and 12,000 sheep, against 22,639 cattle, 45,504 hogs, and 6,871 sheep a week ago, and 22,639 cattle, 59,869 hogs, and 17,610 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 57,000 cattle, 270,000 hogs, and 60,000 sheep, against 50,561 cattle, 165,195 hogs, and 65,874 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs for Monday range from 40,000 to 56,000. F. Gehrmann marked 40,000; G. M. Nicoll, 42,000; J. M. Waters, 44,000; W. H. Overman, 46,000; E. R. Gentry, 47,000; R. W. Oake, 48,000; H. Williams and W. S. Nicholson, 52,000; F. W. Waddell and F. R. Burrows, 53,000, and H. Pattison, 56,000.

ST. LOUIS-FRISCO RAILROAD CAN'T BUY I. & G. N. LINE

Washington, D. C., May 19.—The St. Louis-San Francisco Railway company today was denied authority by the interstate commerce commission to purchase control of the International-Great Northern Railroad company in Texas. The commission declared it was "unable to find that the acquisition of the International company by the St. Louis-San Francisco will be in the public interest." It pointed out that tentative government plans for general railroad consolidation provide for grouping the International with the Missouri Pacific and declared the largest interchange of traffic from the International was with the Missouri Pacific.

Under hte proposed terms of sale, the St. Louis-San Francisco would have acquired 75,000 shares of the capital stock of the International-Great Northern at $27.75 per share and would have financed the transaction by issuing $2,000,000 in notes. The International company owns and operates 1,159 miles of road, extending from Longview to Laredo and Fort Worth to Houston.

OFFICIAL WEATHER FORECAST.

The official forecast for today and tomorrow and yesterday's table of records follow:

Indiana—Unsettled Sunday, probably showers in east portion, cooler north and central portions; Monday partly cloudy, probably showers in south and west portions.
Lower Michigan—Showers and thunderstorms Sunday, cooler west portion; Monday partly cloudy; cooler southeast portion; fresh to strong shifting winds Sunday with squalls.

RAILROAD NOTES

Freight business on the railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis continues to be offered at a record rate for this season of the year, according to officials. The traffic is well distributed, and all lines of business appear to be sharing in the general prosperity. Traffic conditions generally are favorable. Railroads are receiving new equipment and the traffic is being handled in good shape. Officials of southern roads do not find any ab

BY SCRUTATOR.

Although there is an American statistical society over a century old, we still have plenty of statistics which merit James G. Blaine's racy classification of lies, in which he awarded the laurel of superlativity to statistics. Our government produces both kinds, one by the ton from the bureaus, the other in the Congressional Record.

Within a period of less than forty days one of our newer statesmen recently declared: (1) that the farmer gets only 37 cents out of the dollar that the laboring man pays for his product, and the laboring man gets less than 35 cents of the dollar the farmer pays for the working man's product; (2) that the farmers and working men together own 65 per cent of the bank deposits of the country, and yet the Wall street money devils don't want a farmer on the federal reserve board. Truly the farmer and workingman have achieved a miracle of thrift to possess 65 per cent of the bank deposits after being robbed of 65 per cent of the fruits of their labor.

The statesman has probably not even yet noted his own figures and consequently has not furnished an explanation. The farmer's "37 per cent" has become a classic. Everybody has heard of it. Apparently few know that farmers and miners together constitute less than 29 per cent of the number of people working in the country. Some 71 per cent are engaged in manufacturing, transportation, and distribution. This may be too many, but if they didn't get something like 65 per cent of the national income, they'd be pretty hungry. Of course, many of these people are middle men. That middle men are unnecessary is proved by the fact that there is a large class of Americans, who dispense entirely with their services — breast-fed babies.

The fact that such stories of the wholesale robbery of the producers of this country cannot only be repeated with impunity, but capitalized into United States senatorships proves—well what does it prove?

Mainly that our race only recently moved out of caves. Ogres and demons were useful in the childhood of the race. They prevented too much straying from the parental caverns. They are still popular in the nursery, despite all the newer psychological fads and studies of child life. We get all of our most valuable hunches at that age, and it's no wonder that we carry along some of the other sort.

William Gibbs McAdoo will be interested in this paragraph. A weekly paper in Iowa recently carried a signed story in which the writer declared in all seriousness that American railroads make $25,000,000,000 profit every year. Now, Mr. McAdoo had those roads in his keeping for nearly two years. Under the law, the rent he had to pay for them was only about one billion a year. Where is the other twenty-four billion? If he had collected it he could have paid for the war in cash, cancelled the allied debts, and been elected President for life. It looks like somebody put something over on him.

The interesting thing about this story is the author believes it and would cheerfully be burned at the stake for his faith. For years he has been a familiar figure to editors in the Rockies and short grass country. He has it all figured out, too. The interstate commerce commission's figures are all false, he is sure, and the fact that $25,000,000,000 is about half of the income of the whole American people doesn't worry him and undoubtedly never occurred to most of his readers.

Can civilization continue to exist on such a foundation of delusion? Why, sure it can! All the world has been reading recently of the excavation of the ruins of a splendid civilization which persisted for centuries and was loyally served on by millions who revered tom cats and worshiped crocodiles. Civilization isn't a matter of what people believe or think. It's 90 per cent habit, apparently.

The vast majority of Americans have the habit of working and paying their debts. As long as these habits persist the country's safe, with any kind of statistics or politics. Nations and races have been known to lose these habits, however. Just now the wise men are not agreed. Dr. Lothrop Stoddard would have one explanation; Billy Sunday, another. The chances are both are partly right.

Fraudulent Oil Stock Promotions.

The ruthless methods of E. C. Kingsbury, promoter of the Consolidated Producers and Refiners company, a $2,500,000 project of Fort Worth, Tex., who attempted to frighten stockholders into changing their shares for stock of the Bankers Oil corporation with threats based on a decision of a Texas court on common law trusts which indicated that they are liable for the debts of the company, are described in a report of the national vigilance committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which has made a careful investigation into his activities.

The Consolidated Producers and Refiners company was formed during 1919 in Fort Worth, under a declaration of trust, with the following men as trustees: E. C. Kingsbury, C. H. Kreigh, N. P. Johnson, C. M. Lamason, and B. C. Duke. Several of these men were identified with the Duke Consolidated Oil company and some are also mentioned as being closely associated with other Kingsbury promotions.

The report shows that previous to activities in Fort Worth, the license of E. C. Kingsbury & Co. to sell stock in Denver, Colo., was revoked by the department of safety in that city. The revocation estopped Kingsbury's company from selling shares of the Riverton Wyoming Refining company, and all other promotional stocks. It was based on alleged misrepresentations and false statements made by the agents of the concern.

The promoters employed the "merger" scheme with its attendant exchange of stock and additional payment feature, which we have described in previous articles. They also participated in the profits accruing to the concern's stock selling agents by way of commission because at least two of the Consolidated Producers and Refiners company trustees were interested in the firm of Howard & Co., so-called "investment bankers," named as fiscal agents. The firm of Howard & Co. received 30 per cent commission from the sale of the Consolidated stock.

The declaration of trust under which the Consolidated company operated specifically authorized the acquisition of certain oil and gas leases owned in part by E. C. Howard, Howard & Co., and O. W. Peterson. A direct participation by Kingsbury as a partner in Howard & Co. is traceable in this uncontrolled expenditure.

The trustees, in a letter to Consolidated stockholders during October, 1919, stated among other things:

"We are building a great, big, substantial oil refining and pipe line company to continue in business for all time to come, and we know that such a company is sure to become a dividend earner and a profit maker for its stockholders that will please all of you. You are fortunate in owning stock in this company. Its continued ownership and the increase of your holdings to the number of shares to which you are entitled under this adjustment will assure you of an income from this stock that should make you independent if you own any considerable amount of it. The present operations of the company and our estimated earnings justify the belief that the stock will be worth ten for one within a short time."

Lending color to the alleged advantages of purchasing the stock was a postscript added by Howard & Co., the fiscal agents, stating:

"Our personal knowledge of the affairs of Consolidated Producers and Refiners company is such that we heartily indorse everything said by the trustees, and we unhesitatingly recommend this stock as a high class investment security."

In 1920 Kingsbury offered his stockholders at par an issue of $300,000 "gold bonds." He said in one of his letters:

"You cannot fail to get back your additional money and by buying the 'bonds' now you can be made safe on your whole investment with this company."

The next year, 1921, Kingsbury wrote the stockholders of the Consolidated, saying:

"It is very gratifying to be able to report the substantial progress that has been made by us during the last few months and to assure all of you that our splendid refinery at Tiffin now is substantially fully completed and will be ready for operation by the time this letter reaches you."

Investigation develops the fact that the refinery at Tiffin, Tex., has never been operated by the Consolidated.

After approximately three years, the Consolidated Producers and Refiners company merged with the Bankers Oil corporation and stockholders were required to purchase, for cash, Bankers Oil stock equal to 20 per cent of their Consolidated holdings.

A letter signed by both W. W. Walker, president of the Bankers Oil corporation, and E. C. Kingsbury was mailed to Consolidated stockholders, and said:

"Remember that your Consolidated stock is of no value except to make this transfer. Remember also that your Consolidated stock is in an association that the upper courts of Texas have decided is a partnership, in which all of the stockholders are personally liable for the debts of the association and that you can avoid such liability by transferring into Bankers stock because it is a corporation, not an association, and there will be no personal liability upon you as stockholders of the Bankers Oil corporation."

This letter was used as a club to force the exchange of stock and to obtain more cash from an already deluded clientele. It illustrates the ruthless practices employed in leading investors into the concern under rosy promises and later "squeezing" them by threats.

An interesting feature of Kingsbury's stock selling methods is in the fact that reports to stockholders invariably contained appeals for more funds, picturing the company as in dire need and threatening them with a loss of their previous investments unless they complied with the demand followed by the usual rainbow; while the letters which went out to prospects who had not yet been initiated into Kingsbury's art of reloading painted an entirely different picture.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Hammering by speculators for the decline resulted in the establishment of new low prices by a score of representative stocks and brought about a new low average in a list of twenty important industrials. A sharp rally at the close carried many weak shares a point or more above their low points of the day, but was not sufficient to show net gains in the final quotations. U. S. Steel again sagged to a new low price for the year at 96⅝, rallying later to 97, where it closed ⅛ point off on the day. Other stocks which dropped to minimum prices for the year included Crucible and Great Northern Ore.

Selling pressure again forced recessions of 1 to 5 points in many representative issues, new low marks being recorded among others by Central Leather, common and preferred; American Hide and Leather preferred; Studebaker, Kelly Springfield, Goodrich, Ajax, American Agricultural Chemical, Davison Chemical, Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred, American Woolen, Cluett Peabody, American Sugar, Austin Nichols, Postum Cereal, International Harvester, Montgomery Ward, American Tobacco, Famous Players, Allis Chalmers, National Lead, Westinghouse Electric, and the Foundation company.

California Petroleum was strong from the start, rising nearly 3 points, due to publication of an impressive quarterly earning statement and this bullish factor is believed responsible for widespread short covering operations in the final hour. Allied Chemical, forced down Friday along with the others in the fertilizer-cotton oil group, rebounded and sold most of the morning about 3 points higher and closed 1½ above Friday's quotation.

The average price of eight leading steel products shows the first decline witnessed thus far in 1923. The average now stands at $59.49 a ton against $61.02 a ton, the peak for 1923. It compares with an average of $53.21 reached last September, that being the high for 1922, and with $42.12 in February, 1922, the low for that year. The decline in the average was due solely to a lowering of prices in tinplate and pig iron. Pig iron was reduced $1 a ton, while tinplate dropped from $134.40 to $123.20.

There were 351 commercial failures in the United States last week, according to figures compiled by R. G. Dun & Co., compared with 356 in the preceding week and 459 during the corresponding week last year.

Stockholders of United Shoe Machinery company approved a capital increase of 1,000,000 shares of $25 par common stock, making the total common $60,000,000, the increase to be distributed pro rata to common holders amounting to 40 per cent of their holdings. Holders also approved an increase of the company's holdings of subsidiaries by $6,000,000. The total capital after the new issues is $75,000,000.

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company has declared a quarterly dividend of 75c a share on the common stock, payable June 15 to stock of record June 1. This increases the annual dividend rate from $2 to $3 a share. Directors of the Columbus Railway, Light, and Power company have placed both the common and "B" preferred on a 6 per cent dividend basis. The last dividend paid on the common stock of the company was in October, 1917.

Directors of the Associated Oil company have voted to recommend to the stockholders an increase in the capital stock of the corporation from $40,000,000 to $60,000,000. The additional stock will be used for the purchase of stock in subsidiary companies, it was announced. A special meeting of the stockholders has been called for July 19 to vote on the proposal.

President Rosenwald of Sears, Roebuck & Co. says he knows of no reason for the decline in the company's common stock. May sales of the company, he says, will show a good gain over a year ago. President Schlake of the Illinois Brick company says the company is doing more business than at any time in its history and that orders are piling up as they never did before.

ANOTHER SWING TO LOWER LEVEL IN GRAIN MARTS

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

While reports of serious deterioration are coming from important wheat sections in Kansas the average trader paid little attention to them and the market generally showed an easy undertone, closing ¼@¾c lower for the day, the limited outside trade being an important factor. Corn was off ⅜@⅝c at the last with oats ¼c lower and rye ¾@1¾c lower.

Despite the heavy realizing sales in grain during the last week, the average was higher and liquidation apparently has run its course. As compared with the finish of the previous week, wheat closed ¼@⅝c higher, with corn up ⅝@1⅝c, the latter on May, while rye gained 1¾@2¼c. Oats declined ¾@1¾c, September leading. Provisions were much firmer with lard 47½@50c higher and ribs up 40@42½c.

Crop Reports More Serious.

Considerable deterioration is reported in counties in Kansas, with an aggregate of around 1,250,000 acres under wheat with private estimates suggesting yields ranging from 5 to 15 bu per acre in this territory. Buying of futures, however, was not aggressive and many of the local traders were absent during the day, attending the Derby at Louisville. The northwest bought some wheat, as did the southwest. Local traders were inclined to keep close to shore with some of the pit element evening up toward the last.

With Liverpool closed until Wednesday and foreign markets having a holiday, export demand was slow with very little business put through. Weather conditions over the belt were generally favorable, with the weekly forecast for unsettled and moderate temperatures.

Corn Shows Easy Tone.

Corn market apparently is going through the period of readjustment to discount the usual after planting movement and while country offerings to Chicago were limited they were somewhat larger to southwestern points. Kansas City May was 2½c lower, which had some effect on sentiment, while sample values were 1@3c lower in the various markets with a let up in the demand. Commission houses were fair sellers, and while a local professional was a buyer early offerings were in excess of the demand.

Trade in oats continues largely of a local character. May went to a premium over July at one time, although closing at the same figures as the deferred delivery. Crop reports, on the whole, were favorable.

Rye Market Heavy.

Rye showed an easier tone than other grains, due more to lack of support than any aggressive selling. Export call was limited, and while a few unfavorable crop reports are coming from the northwest they attracted no attention. The two northwestern markets received thirty-eight cars.

Provisions held within narrow limits, with a light professional trade. Packers are doing little. Claims that the demand for cash meats showed improvement led to a little buying, with the close unchanged to 2½c higher. Lard was unchanged. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the season to date aggregated 1,865,000, against 1,328,000 last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Crop news from the southwest continues unfavorable, and there is a fair run of buying orders coming for wheat from the southwest and northwest. Local operators are buying on it, but do not get enough help from the commission houses in general to offset the selling by professionals, who are bearish and taking advantage of bulges to sell, causing frequent breaks. This factor makes the average trader timid about being long.

Reports of 40,000 bu wheat being sold by Russia to Germany Friday created a great deal of comment. A local operator who has pressed the short side of wheat heavily of late predicts that Russia may export 50,000,000 bu of grain the coming season. Another operator who does not believe Russia will be an important factor as an exporter suggests that the trade had better wait and see whether Russia raises a crop before worrying about it becoming an exporter.

Corn traders said the market's action in breaking the last few days on the small receipts and high cash premiums indicated that the bull side had grown stale for the present. Commission houses had corn to sell from the start, and one of the large locals was credited with selling out early purchases at the last.

Frank Cheatle, traveling for Hulburd, Warren & Chandler, says the wheat crop in northern Illinois has grindled rather than stooled, due to drought and freezing weather. Under such conditions a large crop is impossible.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Export business in grain at the seaboard was flat, all European markets being closed. No sales of consequence were reported.

Chicago handlers sold 30,000 bu wheat, 50,000 bu corn, and 25,000 bu oats to the domestic trade, with 45,000 bu wheat sold to go to store. Charters were made for 150,000 bu corn to Georgian Bay.

Deliveries on May contracts here were 244,000 bu wheat, 85,000 bu corn, 56,000 bu oats, and 17,000 bu rye.

Cash wheat at Chicago was unchanged as compared with May, with No. 2 red 10@12c and No. 2 hard 2@2½c over May. Receipts, 23 cars. Outside markets 1@2c lower, with a slow demand.

Offerings of cash corn continue light, but the basis here was ½@1½c lower, with No. 2 mixed 1½@2c over and yellow 3½@3c over May. Outside markets declined 1@2c lower, a slow demand. St. Louis has bought around 100,000 bu to arrive in the last few days, half of which was taken by industries.

An easier tone prevailed in cash oats, with No. 2 white 2@2¾c over and No. 3 white 1¼@2c over May. Receipts, 71 cars.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

(Copyright: 1923: Fairchild News Service.)

PHILADELPHIA—A wobbly raw cotton market and freakish weather depresses the primary hosiery market. Cancellations of fall goods orders are increasing. Mercerized and fiber numbers of one mill are quoted lower than a year ago.

NEW YORK—Wholesale dress markets remark a wave of interest among wholesalers and retailers in wash silk skirts. A month ago manufacturers scoffed at the idea such demand would develop.

NEW YORK—Manufacturing furriers report business to date on fall garments outstrips last year. Road men have not yet started out. Fashion interest centers on fine carakul, dyed goldfish brown.

BERLIN—German linen manufacturers continue active business propaganda based on lower export prices. Linen now being on the export "free list," prices may be cut 8 per cent in the near future.

"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why a safe property must have an annual earning power of at least two and a half times the total annual interest on the loan.

4 Is the Property Adequately Protected by Insurance?
An important consideration, as fire often wipes out overnight a valuable property.

5 Is It Properly Managed?
"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why proper management is essential to insure prompt payment of interest and principal upon maturity.

6 Is the Title Clear?
"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells a sure way of insuring against loss through faulty title.

7 What Is the Moral Character of the Borrower?
As important as proper management—explained in this interesting booklet.

Could You Sell More Bonds in a New Connection?

To highly successful REAL ESTATE BOND SALESMEN of demonstrated ability and established clientele.

You are highly successful. You have built up, by go-getter methods, a valuable clientele who have confidence in you personally and in the securities you offer them. Your only object in considering a change of connection would be an improved environment or more liberal arrangement—or both—to enable you to double or triple your present volume of sales.

Perhaps you are limited by an organization so small that it is not well known; you have to do your own advertising when calling on prospects. Perhaps you are with a large bond house, where, despite your good volume of sales, you cannot hope to be a "star" without many more long years of hard work.

You can overcome these obstacles at once. You can associate yourself with a not too large but big investment house of established reputation and prestige, handling only highest grade securities, where you can, in a comparatively short time, become an important factor.

If you are the type of man who is looking for a genuine opportunity and a life-time connection with appreciative, helpful associates, you owe it to yourself to investigate our proposition. Whether you are now determined to make a change or not, we suggest you write us and arrange a conference—all negotiations to be in strictest mutual confidence. Address GF 407, Tribune.

Out-of-town salesmen please state exact territory you are now working.

7% Time Is Passing!

GOOD TIMES are here and better times are always coming—for the buyer of safe bonds.

For every bond gives him a surer footing in life, makes his coming years just that much better provided for.

But this does not mean that all times are equally good for buying bonds—that some times are not better than others for investing—that the finest values are always obtainable.

Not by any means. Following the war there was a period of wonderful bond values. Even the super-safe bonds—the first mortgages on real estate—yielded the investor 7%.

And then came a time when interest rates dropped—to 6½% and even 6% on the best grade and safest first mortgage bonds.

But now the demand for building money forces the yield of these bonds back to 7%—the highest ever paid on the best.

This, then, is not only a good time to buy bonds—but the best! We speak with eighty-eight years' experience. You never could do better in bonds than you can do right now!

But everybody knows that, with the easing up of the demand for building money, rates will soon drop back to 6½ and 6%. Buy bonds now. Profit today. For 7% time is passing!

It is shrewd common sense to put every dollar you can into first mortgage bonds NOW—while you can get 7%. We offer you this liberal yield for from two to ten years, and whatever security you desire — NORTH SIDE — EVANSTON — OAK PARK, etc. This is your opportunity to arrange NOW for the investment of your July funds—savings, dividends, interest, etc.—at 7%.

The New York Times.

New York, May 19.—[Special.]—Although most of Wall street's attention was directed today to the renewed declines on the stock exchange, the more significant movements of the day occurred in the cotton market and in the market for German exchange. The day's advance in cotton was not great, but it brought the price nearly 2 cents a pound, or 7 per cent, above the figure reached a week ago. The decline of nearly 20 per cent in the price of cotton between March 7 and May 11 had emphasized all misgivings over the effect of the latter. It is yet to be proved just what results in either trade or prices will accompany the shortage of supplies apparently impending before the new cotton crop comes to market.

German Mark at Low Level.

The German mark fell today to .0019¾c, or 10,282 marks to the dollar. Its previous low record price was .002c, touched at the "mark panic" of Jan. 30, when the French were at the gates of Essen. More than the mark has risen slightly above .005c, this violent recovery achieved in less than three weeks) being now will understood to have been solely a consequence of the reichbank's buying of paper marks abroad with its own gold reserve. The Berlin government actually planned of holding the mark around that figure while printing 200,000,000,000 of new paper marks each week. The experiment has failed completely. The visible failure of the impossible "stabilization plan" will have its part in forcing Germany to a reasonable offer in reparations.

Today's stock market developed much more activity than the market of preceding few days, but it was plain that the increased business came from sales by professional speculators for the decline. It was a familiar week-end stock exchange maneuver to apply such pressure, with a view to influencing outside opinion on the situation over Sunday. From the purely speculative viewpoint, the only significance of the demonstration lay in the fact that resistance was so slight.

The day's declines, as a whole, were not large, and there were several fractional advances of a point or more. But the appearance of the day showed at least that the general situation was considered sufficient to warrant any aggressive policy on the side of speculation for the time.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Local unlisted securities have not shown the mettled and uncertain condition which characterized the listed markets. While trade was on rather a limited scale, and in prices ruled a little irregular, a firm undertone existed throughout, and those desiring new material changes in quotations.

The motor and accessory shares, while under pressure, showed no price changes of importance. Ford of Canada again sold at 440 and 425. Paige Motor common was erratic, sales ranging from 20¼ to 21½, closing at a net loss of ½ point at 20½ bid. Hupp Motor, Wheel at 11 bid, 11¼ asked, and Timken Axle at 11¾ bid, 12 asked, were fractionally lower. Banks, ranging from 1 to 7 points were featured in the public utility stocks, but a sharp recovery was under way in the late dealings. American Public Utilities common weakened from a high of 53 to a close of 48 bid, 49 asked. The preferred was also 2 points lower at 49 bid, 50 asked. American Light and Traction common was well sustained at 114½ bid, 115½ asked, American Light and Power common sold as high as 166, but closed at 166 bid, 171 asked, ex-the 2 per cent in stock and 2¼ per cent cash payable June 1. The new Commonwealth Power Corporation issues sold at 67 and 68, off ¼. Northern Ohio Electric common was weak, breaking 2½ points to 11¼ bid, 12¾ asked. The preferred, however, ruled firm, between 93 and 93. Standard Gas and Electric closed at 27½ bid, 28 asked, compared with last week's close of 27. The preferred was traded in at 49 and 50. PROLOGUE.

Poor Pa Potter! Just when he was going good, with a thousand smacks safely invested in Cosmic Radio Corporation, something happened to it—static, or something—and it began to make funny noises on the ticker . . . and as if that wasn't enough, the hotel bill totaled $50 more than the Potter bankroll . . . frantic appeal to Rankin finds him down on Wall street, in the offices of those money brokers, Russell, Hussell & Bussell, where he is trying to stop Cosmic Radio Corporation from pulling the kids in after it.

Russell and Hussell of Russell, Hussell & Bussell are holding diligent skull practice with Rankin . . . an acrobatic young man is marking cabalistic figures all over a huge blackboard to the accompaniment of cheers and groans . . . round and about the ticker's tick the bears roar and the bulls bull . . . it is a lovely scene calculated to inspire the purest notions of patriotism and democracy.

RANKIN (to Russell):
He'll be here in a minute. What is he marking up now?

RUSSELL:
CRC 6⅞ . . . no wait a minute; he's rubbing it out—CRC 6¾.

RANKIN (nervously):
That stock's all right—what's happening to it?

PA (tearing in wildly):
Hello, Rankin! Did you stop it?

MA (tearing in after Pa):
What's going on here?

RANKIN (doing the honors):
This is Mr. and Mrs. Potter, Mr. Russell, Mr. Hussell, members of the firm of Russell, Hussell & Bussell.

PA (excitedly):
Glad to meetcha. Are you gonna stop this Radio stock from going down?

MR. RUSSELL (calmly—he should worry):
Sit right here and you can see the young gentleman mark up the prices on the board after every transaction. There! He's marking it up now. CRC 6½.

PA: By golly, it's lost fifty cents since we come down here.

MA: Are you going to sit here like a dunce and watch us get ruined? Can't you do something?

(Pa and Ma park on the edges of two chairs and, watch the board with fascinated terror . . . the marker chalks up joys and sorrows with equal indifference.)

PA (nervously, to neighbor):
What do you think of this Cosmic Radio stock?

NEIGHBOR (decisively):
Cheese.

PA (in wide-eyed horror):
Cheese? What do you mean, cheese?

NEIGHBOR:
It's terrible. Look at it! Going down like a fireman down a pole. Be wiped out by night.

PA (indignantly):
I don't think you know what you're talking about.

VOICE (behind Pa):
Heard this morning their biggest patent had been thrown out. That'll cook 'em. No wonder the bottom is falling out of the stock. Look at it now.

(Pa looks and in horror sees marker chalk up CRC 6.)

NEIGHBOR (to Pa):
Why don't you get in on some of this Amalgamated Bear Cat? (Whispers confidentially.) I got it straight they're going to declare a dividend of 15 per cent on the common inside of thirty days.

PA (piously):
If I ever get out of this alive—Holy Moses, look! CRC 5½.

MA (jumping up):
Are you going to sit here like a knot on a log and let them rob you? Why don't you do something?

PA (helplessly):
What'll I do?

MA: Go in there and talk to Russell, or Bussell, or whatever his name is.

(Ma leads the way; Pa follows, keeping one fascinated eye turned over his shoulder toward the fatal figures.)

RANKIN (as Pa and Ma enter looking for all the world like a pair of advance agents for calamity):
Just in time, Potter. Mr. Russell and I have been talking the proposition over and think that now is the time to buy some more Cosmic Radio stock.

"This is Mr. and Mrs. Potter, Mr. Russell, Mr. Hussell."

PA: Buy some more! Are you crazy?

MA: You sell what you have right now, and let's go home.

RUSSELL (earnestly):
That would be a foolish move. Nothing's the matter with this stock.

PA (babbling wildly):
No, nothing the matter with it except that it's no good. It was down to 5½ when I came in here.

RUSSELL (calmly):
It's down to 5 now, but that doesn't mean anything.

PA: It don't, eh? It means I've lost $500.

MA (this is the first intelligible information she has received):
You've lost $500? How are we going to get home?

RANKIN:
Listen, now; calm down a minute and listen. We've been investigating this proposition, and we think we know what's the matter. This

"Are you going to sit here like a knot on a log and let them rob you?"

stock is all right. Some gang is trying to hammer the price down so they can scare out all the little stockholders and buy all the stock in at their own price. Mr. Russell advises us not only to hang on but to buy some more while it's down.

RUSSELL:
That's right. All these rumors about the patent being no good and the president decamping with the funds——

PA: What? Who?

RUSSELL:
Never mind; it's only a rumor.

MA (to Pa):
You sell your stock this minute . . . this ought to teach you a lesson.

RANKIN:
Well, I'm going to buy some more.

MA: Very well, then, you can buy Pa's. He's going to sell right now.

RUSSELL:
I think you're very foolish. This stock is apt to turn any minute and go up to—why, there's no telling how high it will go up. Just as soon as this bunch have got the price hammered down to where they want it and begin buying it in it might even go up to par.

RANKIN:
Sure.

MA (to Pa):
You sell that stock right now, do you hear me?

RANKIN:
I wouldn't advise him to do that, Mrs. Potter.

RUSSELL:
It's a very foolish move, Mrs. Potter.

PA: What is it now? Is it still going down?

RUSSELL (peering at board):
Let me see . . . look, it's gone up to 5¼.

RANKIN (gleefully):
There, see what I told you. It's started up. (To Russell) Buy five hundred shares for me right away.

MA: There you are, Pa; sell him yours.

PA: And it going up? I should say not. It might go back up to 10, and then I'd be loser.

RANKIN (gleefully):
Don't you sell, Potter. Better buy some more. Look, he's marking it up again . . . wow! . . . 5½.

PA (getting excited):
Gosh, I wish I could buy some more.

MA: Are you crazy?

RANKIN:
How much do you want to buy? I'll lend you some.

PA (feverishly):
All right, lend me a couple of hundred. I want to buy some more.

RANKIN:
Attaboy, Potter.

MA: Have you gone mad? How're we gonna get home?

PA (hysterically):
Don't bother me.

(Rushes out to where he can watch board . . . messenger boys darting back and forth . . . the staccato snick-snick of the ticker . . . orders to buy . . . orders to sell . . . excited whispers . . . rumors . . . counter rumors . . . dividends . . . margins . . . points . . . raids . . . covers . . . It mills and seethes and swirls around Pa, who, oblivious to it all, watches the board with a hypnotic stare . . . when is he going to mark up CRC again?)

MA (to Pa, plaintively):
What are you going to do now, Pa? C'mon, we've got to pay our hotel bill; we've got to go back home.

(Pa stares at her with glassy eyes and says nothing.)

MA: Can't you hear me, Pa? We've got to go home. You've got to go home to your job. You'll get fired if you're not careful.

(Imagine anything so ordinary as getting fired happening to a captain of industry like Pa . . . pout!)

MA (piteously):
Please sell your stock, Pa, and let's get the money and go home. I'm afraid of this place down here. There's too much going on down here that I don't understand.

PA (masterfully):
Now, you just leave it to me. You wouldn't know how to understand business. If this gang thinks it's going to take me into camp

"Wassamatter? Wassamatter?"

it's badly mistaken. I'll show 'em. Just watch that board up there. The next time he marks up CRC we will have made a hundred dollars. That's the way to make money.

(Ma turns fascinated eyes on board . . . can they really make money as easy as that down here? Maybe Pa's right for once in his life.)

PA (gleefully):
There, he's rubbing it out. Now watch.

BOARD:
CRC 5¼.

PA (incredulously):
What? Must be some mistake; it was going up.

MA: Pa, what does it mean?

BOARD (marker rubs out previous price and chalks hastily, almost gaily):
CRC 5.

MA: Look—it's going down again. I told you so . . . maybe you'll believe me next time.

PA (with a pained look in his honest eyes):
I don't understand.

BOARD:
CRC 4⅞.

PA (to Rankin, who is hurrying out):
Wassamatter? Wassamatter?

RANKIN:
Something's gone wrong.

PA: Oooh, mygod, I want to get out of this.

MA: I told you so.

BOARD:
CRC 4¼.

PA: Ohhhhh!

(Russell approaches, reading communication intently.)

PA (wildly):
Mr. Russell . . . look . . . it's going down again . . . I want to sell.

MA (more wildly):
Yes, we want to sell quick.

RANKIN (dashing in):
Russell, wait a minute. Look . . . look! Read this . . . Potter . . . read this.

(Ma, Pa, and Russell crowd around Rankin to read note, which Rankin can hardly hold for excitement.)

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

Patterns by Clotilde

1691—Woman's blouse—Sizes 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 1½ yards of 36 inch or wider material.

1678—Child's dress with bloomers. Sizes 2, 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 8 requires 3½ yards of 36 inch material.

1496—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 36 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns.

ALL the smart blouses today are overblouses, and pattern No. 1691 is one of the most becoming types. It has the usual kimono sleeves, with the lower part of the blouse cut in such a manner that the broad band or belt that gives the becoming long waisted effect is not a separate piece, but is cut in one with the blouse.

To give and confine the fullness each side of the front and back, the blouse is slashed into a certain perforation. And after the sleeve and underarm seams have been finished the lower slashed edge of the waist is gathered and set on to the upper edge of the broad band that makes the finish at the bottom.

Do the gathering about one-quarter of an inch in from the edge, and as you near the middle front and back make the seam a little narrower. Turn the upper edge of the band in and set this turned in edge over the gathered seam. Baste firmly in position and stitch close to the edge.

After both sides have been finished in this manner there should be a perfectly fitted lining cut and hemmed in place over the bottom of the blouse all the way around; and the opposite edge should be hemmed down over the gathered sections at the top. Across the top, on both front and back, it may be left free—that is, in the middle of both front and back—but the upper edge must be turned in and should be catch stitched down to prevent fraying. Care should be taken to see that across the middle front and back the lining is not a bit tighter than the outside. If it is, it will show.

Printed crêpes are used a great deal for these blouses, and the plain crêpes, with some contrasting color used for finishing, are also smart.

Pattern No. 1678 is a child's dress with bloomers. The skirt is perforated for two different lengths, and the front at the neck is slashed to make an opening. There are raglan sleeves that may be made long or short, two piece bloomers with the lower edges finished with bands and the upper edge turned under for a hem and an elastic inserted.

Several dresses of this type will be nice to have. The type is suitable for play, for afternoon, or for traveling.

Any of the cotton materials—such as gingham, chambray, or percale—will be pretty, and if the neck opening is bound with some contrasting color, and this same color used for the finish at the sleeve edges, the edge of the collar and the leg bands, no other trimming would be needed. There isn't a more satisfactory material for wash dresses than mercerized cotton poplin, and the dress could be made with no other trimming than an embroidered monogram on the waist part, putting it in the middle of the front.

If one were making the dress for traveling, wool serge would be the thing, making collar and cuffs of linen or pongee. Cotton crepe is another wash material that wears and looks well.

It would add to the attractiveness of the dress if slits were cut and bound through which to slip a narrow patent belt. These slits should be cut each side of the underarm seams, and at a low waist line.

Pattern No. 1496 is one of the long waisted, slipover dresses cut with upper and lower sections. The upper part is long waisted, and the kimono sleeves are cut with seams on the shoulders. These seams always make a better fitting waist, and often one sees them trimmed with buttons, pipings, or embroidery. The skirt is cut in two pieces, and gores out towards the bottom, measuring there, for size 36, about 1¾ yards.

The opening of the dress is on the left shoulder, so that seam will have to be left open as far as is indicated on the pattern, finishing with faced and extension hems.

One or two materials may be used with good effect, using the plain for the upper part and a figured cloth for skirt.

Any of the usual wash materials will be satisfactory, but it will be wise to shrink them and set the colors before making.

How You Can Have "Naturally Curly" Hair

Follow the simple plan here suggested and you will be surprised beyond words to see not only the beautiful curl, but the soft fluffiness and lively lustre your hair will acquire. Merely apply to the hair before doing it up a little liquid Silmerine, using a clean tooth brush for the purpose. The delightful wavy effect in evidence within three hours will suggest to any stranger that your hair is "naturally curly." The effect will last many days. Get a few ounces of Silmerine from your druggist and you will have a supply for months. This will leave no sticky or greasy trace and cannot harm hair or scalp in any way. The hair will be quite manageable, whether long or bobbed.

My Queerest Boss

There are good bosses and bad bosses, and then again there are bosses who are just queer. Will you ever be able to forget the queerest boss you ever had? The perplexities, and the frowns, and the laughs he caused you? Was it his attire that yielded the comedy? Some odd personal habit? Some eccentricity that reduced you to despair? Write out your story, using one side of the paper only and telling it as briefly as possible and send it to the Queerest Boss Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter published.

Attention to Detail.

I think this employer was the queerest boss I ever had. He was extremely particular. For instance, while dictating, if the ends of my hair were out of place he would fix them in place, and one rainy morning he noticed mud on my shoes, and in the midst of dictation got down on his knees and scraped the mud off with his knife, much to my embarrassment.

He would go over each letter that I had ready to mail, and if each stamp were not on with an exact margin on the top and edge it had to come off. He would also examine the waste paper basket to see that nothing was discarded that could be used.

He was a great baseball fan, but didn't seem to want anybody to know it. He was constantly traveling, and often would leave the office saying he was leaving town when he would be going to a baseball game. E. G. A.

Always Stock Stamps.

The boss I label "queerest" was not energetic, but one thing that he always did was stick the postage stamps on every one of the hundred or more leters that went out of the office daily.

He had a box of 1 cent stamps and a box of 2 cent stamps. On letter after letter he would put a 2 cent stamp; then on some letter two 1 cent stamps would take the place of the usual 2 cent denomination. The posting of the letters was left to me, and as the whole force wondered, we tried to see if he had any system. One of the girls finally noticed that every letter addressed to an individual or firm with a name beginning with "S" had a pair of stamps. Nobody knows why. J. K.

Fits, Flits, and Quits.

My queerest employer came to the college town where I was born, telling no one from where he came, and buying for cash a small house, hung above the door a large sign of his own manufacture that read FRITZ HAS FITS.

The college boys were interested, and Fritz told them that it meant he was a tailor whose clothes would fit properly the person who ordered them.

During the dozen years that I kept books and otherwise assisted him he never made a suit that did not fit, and he made many; neither did he ever receive any except business letters.

When vacation came the sign FRITZ FLITS would appear and he would go, nobody knew where, until fall. At last the vacation sign was FRITZ QUITS. He never returned. P. B.

Wore a Thimble.

I was stenographer for him. He always wore a thimble on his middle finger. Every time he wanted any one he would tap on his desk with his thimble. His rules were three times for his stenographers, twice for his bookkeeper, once for his office boy. We would all have to listen carefully though we giggled. A. Z.

Could Operate in Kitchen.

I was a maid and cook for a noted surgeon. After a busy day of operating he would come home and tell me what to cook and how to cook it. He could operate with the greatest of skill in the kitchen on a roast as well as in the hospital on a patient. K. M.

Bar to Romance.

During the late war I was employed at a branch of the war office in London and my boss, a bachelor, did all he could to keep the girls and men employés apart. He was called "the robin" because he always wore a red vest. He had the department rearranged with all the men at one end of the room and the girls at the other, with his own desk between. The men began work at 9 in the morning, the girls at 9:30. Departures were managed accordingly. This was so we would not go to and from the office together. When a girl would ask for leave hurriedly to be married, as was often the case, she would always go directly to the colonel, and when "the robin" heard of it he would keep his eyes on the girl constantly with such an expression of sympathy and anger that it was difficult not to laugh at him. And on the day he knew she was to be married he would do nothing but pace the floor and wipe his eyes. J. B.

THE NEW SILHOUETTE A THIRTY-FOUR

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Poor Venus de Milo does seem to be getting a rough deal. Nobody loves her for what she is, at least. She never tried to represent herself as anything but a nice, comfortable, unafraid of a good meal girl. Looking down from her noble proportions and her lofty height, she probably would have a dignified comeback to all this chatter about her hips and her ankles and her too plentiful waist girth.

The gay young Dianas a-gamboling around her feet and ranging anywhere from 15 to 50 have quite another idea so far as the ideal curves and measurements of a perfect thirty-six really should be.

The Venus de Milo may be noble, they'll grant, but she just is not what you'd call nifty. As the Hairy Ape, poking her a mean and ugly glance might remark, "She just don't belong."

Venus Maintains Silence.

She was outlined for a pedestal but not for a jazz step.

"Fancy the old dear in a Tut turban and an Ankh-Amen gown," quoths the flapper. "No, she couldn't get away with it—not with a gross of lip sticks and a barrel of south sea rouge."

Venus might reply: "These modern gals if put on a pedestal would surely look like an appeal for funds for starving Armenia." But she shakes no menacing arm, and maintains a stony silence.

However, as the world jazzes along, there is no time for argument. The extra leans leads the procession, and every girl in America, no matter what age, hankers to be up front in the parade.

The goddess of liberty, who has a reputation for beauty, is all bound up in ample folds. But the new figure republic claims she only looks that way to lure immigrants into the land of plenty. Thin as a rail, she couldn't get away with it.

There may come another day for Venus and Liberty and the other ladies of heroic proportions—but in every line and in every dress design the day is getting farther and farther away.

Taller and Slimmer.

Now comes an authority in the last word in dress and figure with the announcement that the new silhouette requires that perfect thirty-six be a thirty-four, and her height 5 feet 6 or 7, or appearing as such. This is in the nature of a requiem for the short skirted little girl in last year's clothes.

It is to be hoped that before long some Mrs. Lenin-Trotsky will arise from out the classic statuesque group and start movement before the hearts in us are crushed in more confining space.

But in the meantime I suppose we might just as well be stylish or die in the attempt.

How can we raise us and reduce us to the new measurements—those of us who must have them or die the death of a wallflower?

The longer skirt helps some. The higher heel, which no sane adviser may recommend for daily wear, may add an inch or two. But a lot of the work of gaining an appearance of height rests with the spinal column and the manner in which it is carried and in turn carries its load. You can add an inch or two by the simple trick of straightening up.

Straighten Up!

Owing to the common faulty positions of standing and sitting, the sedentary occupations of women, and lack of physical training, curvature of the spine is common. The stooping carriage will contribute some curvature eventually.

When the head is bent forward, the chest sunken, the back rounded, the shoulder blades hanging outward with the inner edge standing out like wings, and the abdomen protuberant the silhouette is cramped by a couple of inches. The muscles are poorly developed and weak and flabby as a result. This stooping carriage interferes with freedom in breathing and prevents proper development of the upper part of the chest and lungs. Hence it predisposes to lung diseases and tuberculosis, a weak heart, poor circulation, shortness of breath, inability to take proper exercise, and anemia.

So whether you are interested in your health or in acquiring the new silhouette, straighten up. It is upon the erectness, suppleness, and strength of the spinal column that most of the power and grace of the body depends. In the proper carriage the natural lines of the spinal column are graceful and undulating, and the body stands erect without any particular effort.

Good Posture Means Efficiency.

In a college in this country where physical education is required of every student special attention is given to posture. It has been found that good posture and efficiency go hand in hand. Students are rated according to their posture. Most convincing statistics have been gathered on this student body's mental improvement.

A good posture contributes remarkably to a slender silhouette, the thing you are looking for. It disposes of the protruding abdomen where one is not overly fat. The straightened spine requires that the abdominal muscles be contracted. With the walking you do in your ordinary day you may see to what extensive training you may put these particular muscles.

Given the firm, well developed abdominal muscles, it is hardly necessary to examine the muscular system. You may be surprised to learn the correlation of a faulty posture with the double chin. A good carriage will hold the chin at an angle preventive of the "roll." In fact, it prevents flesh from settling on most of its favorite settling parts.

Practice This Position.

So, practice the following position until you can take and retain it without constraint: Heels in line, knees straight but without stiffness, legs equally stretched, hips square to the front; body erect and stretched as if you were being held up by the head, abdomen flat, chest high; shoulders square and falling equally, arms and hands hanging naturally, palms of hands lightly touching thighs, weight of the body resting principally on balls of the feet, heels lightly touching ground, head erect and square to the front, chin in but not down, eyes straight forward.

Walk around after you have stretched yourself up an inch or so this way, cast an eye at yourself in the mirror, and see if you are not more eligible now for the new classification of the perfect thirty-six.

Diet May Be Necessary.

In spite of the new posture, it means you must diet in addition. And this is the most excellent season to set about reducing, with fresh fruits and green vegetables available. If you do not happen to know what not to eat, I will supply you with menus and food facts to help you into the new frock. Send me stamped, addressed envelope, please.

Too, I should advocate your getting outdoors and going in for all manner of athletics, including stretching and pulling of the muscles, tennis, swimming, golfing, boating, basketball, and baseball, since women are breaking into that field, too. They are all thinning for those who hanker for the long lean lines of the fashion revues. And who among us does not?

DETERMINATION.

They can, who think they can!

Individuals and groups whose abilities are distinctly mediocre frequently astonish observers by the wonderful results which they accomplish. They make up their deficiencies in inherent ability by a real desire for hard work and, above all, a determination to succeed that knows no obstacles.

Success will always come to the Hard Worker.

WHAT MAKES A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN?

Siniacella.

By Selby Maxwell.

MARKS OF UNSELFISHNESS.

Of all the things that make a woman beautiful, the greatest is unselfishness. Anyone who reads character can tell unselfishness at sight, and not even the most obtuse can associate long with the proud possessor of this trait without being wrapped in the spiritual quality of her personality.

Siniacella is unselfish. Her every expression shows it. Her eyes are open, and look straight, not gazing off into space, nor dancing with nervousness, nor wandering away. She does not think of herself; she has none of the fear or anxiety that makes eyes wince, and so her gaze is steady. Her mouth is soft and delicate, with the corners gently curving upward into a perpetual smile. There are no set muscles in her face to pull the corners down. Drooping corners denote a worrier, a person beset by anxiety, one who feels insecure, and often not a little jealous. No mouth can wear a habitual smile and grace a selfish person's face. This seems so simple that everyone should see it, yet Siniacella innocently asks "How do you know I don't think of myself?"

She is naive. She is timid, shy, and trusting. Her nature makes her unsuspicious. She speaks out openly, for it is foreign to her nature to hide anything.

Yet, withal, there is much strength within her face. She has high ideals.

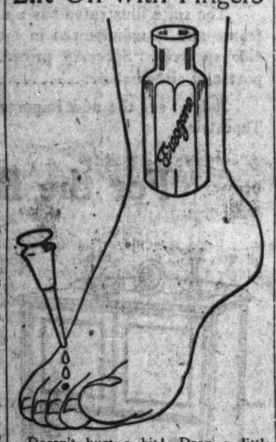
How can one see high ideals? By the brows. Heads that are high above the temples invariably house minds that look outward and upward rather than introspectively.

Siniacella is fair. She has rapid surging moods. Her eyes, her lips, her cheeks, her body change to every expression like sunshine playing on a pool. Being fearless and unselfish she feels no need for suppressing her feelings.

Siniacella is Nordic, of the Anglican type. She comes of a good race. Cultivates the friendship of people who look like her. Her strong purpose will prove an inspiration to all who know her.

CORNS

Lift Off with Fingers



Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly! Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $1 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to keep.

WHEN HOURS ARE LONG.

DEAR PROMISED WIFE: With sacred reverence I call you thus, thanking God that you have granted me the exalted privilege of calling you this treasured name.

When I left you, dear girl, last night, I walked homeward filled with an exultation beyond anything I had ever experienced. The moon shed soft radiance on my fevered brow, the cool, sweet wind stirred my hair (I traversed this distance with bared head, dear heart, in reverence for the great gift of your love which you had bestowed upon me), and the soft, crooning sounds of the night soothed my turbulent spirit.

Behold, as I lifted my face to the silent, inscrutable stars, my spirit chanted anthems for this priceless gift that is mine, who is all unworthy; and I humbly prayed with fervent purpose for inspiration to uplift me.

The hours are long, beloved, until my hungry eyes shall again behold you; conventions are harsh, my own, that keep you from me. Naught do I ask but to serve you, treasuring the knowledge of your love, desiring only to consume all your troubles.

My whole being aches with the longing to hold you in my arms, to reassure myself that this is reality. Speed that moment, O, relentless time, cruel to lovers.

God bless you and keep you, Eileen, my darling, until that far off hour when we shall be pronounced as one.

Your impatient lover, RICHARD.

Women's Work The World Over

Mabel Russell, prominent English actress, is seeking the seat in Commons lost by her husband, Capt. Hilton Philipson.

The sword and tricorne hat are considered obstacles for the admission of women as members of the French academy.

Though she is past 87 years of age, Mrs. Mary A. Randolph was recently granted a divorce by the California Superior court.

In Japan it is no uncommon thing to see women working on a building operation. They carry mortar, bricks, and stone, besides helping with the digging of the foundations.

Guided only by Arabs, Mrs. E. B. Perkins and Mrs. Charlotte H. Jordan of Cleveland, O., succeeded in crossing the Sahara desert. They now lay claim to being the only American women to have braved the desert perils without white escorts.

When building convenience into the homes you plan, stress the desirability as well as the necessity of instant hot water in kitchen, laundry and bath. You know what it means to have piping hot water from every fixture day and night. You know the drudgery of the "teakettle method" and the false economy of furnace coils. Royal Automatic Storage Gas Water Heaters have brought the convenience of instant hot water within the financial reach of every home builder. We will gladly send you without obligation our Architect's Specification manual and the summary of a report from a committee of architects. A Royal Automatic will pay for itself. It is safe.

TAKE THE CASE OF SHOES.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—Would you classify shoes under accessories or essentials? But are not accessories essentials, after all? In the case of shoes, it would depend on what they are like, I suppose. If you could see those I have in mind, you would say at once you had to have them, and therefore I suppose they are essential.

In the last years real art has gone into the design and the workmanship of shoes. The leather work is as beautiful as that in rare handmade books. And as for style, the shoes of the present are getting to have square heels and toes. Buckles are getting to be oval, to replace the long run of square trimmings, so big that they hurt your foot when it bent in a step. Nearly all of the buckles I have seen lately have been mounted on a little ruche, even when they were on afternoon shoes for the street. The ruche, however, is a mere frill and not so wide as some I see from America. And even before the square toes have reached their fullest development they are getting pointed.

Of course, in getting shoes over here there is this eternal business that almost drives Americans mad of having them made to order. There isn't anything you can see in advance, try on, buy, and carry away with you. Shouldn't you think Europeans would prefer that system that puts all of the responsibility of a wrong choice on you? But they seem to flourish on disputes and trouble. And so you place your order and take your chance.

The last thing in the world to do in the preliminary arrangements is to let them get hold of your foot to make a diagram of it—take the measure, as one says. What they really take the measure of is a foot about three sizes smaller than yours, and make a shoe you could not possibly wear. It is the thing in France to make hats and dresses about three sizes too big, and everything else far too little. Give them a shoe of your own to copy and you stand a small chance of getting a beautiful pair of shoes. There will be wonderful workmanship on it. You can count on that.

I understand that in America we are wearing shoes of colored leather. France keeps one pace ahead of us. Here they are fashioning them out of a sprightly conception of silk that looks like cretonne—and, no, they are not for the boudoir, but for tea at the Ritz and such promenading as the French woman goes in for.

Evening slippers have wide open spaces between the toe and the heel; in fact, they consist of a toe and heel and a strap, but principally heel, which ascends to a height that could almost be called an altitude.

Stockings are darker, and the favorite shade is called "noisette." And yet, as I write it, I am conscious of being a little passe in my generalizations. With the summer peeping in on us light shades are beginning to predominate in spite of any artificial dictates of fashion. Nature will have her way. And pale gray predominates almost everything except the flesh color. The French took a great fancy to that little conception of having a stocking look not like a stocking but like the flesh which it is supposed to conceal. The French woman is beginning to accept even white stockings, although she has seemed in the past to avoid them as unconditionally as she does black—and as for the latter, they simply are not made.

But the dress is the thing, and the first one of these in the illustration shows both the split and the hiked up movement that characterize the day. It also displays the sheath design and the heavily dropping lengths of crystal beads which make up the items in the present mode. The dress is of gold lame, and further follows the dictates of the moment in having all of the drapery in front. Like the dress shown last week, the back of this one "explains every curve of the figure," the phraseology being the artist's, you will remember, and not mine. If one wishes to dress handsomely and conventionally, following all of the momentary fancies of fashion, one could not do better than to order a replica of this dress. It is really handsome, and the jewels accompanying it are much in the spirit of all it stands for.

The woman is wearing a diamond tiara, emerald earrings, and gorgeous pearls, and she wields a fan of coral aigrettes, which somehow is just the little touch to complete the picture. Shouldn't you know the French woman would supply that? It is because of her dramatic sense for dressing that she is the most perfectly costumed woman in the world. She knows how to stage her clothes.

There seems to be a concerted movement (except that no movement in Paris ever is concerted) for making sleeves look like mousquetaire gloves. This is Renee's interpretation of it, and she reinforces her effect by separating them from the shoulder seam at the top. It is as if you put them on after you had donned your dress. The dress in the second sketch is of dark blue rep, and it runs a length of tan down the front, with the blue almost closing over it. The belt also is of tan, and so is the only decoration which the dress displays, this being a cocarde on the left lapel. That hat is of dark blue straw and is garnished with a big handkerchief in gay reds and white, wrapped round the crown and allowed to fall where it will down the right center back.

The third offering shows a new line in capes, by Jean Patou. This one is in men's suiting in gray. The material is tucked in clusters and falls in a circular movement to a point round the knees.

The fourth illustration shows a smart, square cape edged in ruffles of the same material, and this is gold lame, printed in pink and green flowers. It is worn wrapped tightly round the figure so that it looks even stretched in the back.

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some one fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

THE END OF THEIR TROUBLES.

THERE'S nothing like a glimpse of results, is there, to keep our purposes alive? That's why I want to lay the following letter before you:

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: I know I should have written long ago. Somehow it seems we were just too busy being happy over the end of our troubles. I'm getting over expecting to see it all vanish like a dream, though, and we know it's really true—so now I can say 'thank you' to everybody.

"When we wrote two months ago, my husband was just recovering from a severe illness and everything seemed absolutely hopeless. We have a boy of 8, and two girls, 5 and 3. My husband's clothes were so shabby he hardly had courage to ask for work in an office. I thought I'd have to take the boy out of school, because he was coming through all his clothes and came home with a fresh cold every rainy day. We were behind in the rent, had heavy doctor bills—O, it was just a nightmare.

"Then the new day, after our appeal was printed! Clothes for everybody, bed clothing, toys for the children, and I got a hat and a suit that made over beautifully. One kind woman gave us a lot of canned goods, a ham, and a side of bacon.

"My husband was taken care of, too, so he could appear anywhere, and they simply couldn't turn him down when he asked for work, he was so full of enthusiasm. Why, with all that expense lifted, the rest looked easy—and it is easy, because we'll be paid up by summer, and able to get ahead.

"All this we owe to the kind people who gave us a lift when our troubles seemed bigger than our abilities, and I want to say 'thank you' over and over again. If only they could know as we know how tremendous their kindness was! MRS. C. B."

There you see the other side—what the gifts which really are simple look like from the viewpoint of the family receiving them. Articles that we throw away mean life itself to others.

When much good can be done, won't you make it a practice, when you're through with anything, to let us find some one who can use it? Just look over the letters below today and check over the old things in your house as a starter—and you'll be surprised to find how much good you can do without trouble! Try it today, and make it a habit.

It's a Hard Struggle.

"My husband has been ill since June. I have no clothes at present and with my wages am unable to buy any. If you receive an offer of a suit size 44 please remember me. It is a hard struggle with a sick husband and three children. I can assure you I would appreciate your help. MRS. K. S."

Certainly this ought to result in some generous contributions.

Answering Various Needs.

"I have a refrigerator and a bed and springs which I will be glad to give to some one; also a hand vacuum sweeper and a dress form, size 42.

"L. O. W."

Here is a generous offering which I'm sure will be promptly accepted.

Kittens to Give Away.

"I have five blue Maltese kittens to give away. They are five months old, and too cute for words. Good homes must be assured. MRS. D."

If you wish to own one of the blue Maltese kittens, make early application.

Wants Words of "Some Day."

If any one knows the words to "Some Day" I would be glad to have them. L. M. P.

We'll ask and see.

Low Shoes for Needy.

"Have low shoes, size 4, one pair for dress up, rest home use. Yours for the asking. MRS. F. K. N."

I am holding the kind donor's address—write to me if you wish to share in the shoe offering.

Chicago Picture Cards Wanted.

"I have been an interested reader of your column for some time, and note what a great friend you and your column have been to needy people.

"I am not writing for myself but in behalf of a poor unfortunate girl who is an invalid, and who lives in a small village in northern Michigan.

"I correspond with her, and as she is very interested in learning all about Chicago, I wonder if any of your generous readers would be kind enough to send me some old pictures, postals, booklets, etc., concerning Chicago.

"I will gladly pay all postage, and trust that in the future I may help some needy person. "D. T. A."

This is indeed a commendable request and one which I am certain will soon be answered.

Widow Needs Sewing Machine.

"I am a widow, left with two small boys, and if I had a machine I could earn a much better living by sewing for people, as I am a good dressmaker. Otherwise I have to do housework or scrubbing, and my health is poor. I know I could not stand that very long, so would you please do all within your power to help me get one? If E. J. H. has been given away before my letter reaches you will you please keep me in mind for the next offer? I would appreciate it and you would be giving it to one who truly needs it very much. Thanking you for whatever you can do for me. MRS. S. B. B."

Any one who has a sewing machine which she is not using can perform no more worthy service than by helping this widow.

Bed Clothing Sorely Needed.

"Through your splendid department I would like to seek help in the matter of bedclothes for a brave little woman in need whom I have found. She has mended her blankets and comforts to the last stitch and needs help to finish out the season and for next winter. What she has is in ragged condition and she would be glad to mend and wash anything that some one could spare her. She especially needs several pairs of woolen blankets and some comforts. I would be glad to have the bundle called for or pay the express charges. For her sake I will thank you in advance. MRS. B. T. C."

I sincerely hope the friend for whom you plead will be furnished with the blankets and comforts she needs.

Family Beset by Troubles.

"You helped me so much a year ago that I am coming to you again for help. I wonder if you could get me some clothes for my boys, age 6, 4, and 3. I have a little baby girl 3 months old. Had a lot of sickness all winter long and I will have to go to a hospital for a serious operation. Please help me. I haven't any money to buy any clothes for myself. I need some street dress, size 36. I wear size 4 shoe.

"A. E. V."

Can't some one help to make things a little easier for this family with all its load of troubles.

Wants Copy of "The Rosary."

"I have tried in vain to get a copy of a play entitled 'The Rosary.' I found out that the same is not published, and I am at a loss to know what to do. Knowing that you helped so many others, I kindly ask for a reply where to obtain the so much desired play. Hoping that I am not asking too much, and awaiting your kind information impatiently, I am

"M. F. B."

If any one among my readers can give this information, may I ask that you communicate with me?

Compelled to Ask Help.

"I have wanted to write to you often, but hesitate each time, thinking perhaps things would be better. I am now compelled to ask for help. I need clothing—shoes, size 7; clothing, size 44. My baby is 6 years of age.

"His last shoes were size 11. If any one has an ice box no longer in use I would be glad to have it.

"I will send or call for anything; and now I will try to explain my unfortunate circumstances. For several years I have been suffering with neuritis. Of late it has been a handicap to me in a great many ways. Sometimes it is in my knees, and I cannot walk; again it is in my back, and I cannot get up without help. My baby had bronchitis and stomach trouble, and now has developed a weak heart. The doctor says I must be careful or I will lose him.

"My letter is long and my requests many, but you will understand, won't you? And I'm hoping some day I can return all the good that comes to me. MRS. E. T."

If any reader can help, please do so soon, as the need is great.

MY NICEST COMPLIMENT

What was the nicest compliment you ever received? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wittily done, or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Grand an' Glorious.

As a child I was fond of reading, and was almost never seen without a book in my hand. I was teased about this by the girls and boys I played with.

One afternoon as I was standing out on the porch speaking to my special boy chum a few of the girls came up to us and remarked to the boy: "Keith, how can you like a girl like Yvonne, who reads all the time? She doesn't care for you—she likes her books much better."

To my delight Keith came to my defense gallantly with: "Well, I would rather have Von, who doesn't care for me, than a hundred girls like you all, who do."

It surely was a grand and glorious feeling! Y. E. S.

Honeybunch.

My nicest compliment was written and given to me by a gentleman member of the firm where I am employed as a switchboard operator, who recently celebrated his golden wedding.

In summertime I like to go—
And there I'm often found—
Where flow'ring honeysuckles grow
And humming birds abound;
And there I linger long and sit—
I deem it glorious fun
To see those lustrous creatures flit
Beneath the noonday sun.

I dearly love those feathered things—
I hardly dare to stir—
And watch them as with shiny wings
They dart and hum and whir;
Then hover o'er and swiftly dip
Within the blossoms fair,
And with their lengthy bills then sip
The honey hidden there.

But when the winter with its chill
And tempests comes around,
I have to look about until
Some substitute is found;
For humming birds don't keep alive,
As ev'ryone must know,
Nor honeysuckles bloom and thrive
Amid the ice and snow.

Yet I am lucky even then,
For, as I gladly tell,
I chance to know a little wren
That suits me just as well;
And I observe her, as alone,
At work throughout the week,
She in the mouthpiece of the phone
Inserts her dainty beak.

A. A.

His the Prettiest.

My husband and I attended a pretty wedding last summer. Every one thought the bride looked lovely. I thought so, too.

When a friend asked my husband for his opinion he said, "She is the sweetest bride I have ever seen with the exception of one—that one I led to the altar twenty years ago."

C. S.

Nice Indeed.

When one of our high school teachers, who had had both of our children in her classes, said to me recently, "I think of you as an ideal mother," I thought it the very nicest compliment I ever had. MRS. E. D. C.

"Nicest Married Man She Knows."

My nicest compliment came as a birthday card from my wife as follows: "A Happy Birthday to the Nicest Married Man I know—My Husband."

H. O.

Love's Valuation Under Stress.

One day at the noon hour my husband brought in a guest whom I had not expected, and I had been busy with cleaning, so the dinner was not even as well prepared as usual.

One thing of which I could boast was the butterscotch pie I had baked. The meringue looked just right, and the pie had a delicious odor. But a short time before the dinner was served my little son, aged 4, took a fork and completely ruined the meringue on the pie. I was so exasperated I punished him, and as he sobbed pitifully he said: "Well, I have a beautiful mother, anyhow." No one else ever accused me of being beautiful. It was the nicest compliment I ever received. MRS. N. F.

"A Little Boy's Estimate."

I saw a little boy trying very hard to pull his little wagon up on the walk, so I helped him. "Well," he said, "lots of people passed, but nobody would help me. Have you got an automobile?" "No," I answered. "Because if you did have, and it would break down, I would help you, because you are the nicest lady that passed here." G. M.

Tribute from a Husband.

The other day when my husband and his boss were talking about savings accounts his boss complimented him on doing so well. My husband said, "Give all the credit to my wife," and I consider it a nice compliment from a hubby. M. W.

"The Breath of Mollie's Life."

To perform some little act of kindness for a friend and then to forget about it has always been my creed. Yet it pleased me mightily to have Jane tell me that when Louise seemed to more than appreciate a little favor which I had been able to do her, she, Jane, had replied: "O, don't flatter yourself that you are the only one. To do a kindness for some one is the very breath of Mollie's life."

MEN'S FASHIONS

ODD KNICKERS WILL PREVAIL THIS SUMMER.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

By A. T. Gallico.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There is a good and pertinent reason for calling a certain type of men's wearing apparel "sport" clothes. However, to see some men in their business offices or at the theater at night you would not think so. The reason, I might hasten to point out, for so calling them is because they are intended to be worn as a negligee attire for country lounging and sport.

However, so increasingly popular is the summer sport suit becoming that it is being taken up by those who wear it just on general principles and not because they are planning to spend the afternoon on a golf course, or the porch of a country club. Lounging on the front stoop of one of the rural play places of society or steady indulgence in the Scotch game of swat the little white pill if you can is apt to be an expensive proposition and one which few of us can indulge in.

But almost any one can save up and purchase a sport suit, and there is the rub. It cannot be emphasized too strongly that leather buttons and plaits in the back will not make the dining hall of a country club out of a downtown business restaurant, nor will any amount of patch pockets convert the asphalt of Michigan boulevard into the first tee or a grass grown lane. The sport suit as the day costume for the man who stays in town is quite out of place.

For those who are contemplating the purchase of negligee or sport apparel let this be said: The sportiness of a sport suit is not determined by the number of patch pockets, plaits, belts, half belts, or other additions or subtractions that an inspired designer can see fit to perpetrate upon a suit. As in everything else, the keynote is simplicity, and many of the coats worn by the best dressed men with knickers will not be distinguishable from the ordinary sack coat except that they may be a little looser and, of course, in lighter tweeds and homespuns. The younger man will probably wear the Norfolk suit to some extent.

The odd knickers will be the most popular number this year. That is to say, the knickers will differ from the coat in color and sometimes in material, as when flannel or linen ones are worn. Harmonizing in shades and pleasing color combinations between knickers and coats will be the fad. For instance, in the showrooms of one popular retailer of men's furnishings I saw a silver gray coat with checked knickers of the same material and color; also a tan coat with knickers of the same color and material in checks.

The four piece sport suit will be as popular as ever. This means the suit that has coat, vest, long trousers, and knickers all of the same material, usually in rather light colored tweeds or homespuns. The style for this as in the odd coats will be the plain sack coats or the Norfolk model.

This business of the odd knicker sport suit, I understand from the buyer of the men's furnishing store that is featuring them, is a style that was exceedingly popular at Palm Beach and Miami this winter. He has just returned from there. And the Palm Beach winter styles are pretty nearly always a forecast of what men in general will be using for sport wear the succeeding summer.

In purchasing sport clothes, it is well to consider the use to which you expect to put them. It is obvious that you may allow yourself liberties with clothing when you expect to spend your time sipping cool drinks on a club veranda which you cannot if you are going to do eighteen holes on a sunny afternoon. Flannel knickers, let us say pearl gray or tan, are not practical for strenuous exercise, but for unathletic purposes, worn with a gray or tan coat to match the knickers, the effect is pleasing.

Many of the coats worn with knickers this year will be double breasted, and in many cases, as suggested, plain and unbelted. The decision seems to be this year, and I am inclined to agree with it, that with white flannel trousers, the gray coat is a smarter combination than the dark blue which has been rather worked to death. Gabardine coats will also be quite popular with white trousers and knickers.

This brings us to the point that white and natural linen knickers will be as popular as ever, because of their neatness and coolness. The natural linen is the more practical because being near dust color it does not soil as easily as the white. A great deal of the popularity of these white and natural knickers rests on the attractive combinations that can be made with gray and tan shoes, or tan sweaters and tan stockings, and so on.

The favorite knicker this year will be the one known as the "plus four" knicker, which is the full English style one, baggy, and hanging below the knee. It is particularly suited to tall men. But short men, and especially short stout men, should steer clear of it because of its baggy effect. They will find the American style better suited to them.

Answers.

M. A. G.: For formal wedding at 8 o'clock in the evening, a full dress suit is the proper attire, and wear a white vest and white tie.

Morning Hint.

A word to the man who is putting on a brown checked suit this morning. Why not carry out the checked idea in the cravat? Checked ties are popular and attractive. With a brown checked suit, a tie of blue and brown, or brown and tan, will go well. Don't overdo the checks, however, and wear a checked shirt as well. If you want to wear a checked shirt let your necktie be plain.

Embarrassing Moments

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life. Address letters, marking Moments, Chicago Tribune. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscript returned.

Caller Too Punctilious.

Having only a few strands of hair of which to boast, and making the most of that with the help of a switch, I had appeared to good advantage just the same as the rest of the girls.

However, one lovely evening I sat on the porch entertaining a most particular friend upon whom I desired to make a most particular impression. The conversation had gone on animatedly for some time, the moon had risen, and I rested by head against the back of my chair as I gazed on its brilliance.

Suddenly I heard a hairpin fall, and, putting my hand to my head, was aghast to find that my switch was gone, too.

The caller was the most punctilious of creatures, and nothing would do but he must find my hairpin. I protested in vain. He struck a match and searched the dark porch floor, to discover not only the heavy pin but my telltale switch. W. D. T.

O, What a Blow.

I had an engagement to meet a friend downtown and accompany her home for the week end. When we arrived she told me to hide in the vestibule and she would tell her mother I hadn't come.

I expected to hear professions of profound regret, so imagine my surprise when the answer came, "Well, I'm awfully glad of it. I'm tired out and am only too glad to have a week end without company."

Fortunately our friendship was such as to be able to withstand a blow like that. H. W.

On the Wrong Trail.

The boss handed me a shipping direction and told me to enter it in the books. I studied it and could not make out what it was. I went up to a fellow clerk, but he could not make it out either.

So I went back to the boss and said, "Whoever made this out surely doesn't earn his salary."

He replied, "I don't know about that. It's my writing."

I left that desk in high. B. M.

He Gave Her a Look.

While taking dictation the other afternoon I was busily jotting down little chicken tracks (as stenographers' shorthand notes are often called) and in some way my right foot became tangled in the rung of my chair. I turned and turned, but I was caught fast. My foot refused to respond to my efforts to release it. I finally got desperate and removed my shoe, while my employer had his back turned, but did not accomplish my feat in time to escape his eagle eye.

Mr. Employer gave me one look and asked, "What's the idea?"

Such a performance naturally required an explanation and, of course, afforded my employer a good laugh, to my embarrassment.

Don't Spoil Your Child's Hair By Washing It

When you wash children's hair be careful what you use. Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is inexpensive and beats anything else all to pieces.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified is all that is required. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store, and a few ounces will last for months. Be sure and ask for "Mulsified."

What I Have Learned in 47 Years Practice

I HAVE been watching the results of constipation for 47 years, since I began the practice of medicine back in 1875. I am now 83 years old, and though from time to time the medical profession makes some wonderfully interesting experiments and tests, the fundamentals of causes and relief in this particular ailment are unchanged.

But the people take greater interest today in their health, in diet, exercise and the drinking of water. Constipation, however, will occur from time to time no matter how one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. I believe in getting as close to nature as possible, hence my remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It is made of Egyptian senna and pepsin with agreeable aromatics. Children will not willingly take bitter things. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written me to that effect.

Over 10 million bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are now sold every year, and it is the most widely bought family laxative in the world. I say family laxative because all in the family can use it with safety. It is mild enough for the infant in arms, effective in the most chronic constipation of an adult. The formula is on every package.

Recently there has been a new wave of drastic physics. Calomel, a mercurial that salivates and loosens teeth, has been revived; salt waters and powders that draw needed constituents from the blood; coal tar disguised in candy form that causes skin eruptions. In a practice of 47 years I have never seen any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping, and without shock to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It lowers your strength 28 per cent, hardens the arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope but go to a druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a generous-size bottle. Take a teaspoonful that night and by morning you will be well. The cost is only about a cent a dose. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, piles, indigestion, loss of appetite or sleep, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

One of the important and exclusive advantages of Kotex is that it is not laundered, but easily disposed of by following simple directions found in each box. They are so far ahead of other sanitary pads that it seems odd now to think of birdseye and old-fashioned make-shifts. Kotex are large and perfectly absorbent. They are made of fine gauze and Cellucotton, which is considered by scientists to be the most effective absorbent material made.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

She May Surprise You.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have a girl friend I have known for over six years. She is a girl of my type. She likes outdoor sport which we enjoy together. This girl is only a friend, but I love her, and I never have kissed her. I would like to tell her that I care, but I don't for fear that our friendship may break, and our friendship means a lot to me. Please, Miss Blake, advise me what to do.

"MOONLIGHT."

A lot of men have lost girls just because they feared to speak out. If I were a man, I'd risk disclosing my deeper feelings. She may surprise you into a future of bliss by her answer.

Better Watch Out.

"Dear Miss Blake: Kindly let me know what it means when a girl kisses a man's hand. Does it mean respect or love? ARTHUR."

Better watch out, Arthur! I think it means she has designs on you.

Sister Outshines Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of nineteen and kind of quiet. I have never gone out with a fellow yet and can't understand what it could be. My younger sister, 16 years old, has had a proposal already. Many a time, when we go to dances, no one seems to come over to me to dance. My sister seems to have every dance. Could you please help me out? LAURA."

Perhaps the trouble is, Laura, that you have not an easy manner with the boys. You may be self-conscious and do not show off to your best advantage. Perhaps, if you became a good dancer it might help, too. Because that would help to give you poise and some charm of manner. But why not ask your sister confidentially to tell you wherein she thinks you fail to attract. She might be able to put her finger right on the something, which could be remedied easily enough.

Blame Upon the Innocent.

"Dear Miss Blake: Recently a girl friend of mine sent a very dear boy friend of mine an insulting card. The other day he passed me on the street, pretending he did not see me. Later I found out why he snubbed me. I think he is under the impression that I sent it. Will you kindly advise me what to do, as I value his friendship most sincerely. I am a girl of 17.

"UNSOPHISTICATED."

Could you not, in the roundabout way, let the story that came to you get back to him—the fact that the card was not of your doing? I think I should let him know somehow I was not the guilty one.

The Why of Indifference.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am deeply in love with a young man who works in my office. When we are left alone, he shows that he cares for me, and I allowed him to embrace and kiss me. He has never asked me to go out with him, and when we are with all the girls in the office he will speak of the different girls he has taken out, knowing at the same time that he is making me jealous. He is always in my mind, and it seems impossible for me to try to forget him. UNHAPPY."

Naturally he would not spend any money to take you out when you are so generous with yourself otherwise. I ask you, Unhappy, why, if you have brains enough to hold a job down at all, you do not apply them to your case. How can the boy have any respect for you who would allow familiarities to a mere business acquaintance, for, after all, that is all he is. Now, you have just succeeded in adding your name to the list he talks about. O, dear, I wish you young girls would realize the asset of not being free and easy with men. It never gets you one single thing in the way of devotion. Can't you get this on your mind, now, in place of the boy, and let it reason with you on future conduct.

That's Her Privilege.

"Dear Miss Blake: Some time ago I met a girl I thought the most beautiful I've ever seen. I wrote to her until Christmas, and then sent her a present. For several months I kept on writing. She never answered. I met her in a camp and this camp is going to have a reunion and I'm sure she is going to be there. Will you advise me what to do? Shall I snub her or shall I ask her reason for her silence? Do not keep me in suspense.

"HANDSOME."

I would not snub her, Handsome. I would, however, accept her silence for unwillingness to encourage your too ardent devotion. And after all, you know, that is a girl's privilege. If your letters were uninvited, you must just accept the situation as a gamble in which you lost. And be a good sport about it. A good loser does not ask the reason why.

Easy with Mutual Friends.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two young men and very good friends. One day, while at a dance at our dancing school, we saw two young women we would like to meet. We believe they are interested in us. We know some of their friends, but we're not on speaking terms with them and we are puzzled as to how to be introduced. We would appreciate highly any suggestion given us. PAUL AND SAM."

That should be easy, Paul and Sam, when you have friends in common. You boys should go to them and ask them to arrange the introduction.

That Common Error Again.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am just 16 years old, in love with a fellow two years my senior. My mother does not know it, but, being that I am working, I thought I could go with him. Now, Miss Blake, do you think it is right for me to go to the movies with him, and also is it right if I kiss him? He is a sweet fellow and you know what a sweet one is like. CATHERINE."

Catherine, dear, please do not make the mistake that spoils the popularity of so many young girls, so early in their romantic young lives! Don't kiss the boy, no matter how sweet he is. There are other sweet ones who do not ask that of you. If I thought you were going to get more fun out of life by permitting the kisses, certainly I am not such a crabby old lady that I would be the one to deny you the pleasure. But I know it is the short cut you are taking to be left on the side of the road while the wiser girls go by on their way to the altar. Don't forget ever that man's appetite is whetted by the unattainable and he sickens quickly of what is easily within his reach.

How to Be Happy Though Married

by DORIS BLAKE

Youth Calls to Youth; Leave the Middle Aged Man Alone; the Gold Will Pass Through Your Fingers; the Decrepit Mate Will Remain.

THE lure of gold gets us all, one way or the other. It is a pity, however, that it should shake so many homes and shatter so many happy families, as the report of Dr. Katherine Bement Davis on answers to the questionnaire sent out to ten thousand women in all parts of America indicates.

It is the lure of gold which causes many a young girl, who has the choice before her of marrying a young man who has a vigorous body and a cheerful mind or an old man who often is depraved of mind and perhaps equally depraved of physique, to choose the latter for his money, thinking that money can buy happiness.

The pity of it is that the experience of women who have gone before her cannot make her realize that nothing is further from the truth than that money can buy happiness. Money cannot buy happiness. It can buy a mask with which to cover the face of unhappiness, but it cannot buy contentment of the soul, warmth and sunshine for the heart.

"Such an Interesting Age."

If I could I would shout from the housetop: "Girls, do not make mockery of your own youth."

Do not insult the feelings of the boys of your own age by admiring them in secret and giving open allegiance to the older man, because, as some of you have put it directly to me, "It is such an interesting age."

Remember that his finesse has been acquired by years of experience. Others have preceded you. The cream of his affection has gone long ago—gone to others. What you get is second or third grade artificially stimulated love.

The boy of your own age has something better to offer you for every item of advantage you may read into the older man. He has youth, enthusiasm, and hope for the future, the three greatest ingredients in the happiness formula. He is your natural companion, and should be your natural mate.

Youth Calls to Youth.

Don't let a world which judges appearances only—a world which is superficial and cold and sold, body and soul, to glitter—dictate to you or influence you.

Follow the dictates of your heart. Follow the call of your heart. Youth calls to youth.

Leave the middle aged men alone. They do not belong to you. At best they can give you but a lukewarm present—but no future. The gold will pass through your fingers. The aged and decrepit mate will remain.

If men were wise they would not attempt to marry girls who normally should be their daughters.

For a few years the man may feel it nice to have a young bud hanging on his arm. A few years hence, however, nature is bound to bring out the difference—differences that no amount of reasoning can smooth over—differences that will cry to heaven and indict him for having leagued himself with youth. Nature is just. A crime against nature is paid invariably for in bitterness, tears and tragedy.

Enemy of the Home.

The lure of gold is the enemy of the home. It is the desire for luxury that breaks many happy marriages.

Every maxim which tends to show that patience and perseverance pay in the end are forgotten by too many wives after marriage. A girl may be patient with her job. She may be patient with the criticism of her employer, even when the criticism is unjustified. She may be patient with her landlady who is unnecessarily rude and feelingless. She may be patient with her boarding house and those awful three squares prepared in routine, too same ham and eggs for breakfast same stew for dinner, same three stewed prunes and two lettuce leaves same custard pudding. She may be patient with all that before marriage. If she cannot afford the new hat, new shoes, new frock—she puts the best face on and is patiently resigned. But the minute she is married, she begins to feel that if she does not have things exactly as she dreamed, her marriage is a failure. And proceeds to make a failure of it.

She sulks, she criticizes, and she nags unjustly. She looks at her neighbor's fine clothes, forgetting that her neighbor is older than herself; forgetting that her neighbor's husband has had years of opportunity to develop his business and his bank account. Sometimes she even looks at the wife of her husband's employer and allows herself to suffer by comparison.

It's Sunshine We Need.

Yes, the lure of gold gets many of us—and gets us for the most part unhappiness. What we need today is some one who will revive the simpler ideals and standards of an older day with regard to home and family.

There is the story of the Greek philosopher, Diogenes. One day he was sitting sunning himself, when the Persian king, Alexander, came over to look at him and to study him, having heard what a strange man the philosopher was.

"Is there anything I can do for you?" the king asked Diogenes. "Any favor you may ask of me?"

"Yes," answered Diogenes. "Do not obstruct the sun from me."

After all, it is sunshine we need in the home. It is everything in life, and the sun does not always shine where there is gold. In fact, it is as true today as it ever was that happiness is to be found more often in the humble abode than in the damask curtained, velvet carpeted palaces of the rich.

J. G.: A WOMAN 33 AND 5 FEET 3 may weigh between 125 and 130. If you wish to gain weight, send for my booklet giving you most detailed information as to food and rest, recreation, sleep, and so on needed to round off angles.

DISGUSTED: WHY BE DISGUSTed, child, when for something like 25 cents you can get a formula filled up which will correct that excessive perspiration trouble? Send me s. a. e. for it, please, because there are directions for its use I want you to follow. Also, do you know that if you drink plenty of water you minimize the odor greatly? People who bathe frequently and drink six to eight glasses of water use this same remedy on the feet. Footsore: Alcohol or vinegar is soothing to tired feet. Common baking soda added to the water helps. If you suffer from tender feet, give the feet a cold spray every morning. Turn on the faucet full strength and then dry thoroughly with coarse towel. You can remove the callus under the soles with a razor or a pumice stone, even, and then rub in cold cream. A handful of sal soda dissolved in a half gallon of water in which the feet are soaked for a few minutes, morning and night, helps get rid of the calluses. But don't overlook the fact that the shoes are causing this trouble.

QUERY: AN AVERAGE STALK OF celery contains about 5 calories, lima beans, two heaping tablespoons, 130 calories. Beets, two heaping tablespoons, only 30 calories. But suppose you send me s. a. e. for my pamphlet telling the number of calories in the different foods that go into the regular menu.

M. C.: HOW TO LOSE YOUR DOUble chin? No, not so hard. Of course, if you are heavy all over it is better to take a regular reducing course instead of confining operations solely to the neck. But do these neck exercises in the meantime. Stand erect, hands on hips, eyes straight front; without moving body turn head sharply to left three times; then to right three times. Relax and roll head around in a complete circle, going as far forward and back on neck as you can. Then, third: Let head fall forward on chest, then back as far as possible. If this makes you dizzy at first, do not more than three times each, but gradually increase. After exercising, massage the neck lightly with cream, wipe off and then rub ice over the skin under the chin to tone it up and prevent wattles.

MATRON: SOMETHING FOR AN ageing waistline? Here's looking at you, now. Watching you, too, to see you don't cheat. Every day at least once, twice so much better, and you are going to feel improvement all over—because of doing these waist suppling movements: Assume good standing position, hands on hips; bend body forward from the hips until it is at right angles to legs; exhale on downward move; bend trunk back slowly, inhaling as you recover position. Do five times. No. 2: Arms overhead, fingers clasped, bend to right and then to left five times each, keeping lower body firm, knees straight and arms close to head. No. 3: Raise arms overhead, bend trunk forward and swing arms downward between legs; raise trunk and bend backward swinging arms up over head again. Do five times and moderately fast. You may add to this by turning at waist and swinging both arms down side of either leg. I know a woman who took three inches off her waistline by doing this woodchopping [No. 3] movement alone for two months.

FATTY: FOR REDUCING THAT fat under the arm and which clings so tenaciously, albeit not belovedly to the upper arms, try this say three times a day. Just do this exercise alone for one month three times a day and you will feel a free woman again: Stand erect, abdomen flat, knees straight, arms extended full length straight out from shoulders; begin to make circles with extended hands and arms; begin with small ones and increase to circles of as large dimension as you can describe without putting the body out of position. Describe five circles beginning on forward movement and five beginning in opposite movement of hands. Why don't you send for my Youth Preservers? I think they would be just what you need for your daily exercise—after you have worked on the above one for a while to get you in the mood for more.

X. Y. Y. AND G. F. AND K. L.: Now if you will just be good enough to send me stamped, addressed envelope, repeating your requests, I will gladly send the booklets on hair, on complexion, and on diets asked for. And all the others who write me asking for booklets to be mailed them, let this be an invitation to repeat the request of me, but not to forget the stamped return envelope.

At last!—a hairpin that stays put yet is easy to put in and to remove!

Here's something new in hairpins—a hairpin you simply can't lose, that remains firmly in place under any and all conditions.

Ride, dance, motor—swim!—be out in the strongest wind. And yet retain the hair neatness of a moment after dressing!

Crinkles two ways—that's why

It is crinkled two ways—in and out on one side and up and down on the other. This makes a double-crinkle pin which holds your hair firmly and securely in place and stays where you put it until you yourself take it out.

Won't tangle or snarl

Yet, it won't catch or snarl your hair, get tangled up or catch in your hair net. Because there is nothing to catch or snarl or tangle. It's the double crinkle which does the work. Its double-enamel won't turn brassy or rust. The points are smooth and rounded.

It is made under patented process—there is only one in the world. So you must ask for it by name. Say—"I want the Scolding Locks Hairpin." It comes in all sizes, from the little invisible and up. Packed as you want them, separately or assorted. Colors, black and bronze.

The New Lloydalet

A Baby Carriage That Is Also a Stroller

You mothers know how rapidly baby outgrows his first carriage. This new Lloydalet combines the baby carriage which he needs at first with the stroller which he requires later on.

It is wide and roomy; almost as spacious as the largest carriage, yet it is lighter and smaller than any baby carriage made. Mothers find it easier to handle; and apartment dwellers find its modest size very convenient.

Like all Lloyd Baby Conveyances, it is woven on the wonderful Lloyd Loom—of one fine, endless wicker strand—around and around, in a graceful bowl shape, flawless, smooth and strong. Because of this remarkable loom—the invention of Marshall B. Lloyd—weaving far more perfectly and thirty times faster than human hands, these beautiful Lloydalets can be bought for a lower price than has ever before been asked for a baby carriage of similar quality.

Ask your dealer to show you Lloydalets.

The only carriage woven in desired shape from one endless wicker strand.

Don't accept a substitute. Find the Lloyd nameplate on the seat.

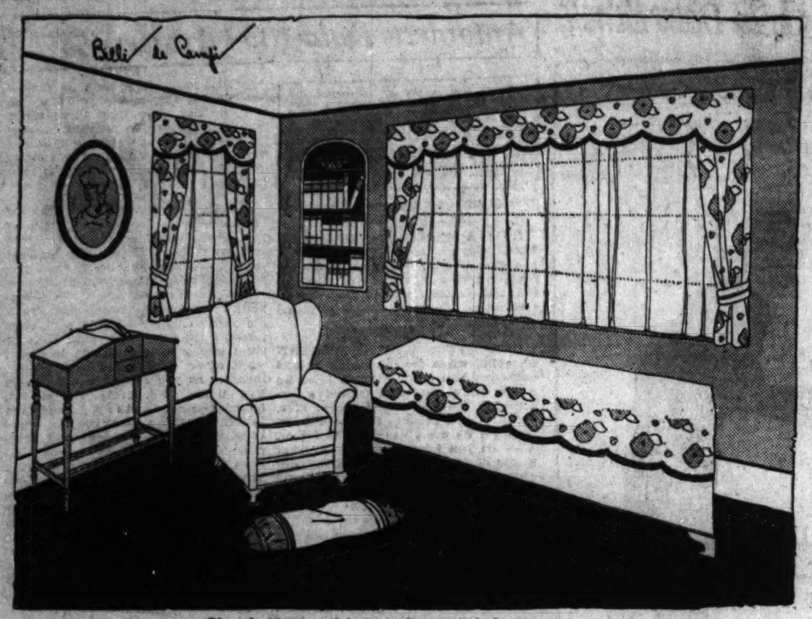
Week of June 4-10 Set Aside to Urge Better Homes in the United States



Glazed chintz used for overdrapes and chest cover.

Anita de Camp will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Camp, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

By Anita de Camp.

THE Better Homes in America movement, which is to have its 1923 campaign from June 4 to 10, is sure to offer many suggestions of interest, not only to those who contemplate building new homes but also to those who wish in any way to remodel, redecorate, or improve the homes they already have. Every one, as far as possible, should visit the displays in his vicinity. There will be demonstrations of better homes in practically all of the larger cities and towns, as well as in many of the smaller communities. Last year, in nearly every section of the United States, demonstrations were conducted with wonderful success.

In Chicago, displays will be laid out under tents in Grant park, east and south of the Illinois Central station at Van Buren street, with other model home exhibits throughout the city.

This nation-wide movement offers adequate reason for its existence in its high aims and purposes. It tends to awaken throughout the land a consciousness of the need of better living conditions—of the deep significance and economic importance of better homes—and to point out and facilitate the means of attaining such conditions. It aims to stimulate interest in home ownership; to overcome the present shortage of homes; to improve the home environment; to encourage sensible and valuable purchasing for home betterment; and to mobolize community pride for a common object—pride of home.

In the 1923 campaign model homes practically, economically, and artistically equipped in every detail are to be erected. These models will be passed and approved by a group of specialists, representative of the nation's best thought in architecture, sanitation, and housing. When completed, they will be open to the inspection of the public.

Besides the demonstration of model homes, educational campaigns will be conducted, with the assistance of newspapers, stores, factories, churches, schools, and clubs. Sermons on homes will be preached in the churches, lectures given in the schools, and essay contests held for the pupils. Interesting programs for home makers will be arranged. Many models, suitable for those of moderate means, will afford valuable suggestions in treatments and arrangement.

Four new features, in addition to the standards set last year, have been introduced to the plans for the June campaign of 1923. Schools and school children have been requested to coöperate. Even in the primary classes children are at work on better homes posters, ideas having been attained by means of the teachers' instructions. In every model house there is to be a standard library, showing a collection of books which is considered essential to every home. There will be also a music library, with a list of the best music, including light dance records and popular songs. Expert advice will be given on pictures in the home, including framing and appropriate methods of hanging.

Exhibition houses, as far as possible, will embody fundamentals which are considered the most desirable for one family dwellings. The house should be detached, with sufficient yard space on all sides. In this type plenty of sunlight and air is assured, and it is possible for the family, especially the children, to live much in the open.

It is to be remembered that the initial cost is not the full cost. It pays well to spend a little more on the purchase price, if by so doing repair bills and maintenance costs are kept down. The home should be, as nearly as possible, structurally perfect. In order that the walls may not become water soaked, the ground outside should be properly drained. A dry, well lighted, and ventilated cellar is essential. Beams and joists should be heavy and strong, and the foundation should be sound. Floors and ceilings must be of good material, well seasoned and of good workmanship. The hardware (locks, hinges, lighting fixtures, etc.) must be durable enough to stand hard usage. The outside walls should be substantial.

Every room ought to have adequate window areas giving upon wide outdoor spaces. So far as practicable each room should have at least two windows, and corner rooms should have windows in two walls. The rooms should be so planned that they may be opened into each other, making it possible for a breeze to sweep through. Individual privacy should be considered; consequently, a model house should contain not less than three bedrooms. A fully equipped bathroom is a necessity for the bedroom floor, though a toilet (with a washbowl, preferably) is sufficient for the ground floor.

Having a house that is structurally sound, well planned, and with adequate grounds, the next question is its equipment. This factor is determined by the size and plan of the building and by the furnishing and decoration. A central heating plant is usually the most satisfactory, supplemented by open fireplaces, Franklin stoves, or gas logs. There should be a running hot and cold water system, and the bathroom should be equipped sanitarily. If possible, it is best to use electricity for lighting.

Next, and finally, comes the problem of furnishing. First in consideration here is that the objects must suit the house in size, coloring, and style. The pieces must harmonize with each other, and they must be comfortable and well made. They must fill the needs of the family, without overtaxing the family purse.

Plain paints, tints, and wall papers of a cloudy, all over pattern, or indistinct two tones, make pleasing backgrounds. Adjoining rooms, with a wide doorway between, should have their walls treated alike, preferably in neutral colored, all over design paper, or plain, flat tone paint. Rugs and floor coverings should be several shades darker than the walls, and should be, in most cases, either in plain colors or indefinitely figured in an all over pattern.

With walls which have plain coverings, striped or figured window drapes over plain glass curtains may be used. In rooms where the wall covering is figured, plain hangings should repeat the dominant color note in walls and carpets. Light, cheerful fabrics should be used for windows facing north. In a room with southern exposure, cool colors or somber materials are suitable.

One of the bedrooms in a model house of last year's display was furnished in colonial style. Barley colored, cross bar paper was used on the walls. The woodwork was enameled old ivory, and the floor was stained antique oak, with a wax finish. There was a large four poster bed of walnut. Matching this were a highboy, dressing table, and bench, two ladder back chairs with rush seats, a bedside table, sewing stand, and a large chest for the storage of summer or winter clothes. In addition there was an overstuffed wing chair. The bedspread and top covers for other pieces were made of spring green rep, edged with narrow green and ivory fringe. Glass curtains were of old ivory net, and colorful, glazed chintz was used for over drapes and for a cover on the chest.

This detached cover was an interesting feature. The chest was fitted with a plain, boxed cushion. Completely covering this, and cut in scallops reaching half way to the floor, was a separate cover of chintz. The wing chair was upholstered in rep, to match the bedspread. A large, seal brown carpet was enlivened by supplementary, colorful hooked rugs, which were placed beside the bed and before the dressing table.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Adele had a habit of asking for cookies at my neighbors. One day I left her with a neighbor while I went to see a dentist. Before leaving I told her not to ask for anything to eat. When I returned my neighbor was laughing. She said Adele had seen some cookies on the table and said, "O, I want a ——" Then she said, "O, I'm so tired."

A friend of mine was sitting in the park with her stepson and little daughter.

A woman stopped to watch the two children playing and asked, "Your children?"

"The girl is," was the reply.

At this Natalie looked at her mother reprovingly and said, "Why, mamma, Willie is your child, too. He's your second-hand child."

While Ralph Richard was recuperating at the hospital he was presented with a set of crayons and drawing paper by one of the nearby patients. He immediately set to work to sketch his benefactor. He began up in the right hand corner of the sheet, and after having finished the head realized the limited space would not permit of the completion of the entire body and limbs.

So he said, "Well, Mr. Jones, I am sorry, but you will have to pretend that you have broken your arm and have it in a sling, because I haven't got room here for a good arm."
J. F. G.

Sister Cora had just returned home from the hospital, where she had had her tonsils removed, and Betty asked mother for some money to buy some flowers for Cora. She got the money and hurried to the corner, purchasing a large bunch of sweet peas. Arriving home, she left the flowers in the hall, went to the writing desk, and found an old business card.

On the blank side she wrote: "To Cora from Betty. Happy sickness."

I came upon a small boy one day who seemed to be in trouble. He was standing at a busy street corner, crying.

I said, "Sonny, what is the matter?"

He replied between sobs, "O, I've got a house in this town somewhere but I guess it's lost."
H. E.

Every morning Beth would greet me with, "Hello! Have you got anything good to eat?"

After explaining to her how impolite it was, the next day she said, "Hello,

I'm not asking for anything to eat. I'm just saying, "Good morning!"
A. E. C.

Jean was telling me how she encouraged her brother.

She said, "At school when the teacher tells Hugh to go to the board he's afraid until I say 'go and try' and when he gets to the board he isn't a bit afraid."

From another room piped up a small boy's voice: "Sister, don't you always call for me when you see a dog?"
H. L.

Bobby, a happy little neighbor, ran into my kitchen much excited one morning, exclaiming: "O, Mrs. Ware, we have two ripe tulips."
M. W. S.

Junior's grandfather has an endowment scholarship in a college of fine arts.

Junior said to his aunt, "When I'm big, I'm not going to college."

Knowing how he loves all animals, she said, "Wouldn't you like to go to an agricultural school to study about chickens and cows?"

He answered, "Yes, but I can't, for my way is already paid in a knowledge college."
A. P. H.

Dick, writing his first letter, began, "Dear Katy: How do you do? So do I."
R. G.

Hazel came to spend the day with me, and as she did not eat much for her dinner I asked her in the afternoon if she wanted anything, to which she answered, "O, yes, I've got an awful want for candy."
B. C.

I have a toy fox terrier, fat and old, peculiarly marked, and rather odd looking—in fact, she looks like a little white pig.

A small boy ran up to me one day and said, "O, lady! What make is your dog?"

SPECIAL SALE AND DEMONSTRATION OF THE 1923 MODEL OF THE

"1900" Cataract

GOLD MEDAL WASHER

This Is the Most Efficient Washer Made
When You See It in Action You'll Understand Why!

This is the Gold Medal Washer—given highest award by national judges—both in principle and mechanism! The "1900" Cataract is for family use—made in only one size—clothes capacity 12 pounds (dry). Made in only one way—copper tub—swinging reversible wringer—no variation.

Rocks as It Swings

Washes More Clothes Cleaner in One Half the Time

Its action, double action, "cataraction" creates the greatest water agitation—the clothes lie in the tub—which rocks back and forth — forcing the water through the clothes, instead of twisting and turning, beating and pounding, dragging and pulling the clothes through water in an effort to get them clean. Washes wrist bands, collar bands and skirt bottoms without use of washboard! Wringer locks in any position.

The water can be heated right in the tub—boiling in a few minutes — sterilizing your clothes—making them sweet, fresh and spotlessly clean!

CAKES FOR THE SUMMER WEDDING.

THE Christmas and New Year's time is the greatest cake making period of the year, but about this season there is a great need for festive cakes also, for about here comes the bride.

Instead of lamenting that we cannot make the old fashioned spirit flavored wedding cake, which was heavy, impossible often to eat with any safety at all, and more or less a waste anyway, we ought to be glad. It undoubtedly took brandy or some of its relatives to make it keep long and well, after its fashion. It was strangely unpalatable when fresh, but with the ripening the fruits began to blend their flavors and it became palatable.

A sirup closely binding the breathing spaces of the cake is just as good, and women who never have heard of this notion have covered wedding cake for keeping with half an inch of royal icing, and when the egg white in that hardens it is a safe protection of the moisture in any cake. Of course in time the cake breathes its moisture into it far enough to discolor it, and then that can be removed and a new icing put on.

Elaborations Often Lack Taste.

The first grand wedding cake I ever saw had a perfectly plain icing a half inch or more in thickness, of perfect smoothness, and it is still my ideal for such a cake. The elaborations in sugar decorations are often without taste, and the cake then is nothing but rather feebly sentimental and belongs with the candies and bouquet, not with the edible things that go with a wedding.

But around this festive occasion are likely to be many small occasions—festivities for which the home cook can make simple and edible cakes; also the white or bride's cake is within her powers; but let her practice making this cake a few times at least before she presents it at a wedding breakfast! And perhaps she may profitably begin her practice by making a similar but somewhat less expensive cake for the family beginning with the Four Egg White Cake.

One-third cup of butter, one cup of sugar, one-half cup sour cream, four egg whites, one and one-half cups of flour, one-eighth teaspoon soda, one teaspoon baking powder, pinch of salt, flavor to suit. Beat butter with a silver knife until like soft and smooth cream, work sugar into it, beat sour cream with egg beater and add it, work in flour gradually, and finally fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites to which salt was added before the beating.

It is really the baking of such cakes that has greatly to do with their perfection. An oven stabilized at 350 degrees is perhaps best. The crust of all white cakes should have more or less of the same character as that of an angel cake. It must not be thickened and semi-charred in the baking.

Sour cream as the wetness for these cakes has long been preferred because the cake so made is good on the day it is baked. It is commoner to use a half cup of butter to a cup of sugar than to use one-third, but the latter amount does perfectly well. Even when making a cake with that amount of butter and sugar we may use six egg whites or even eight, adding more flour to take up the extra wetness as we add the extra egg.

Defining the Bride's Cake.

The bride's cake with thimble and ring, button, money, and wishbone, must be white, as compared with the wedding cake. Though customs have differed, this has been the cake in which the bride has made the first cut in the presence of her guests and which she serves to them. Perhaps she hopes that she herself will have the happy fortune of getting the piece of money which symbolizes wealth or good fortune.

Since this cake is actually to be eaten, and because the meal at which it is served, though white and light in appearance, is likely to contain enough food per portion and in calories to make a whole day's ration, it is best this cake be simple. It is no longer the mode to eat so much as formerly, even if the occasion be festive.

Five Egg White Cake.

The old recipes for this cake contained four times the quantities of ingredients—all ingredients—that we put into them today. Twenty egg whites instead of five, three pounds of sugar, a pound of butter, and so forth, were the quantities used. The cake so made besides being called bride's cake was also called mountain cake, lady cake, etc. For our proportions today let us take one-half cup of butter, preferably unsalted; one and one-half cups of sugar, one-half cup sour milk, one and three-fourths to two cups of best pastry flour, three-fourths teaspoon cream of tartar, one-fourth teaspoon soda, five egg whites, flavoring. The conventional flavor for this cake is rose. An excellent flavor is all almond—about half a teaspoon—or a bit of almond, vanilla, and lemon. Mixing flavors requires practice, but it gives novelty or differentness to our cakes.

Cream butter in same way as for four egg white cake, with knife and til a smooth cream, then cream in sugar, add milk well whipped with egg beater, getting the mixture perfectly smooth. Sift the flour several times and fold in half of it slowly, then add the rest alternately with the egg white which has been beaten until completely dry, folding in all. If half the flour is alternated thus with the egg whites—perhaps dividing each into three portions—a certain type of lightness may be secured which is near perfection. Finally put the soda, cream of tartar, and flavoring into a measuring cup, and dip over them a large tablespoon of the batter. Stir these together as thoroughly as possible, and then add to batter and fold in completely. Bake for one hour in a large round tin—preferably a spring form—in an oven which may be a trifle over 300 degrees, and maybe a little hotter at the start. If baked too slowly we may taste the flour. If baked too rapidly, it will be too damp at the center. The oven should at no time be hot enough to burn paper.

The expert cake maker takes both more care and less than the amateur in making a cake like this than is above described, but what she does so flows into one that the details are hardly realized. The amateur must take every step carefully.

A bride's cake needs a white icing beautifully put on, and this is a most exacting piece of work, best learned under a teacher or by many and careful experiments. Since it has been said that this icing or frosting is to the cake what her snowy gown and veil are to the bride, it should be a bit of perfection. One not only has to learn how but to keep her hand in when desirous of doing such work. A plain spread of icing over the cake is better than trembly scrollings. I have been guilty of recommending something less than perfection in doing such work, but I have recanted.

Gold Cake.

It is thrifty to know what we are going to do with our egg yolks when we make white cake. We can mix them with a bit of cream and scramble them, the mixture sometimes being called mock brains; we may use them for thickening soups and sauces, but some people think gold cake the best of cakes if not dry, and here are the egg yolks for it.

Suppose we are going to make the four egg white cake or perhaps a four egg angel cake. It is a good plan to separate the eggs and let the whites stand, covered, in the ice box, and make the gold cake first by the following formula: One-fourth cup butter, one-half cup sugar, four egg yolks, one cup of flour, one-half teaspoon baking powder, three tablespoons of chilled orange juice or cold water, and a bit of flavoring if the water is used. Cream the butter and sugar, mix thoroughly with them the yolks of the eggs beaten until light colored with whatever liquid is used, sift the baking powder with the flour—beat several times—and add to the other ingredients part at a time, folding in.

Bake in a rather thin sheet in a moderate oven. Establish a 300 degree oven by lighting the oven as soon as you go into the kitchen to make your cake, allowing it to run up and then lowering it to a point where it will remain stationary. It is important not to bake a gold cake in a hot oven—the crust is not pleasant to eat. But we must have one that will heat the dough through rather quickly. If the cake is then baked in small portions it will soon cook sufficiently.

Walnut Cake.

To make a walnut cake add one-third or one-half cup of walnuts cut fine to the above recipe for gold cake.

Four and Three Egg Angel Cakes.

Take three or four egg whites, one-half cup of sugar, one-half cup of flour with four eggs, one-third with three, a little powdered citric acid, a few drops of vanilla. Powdered citric acid is perhaps better for stiffening egg white than is cream of tartar. Since a fourth of a teaspoon of it with three egg whites will affect the flavor positively, perhaps one-eighth of a teaspoon is better. Beat the egg whites until frothy, add the powdered acid to them, then beat in the sugar and fold in the flour sifted three or four times. Add up to one-half teaspoon of vanilla. Bake in a small tube pan.

Bolshevism's Rise on Horrors Seen in 'Bavu'

"BAVU."
THE CAST.

Bavu ..... Wallace Beery
Annia ..... Estelle Taylor
Vleck ..... Forrest Stanley
Stropik ..... Sylvia Breamer
Markoff ..... Joseph Swickard
..... Nick De Ruis
..... Martha Mattock
..... Harry Carter
Revno ..... Jack Rollens
Director—Stuart Paton.

By Ines Cunningham.

"BAVU" (Universal) is especially timely for readers of THE TRIBUNE who have been following the story about Rasputin in the coloroto section, because it is a story of Russian conditions at the time immediately following the fall of the Romanoffs. It is timely to all as because the film has been rejected in several Russian settlements right in our own city as being unsympathetic to bolshevism.

Wallace Beery.

However, if you are not a bolshevist, you need not take "Bavu" too seriously. It is an interesting picture made from Earl Carroll's translation from the Russian of "The Attic of Felix Bavu." It depicts a meeting of the dread tribunal of citizens. At one end of the council sits Bavu the destroyer, and at the other Mishka the builder. Bavu would kill and plunder the aristocrats to "feed the people," and incidentally, to buy jewels for his beautiful Olga, who inspires him to his deeds of vengeance. Mishka would levy taxes on the rich to feed the poor. The council votes and Bavu is defeated. So Mishka, who has been a servant in the house of Prince Markoff, goes to tell his highness that he has saved his life and that of his daughter, that only their jewels need be sacrificed.

Prince Still Defiant to Rabble.

But the prince replies that the Markoffs never have taken orders from the rabble. Bavu, meantime, kills a citizen and lays the blame at the prince's door. The mob assembles and pours like a red flood over the home of the Markoffs. Mishka saves the beautiful Princess Annia, daughter of the house, and then the scene shifts to Bavu's attic.

I will not tell you what happens after that, for it might spoil the picture for you, but it is exciting. Cruel, like its creator, are these men of Russia, who live in Bavu's attic and laugh at fire and death. Bavu's idea of humor is the rare jest of walling Mishka up in a vault before the eyes of his beloved, but fate has a grewsome chuckle at Bavu's expense, for the person hiding in the vault is not Mishka but Bavu's own Olga, whom he has betrayed. But Mishka, after a duel with swords, wounds Bavu and escapes with the princess across the frontier. Bavu, wounded as he is, follows to avenge Olga, but his horses flounder and he goes down in the icy waters of a stream. The fugitives are safe. The atmosphere of the picture is good—horses and men restive in a lashing rain; Bavu's attic, with its tiled stove, its leaking roof, its grilling cold which even the brightest fire cannot dispel. The skrilit outline of Russian cities against the winter sky, and miles and miles of white waste land—all are there. Photographer and director have done their best.

Wallace Beery takes the honors of the piece, and there is Joseph Swickard to play the prince as well as you will remember he did Desnoyets in the "Four Horsemen."

I did not care for either of the women in the cast who

"Stars of Today" Guests with Thirteen "Stars of Tomorrow"

By Mildred Spain.

THOSE thirteen little baby stars who were formally introduced to a palpitating—and perspiring—public on the night of the Wampas ball were guests at a dinner and dance given by the same organization at the assembly tearoom the other night. With them were the thirteen—or nearly thirteen—"stars of today" who were introduced at the Wampas ball last year. The occasion was to present them with diplomas in vamping, luring, sirening, and emoting—diplomas written in Wampas English and Latin and given by the hand of Joe Jackson, the Wampas president.

PAULINE GARON.

The twenty-six—pardon, the glittering Claire Windsor wasn't present—the twenty-five were also given little Mazuma good luck gods, so they'll always have Mazuma in their old tobacco box, or wherever they keep it.

The Wampas entertained by a little skit called the "Fourth Estate," wherein Tom Reed depicted the troubles of a press agent trying to unload a "wonderful story" on a dramatic editor. Ted Taylor was the editor. Jerome Beatty, who is going to New York, was given a pipe and Jobyna Ralston wished him "happy pipe dreams."

Looks Like One of 'Em May Be Doomed.

Mark Larkin, director of publicity for Mary and Doug, was given a double barreled shotgun and Pauline Garon laughed right out in meeting.

"A double barreled shotgun for the father of twins!" she said.

"Mark's twins are boys," she explained, "so he can't name them Doug and Mary. And he can't call them both Doug. Maybe he'll shoot the one who isn't Doug!"

Jobyna and Pauline are two of the baby stars. The others are, as every movie fan knows, Dorcelys Purdue, Dorothy Dvore, Betty Francisco, Laura Laplante, Evelyn Brent, Helen Lynch, Kathleen Key, Virginia Faire, Eleanor Boardman, Ethel Shannon, and Margaret Leahy.

The "stars of today" present were Pauline Starke, Helen Ferguson, Maryon Aye, Mary Philbin, Patsy Ruth Miller, Vola Vale, Kathryn McGuire, Lois Wilson, Bessie Love, Colleen Moore, Lila Lee, and Louise Lorraine.

Barbara La Marr and her new husband, Jack Dougherty, are planning on a real honeymoon in Italy. They will not take Barbara's adopted son, Ivan Carville La Marr, with them. Barbara never took a baby along on any of her other honeymoons. Why start now?

Corinne Griffith has a new X-ray gown, a shimmering, petticoatless thing that was meant only for the hottest days of summer—a delight to the eye, an inspiration, a rhapsody! She wore it out on the lot this week and even the blasé stage carpenters flocked in her wake.

It was the same day the X-ray gown was featured in a Paris revue. There are really only two fashion centers in the world, you know—Hollywood and Paris. Yes, Paris, too. The film stars have made many a milliner and modiste in Los Angeles by allowing themselves to be seen and pictured in the latest hats and wraps.

And also—between you and me—many a real estate subdivision has been sold and many an oil well exploited through the advertised appearance of movie stars on the ground.

One Way to Sell Bungalows.

Sometimes the star gives away a bungalow with her own fair hands—to help the sale of other bungalows. Sometimes she just appears and makes the crowds welcome.

Evanston Invites You to Festival of Music

By Edward Moore.

EVANSTON now requests your kind attention for its annual week of music, which, though fostered, promoted, and presented in that city, goes under the name of the Chicago North Shore Music Festival. It will begin on Thursday night and endure until Wednesday night of next week. The period of action will bring to notice a concentration of music and many artists, singly and in combination. All concerts will be given at the gymnasium of Northwestern university.

LOUISE HOMER.
Singing at North Shore Festival Friday night.
[(C.) Mishkin Photo.]

The opening program bears the title, Italian Composers' Night. Its special feature, taking up the second half of the program, will be Eripanno Wolf-Ferrari's "La Vita Nuova," which will be sung by Elsa Harthan Arendt and Giuseppe Danise as soloists, the A Cappella choir and the festival chorus of 600, played by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, and conducted by Peter Christian Lutkin, the general musical director. Before this event comes into being the orchestra and Frederick Stock will play works by Sinigaglia and Santoliquido, and Mr. Danise will sing the "Credo" from Verdi's "Otello."

The second program, Friday night, bears no special label on the proof sheets sent to this department for reference. It is presumed it will be known as First Artists' night, from the fact that a second artists' night is later itemised, though what inference is to be drawn from these titles regarding the other concerts is not entirely clear. At any rate, Tito Schipa, tenor, and Louise Homer, contralto, are advertised as soloists, the Chicago Symphony orchestra will play, and Mr. Stock will conduct, except for Arne Oldberg's "Paolo and Francesca," which will be directed by the composer. Mr. Schipa will sing arias from "Martha" and "Werther." Mme. Homer will be heard in other arias from Mozart's "La Clemenza di Tito" and Saint-Saëns' "Samson and Delilah," and the two will blend their voices in a duet from Donizetti's "La Favorita." The orchestral numbers will be Dvorak's "Carnaval" Overture, Dukas' "L'Apprenti Sorcier," the ballet suite from di Falla's "The Three Cornered Hat," and Chabrier's "Joyous March."

For and By the Children.

Saturday matinee will, as customary, be devoted to the children and their chorus of 1,500. Osbourne McConathy will direct them in Bach's "My Heart Ever Faithful," songs by Haydn, Brahms, and Grieg, and the "Blue Danube" waltz; Mr. Lutkin will conduct the first performance of his own cantata, "'Twas the Night Before Christmas"; Lucy Gates, the soloist of the afternoon, will sing arias from Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Le Coq d'Or," Delibes' "Lakme," Barthe's "La Fiancée d'Abydos" and Mozart's "The Impresario," and Mr. Stock and the orchestra will perform works by Elgar, Bach, and Humperdinck that maintain the general atmosphere of the occasion.

Saturday night will be both a public rehearsal and a judgment. The festival association is maintaining a $1,000 competition for the best orchestral composition submitted during the season, and the award will be made then. Forty-seven compositions were submitted, a smaller number than appeared last season, from which five have been selected. These five will be played by Mr. Stock and the orchestra, and the prize winner chosen after the performance. This will be played at one of next week's concerts. The competition is anonymous, and the names of the competing composers will not be disclosed until after the judgment. George W. Chadwick, Gustav Strube, and Henry Hadley will be the judges.

This will conclude the first half of the festival. Events

Fred Stone Shows Religion Has Niche in Stageland

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—When Fred Stone "stepped out of a buck and wing to do a Billy Sunday," as Walter Kingsley described it, at the Metropolitan Opera house last Sunday night, he added a feature to the N. V. A. benefits that will mark them for many years to come. Fred had come on from Detroit in a special train to be here for the shows. He was in good humor and full of spirits. He clogged and cut up with increasing zest as he motored from the Manhattan Opera house to the Hippodrome and from the Hip to the Metropolitan. The crowds were given to cheering him as the hero of the occasion, for he is not only widely popular, but president of the N. V. A. as well.

FRED STONE
[Moffett Photo]

And then he took an encore for God, so to speak. If it happens you have ever heard Stone make a speech, you can picture the scene. He stumbles along uncertainly, catching doubtfully at words he is unaccustomed to using, and yet with no intention of trying to deceive his hearers. He is nothing if not honest. He knows he is a clumsy talker. But he knows, too, that what he has to say comes from the heart of him and he feels it must reach the hearts of all other honest folk out front.

Crowd Stunned by Announcement.

And it does. That crowd Sunday night was a little stunned at first when Fred announced that he had something to tell them—that he had "ceased to be a passive sort of Christian and become an active worker for God." Stunned and awed. It is something of a shock to have a favorite clown stop in the midst of his fooling and assume the tone and expression of a Salvation Army exhorter. If you are familiar with the ways of vaudeville comedians, you are not quite certain as to whether you should laugh or not. There were titters after Stone's first statement that he wanted to repeat what he had said in the west—that the time had come when he felt like taking a stand for Jesus Christ—and to assure everybody that he meant it.

Then his audience became hushed. And when he had finished his concluding statement that he did not see why he should be expected to quit his profession because he had become a Christian there was a ripple of hesitant applause. Those who approved seemed a little afraid they might be offending God, who must be listening to this newest of his evangels.

"God need not be worshiped within the four walls of a church," concluded Fred. "We can carry the thought of God with us in everything that we do." He bowed awkwardly and walked into the wings.

Then the applause broke and grew until it seemed that every one of the 6,000 persons sitting and standing in the big theater was taking part in it. The comedian had proved himself a good sport, at least. He had "come through," as they say.

Next day Fred Stone was a bigger hero as a volunteer press agent for the Christian life than he ever had been as a plain comedian for Charlie Dillingham.

The benefits were a huge success. The net takings this one night for the sick, relief, and insurance funds of the vaudevillians were practically $150,000. Which was made possible because many tickets were sold out of town and resold in town. The programs alone, huge affairs weighing four pounds each and printed in four colors, brought in, at 50 cents apiece, $84,000. I have often wondered who it was who saved his souvenir programs after these benefit events. Now I know. He lives over in New Jersey and he offered to sell me his entire collection last week. But our attic is full.

More of M. Capek's Provocative Robots

By Sheppard Butler.

THAT sinister and strangely significant fabrication, "R. U. R.," has postponed its departure from the Cort. The entertainment which was to have succeeded it is not ready or something, and we are to have, happily, some further opportunities to sharpen our wits on what M. Karel Capek, of Czecho-Slovakia, has to say about the comic mess of things called life. It seems as good a time as any to remind the faithful that here is a play not to be missed.

JOHN RUTHERFORD as Radius, one of the robots in "R. U. R." at the Cort.
[Bruguiere Photo.]

You may not like it—many don't, I discover—but your fund of experience in affairs dramatic will be considerably the poorer if you do not test your reactions to this savage dig at human self-complacency. I found it at once curiously provocative and distinctly exasperating—provocative because of its close-packed, sardonic humor; exasperating because, for me, it never wholly arrives at its destination. Its author has a fantastic, mordant idea which he doesn't quite get over in terms of the theater. It is the most consistently disappointing play I know, because it promises so much.

Nevertheless, there is a powerful kick in this macabre tale of the robots—synthetic beings devised by a man who "wanted to become a sort of scientific substitute for God" because, as one of his successors says, "God hasn't the least notion of modern engineering." Flawless workers they prove, with a "very high class human finish"; satisfactory and efficient until a presumptuous scientist gets to tinkering with them and the robots, too nearly human, turn and rend their masters. Wickedly and irreverently Capek leads you toward this dénouement, punctuating the adventure with such ironies as the invention—too late—of national robots, designed to take the place of the mistakenly international kind, to hate each other, fight each other, and keep each other in check. Certain kings tried that.

A meaty play, you see, but puzzling in performance and hard to evaluate. The actors seem uncertain whether to emphasize its melodramatic terror or its biting satire, and so both are a little blurred. The showmen don't know exactly how to take it, and try to make it funny with droll robot posters and efforts to get the word "robot" into current slang. London, where it is newly in performance, appears to be similarly at a loss.

One of the pungent bits in the dialogue occurs when the heroine makes inquiry about a robot which has been showing disquieting symptoms.

"Doctor," she asks, "has Radius a soul?"

"He's got something nasty," says the doctor.

Perhaps that is the matter with "R. U. R." It hasn't a soul.

Pensive Words on "Peter and Paula."

It is to be regretted that "Peter and Paula" ended its career last night. It will, presumably be acted no more in this country, since its players have abandoned it for something else.

Here was an uncommonly gay comedy, with sly values which, some of us thought, were a lively test of playgoing intelligence. As in the case of "R. U. R." not every one cared for it; indeed, its withdrawal is due to indifferent prosperity. But it was a skillful bit of stagecraft. Essaying infinitely less than the Capek play, it accomplished a good deal more, for it made its points. This Molnar, of Budapest, seems Old Reliable Gets Pestered with the Kinfolks' Children.

By Harris Dickson

THE wondering Colonel Spottiswoode glanced up from a seat on the porch when he saw Old Reliable come wabbling through his front gate, with a heavy-loaded wheelbarrow. Zack was bent double, straining every muscle. Once the negro stumbled, and gasped; then eased down his barrow as though it were full of dynamite. His fear and excessive caution roused the colonel's curiosity.

"Oh, Zack!" he called out. "What's that?"

"Nothin' much, suh." Sweat burst from Zack's face and he wiped it with a red handkerchief. "Nothin', suh. I was jes fixin' to make myself safe."

"Safe?"

"Yas, suh. I ain't cravin' none to git blowed up."

"Blown up?" The colonel stepped into his yard and examined a barrowload of projectiles that Zack was wheeling, many of the ancient relics being unexploded.

"Bombshells!" he exclaimed. "Better be careful, Zack. Those devilish things are liable to go off."

"I knows it. Dat's why I fotch dis load here, to git 'em away from nigh my house."

In the light of modern artillery they seemed very antiquated, these miscellaneous missiles which near sixty years ago had been hurled into Vicksburg by the federal besiegers —round bombs from mortarboats, evil-looking Parrotts, and long percussion shells, their caps intact and sheathed in lead. A chance blow on the wrong place might easily set them off.

"Zack, where on earth did you get that plunder?"

"Peared like Simmy never quit seekin' an' searchin' for lead to make bullets."

"Yankees flung it in here. 'Twarn't nothin' for me to 'cept pick it up."

"Pick it up? For what?"

"Huh! I used to sell dis stuff for ole iron, to de junk man."

"Then why didn't you sell it all?"

"'Cause," Zack grinned, "'cause I kinder got hesitated in my tradin' on account o' what happened to Isom. Me an' Isom was pardners, gatherin' dese bumshells when dey lay thicker'n clods in ev'y gulley. You 'members Isom Crowley? Dat ole hunter man? Well, me an' him 'vided. Isom busted out an' claimed de powder for his part, to hunt wid, whilst I sold de scrap iron. Us done fine dat fust day, until Isom made sech a bad mislick by hittin' one o' dese long fellers, smack on de head, wid his sledgehammer. Dat's how come Isom found hisself onqualified to be a hunter no mo'. It blowed off one arm, an' de biggest majority o' bofe legs.

"John fed dem ellyphants on peanuts, same as handin' corn to a chicken."

"Befo dat bad luck overtook ole Isom, me an' him had laid by a pile o' dese things onder my house to sell; an' I ain't teched it from dat day to dis, not me. But nobody can't prophecy what a meddlesome boy is fixin' to do. Lissen, Cunnel, lemme tell you what Simmy done."

As Zack's conversation mill got to working fluently, he abandoned the wheelbarrow and occupied his regular talking-seat on the top step, while Spottiswoode sat down again in his chair.

"Cunnel, ever since Jim an' Cassie come here to visit Seliny, wid five chillun, dey sho is been keepin' me in de middle part o' a worriment. Fust I tried to larn dem chillun; but 'pears like nothin' won't git into deir head 'cept through deir mouf. Huh! Plenty goes in dat way.

"Yistiddy, Cunnel, I made Simmy one o' dese nigger-shooters, which pulls back wid rubbers an' throws rocks. Huh! Simmy cost me a dollar an' six bits befo' night, payin' for glasses which he broke out o' Lije Mason's window. But Lije never raised no holler a'tall, 'longside o' de cussin' which Mr. Will Ramsey done when Simmy shot one o' dem huntin' dogs o' his'n. Howsomever, us got dat dog-shootin' scrape patched up.

"Peared like Simmy never quit seekin' an' searchin' for lead to make bullets. Den, Cunnel, 'bout half hour ago I was dozin' on my back gallery when I kep' hearin' a 'clack! clack. Tap! tap!' right onderneath my floor. Co'se I would riz up from dere ef I had 'spicioned dat 'twas Simmy, tryin' to git lead for his nigger-shooter by peckin' dem bumshells on de head wid a hatchet.

"Den here come Simmy, crawlin' from onder de house an' draggin' sump'n. But, Cunnel, I was so nigh 'sleep, it never fell in my mind to git up an' see what kinder devilment Simmy was doin'. Nex' minit I hears a 'Whack!' at de woodpile, whar Simmy done sot one o' dese long, narrer bumshells aginst a stick o' wood, an' lammed it on de nose wid his ax—same as Isom done. His fust lick never knocked out de lead, so Simmy was liftin' his ax once mo' when I rolled off my gallery an' grabbed him. Cunnel, dem chillun sho makes me fidgetty."

"Lucky that shell didn't explode," the colonel observed.

"Huh! 'Twouldn't hurt Simmy none; but it mought glance off Simmy's head an' tear down my house. Anyway, I aims to pile dese bumshells in yo' garden until I gits rid o' dem chillun."

"But, Zack, you told me that you found those little children very amusing?"

"I did, Cunnel — for a mighty few minits when dey fust come. Huh! Nuff of a good thing is enuff. Too much makes a dog sick."

"Didn't you have a lot of fun taking John to the circus?"

"No, suh," the old negro answered grumpily, and shut up.

"Don't you remember," Spottiswoode reminded him, "how you repeated to me the comical things that John was always saying? And that you were going to take him to the circus, and hear his remarks?"

"Yes, suh, I 'member all dat."

"Did you take him?"

"Yas, suh."

"Did John say anything funny?"

"No, suh."

"Did he say anything at all?"

"Yas, suh."

"What was it?"

"Well, Cunnel, ef I jes' can't git out of it, I'll tell you 'zackly what dat young nigger done. Y'onderstan', when Cassie an' Jim fetched deir swarm from de hills, 'twarn't nary one of 'em broke to wear shoes. Never sot deir foot on a brick sidewalk. Dey didn't know nothin'—an' mighty little o' dat. Co'se I laughed to see 'em dodge onder de house when dey heared a autymobile; an' when John glimpsed a street car, he 'fused to stan' hitched. One time I say to John, 'John, is you honest?' an' he 'ply back, 'Ma say I'se tol'able honest for my age.'

"Dem kind o' things kep' me tickled wid John, an' I couldn't hardly wait to hear what he'd reemark 'bout de circus. So when circus day rolled round, me an' him went to see de peerade, me standin' behind John wid bofe ears cocked up. Fust come dat corntraption which plays chunes by steam, an' I looked for John to break his bridle. But he never batted nary eye. Den de hossback ladies wid spangles, an' de clowns in dem funny little waggins. An' de hipperpottermuss! 'John, how you relish dat hipperpottermuss?' says I, fixin' myself to laugh. Huh! John never reemarked no reemarks—none whatever.

"Cunnel, dat whole ontire peerade passed by, an' 'twarn't nothin' in it which injuced dat young nigger to open his mouf.

"'Come on, John,' says I, 'we'se goin' to de circus.'"

"'Is dere any mo' of it?' he 'quire.

"'Co'se,' says I, 'dis is only de peerade.'

"Den us went to de main show, an' I 'splained all de animules; John fed dem ellyphants on peanuts, same as handin' corn to a chicken, an' ain't 'spressed hisself one time. Even dem long-necked gyraffes—Huh! He skacely looked up at dem.

"'John,' says I, 'don't dem gyraffes suit you?'"

"'Uhu,' says he.

"An' de tigers, an' buffalo things, an' lions jumpin' through hoops—an' John watched dem monkeys ridin' on ponies, jes like he never had anything p'ticular agin 'em.

"Atter de main show let out, us went to all de side shows —fat lady, snake charmer, wild man—an', Cunnel, I filled dat young nigger so full o' pink lemonade dat he had to tilt up his chin to keep from spillin' it. But I never got no reemark until I fotch John plum home, an' jammed him up aginst our gate.

"'John,' I says; 'Didn't you see nothin' you liked?'

"'Yas, Uncle Zack,' he 'ply back; 'dem things which you tole me was camels, dey sho is got a noble smell.'"

While the colonel choked and gulped, Old Reliable took a more cheerful hitch on himself, and looked around to be sure that nobody overheard him.

"Cunnel, sump'n's takin' place at my house right now

Dat middle sized gal o' Cassie's cut Seliny's dress an' onderskirt an' blue handkercher into three-cornered pieces.

which'll start dem chillun flyin' out o' Vicksburg. You 'member dat red silk dress which Seliny wears of a Sunday? Huh! Seliny favors a haystack, painted wid red roof paint. She thinks de sun rises an sets in dat dress. An', likewise, she's got a blue handkercher an' green onderskirt. Well, Cunnel," Old Reliable chuckled, "at dis very minit, dat middle-sized gal o' Cassie's is settin' on de floor wid a pair o' scizzors, done cut Seliny's dress an' onderskirt an' blue handkercher into three-cornered pieces.

"'Name o' Gwad, chile!' I says, 'what is you doin'?'

"'Makin' a crazy quilt,' she say.

"Den, Cunnel," Zack settled back restfully, with a malicious grin, "I jes' sneaked away an' left Jinny makin' her crazy quilt. 'Cause when Seliny gits home, she'll make dat gal see sump'n what's crazy sho nuff—an' 'twon't be nary quilt."

Fred Stone Shows Religion Has Its Niche on Stage

including the funds gathered in during N. V. A. week, celebrated throughout the country a month back, $400,000 was raised for the association charities. But the drain is heavy upon them. There are 12,000 members and a lot of sickness, take one month with another. Some weeks as high as $10,000 has been loaned to actors experiencing a spell of sickness or hard luck, or both. Most of them pay back the loans as soon as they are back at work. But there is still a generous sum required each year to finance them. Then there is a $1,000 life insurance paid to the beneficiaries of each member who dies.

Hard Luck With Silver Lining.

Ethel Clifton traveled all the way from California to stage a comedy drama she has written and entitled "For Value Received." And the night she arrived there came a wire telling her that her sister in California was seriously ill. She started back next day without waiting to see her play performed. Six thousand miles for that kind of disappointment is pretty hard luck.

However, it fits in well with Mr. Emerson's law of compensation. Not seeing the play saved her something. Miss Clifton had engaged Augustin Duncan to play the hero's part, which is that of a romantic author of forty-two or three. One of those good-looking, sympathetic fellows I assume she had in mind, like Charles Cherry or Bruce McRae or Norman Trevor.

Now, Mr. Duncan, although a mighty good actor, is not a romantic type. He is more than 43. He is thick about the waistline and his neck could stand a bit of lifting. Which does not help him in playing up to a heroine who insists upon referring to him as her "great big grownup boy." If she had called him her daddy, or even her dear old granddaddy, it might have gone better.

The story is a recasting of a familiar situation. An irritable writing man bargains with a helpful young woman to tour the world with him for $1,200. She will, says she, if he pays in advance.

Needs a "Bachelor Type."

Eight years later, after they have been registering around in a lot of hotels as "Mr. and Mrs." the writing man, being honorable, is of a mind to marry the girl. Having earned respectability, he feels she is entitled to it. Besides, he is going blind, and if his mistress-amanuensis leaves him he will be in a fix. Men are naturally so generous. But he is too proud to admit that he wants her to stay because he loves her or because he needs her.

Whereupon she turns upon him and withers him contemptuously for forcing her to the conclusion that it still is the woman who pays and that there are but two kinds—the good and the bad.

Hers had been a noble sacrifice. With his $1,200 and what she collected later she had educated her flapper sister. But now, sister having learned to smoke and swear and fall in love, she was ready to quit. Whereupon the poor author pleads against the name of love and becomes, "as said, "her great big grownup boy."

Not a bad piece, though a bit trite. Trevor or Cherry or McRae might have saved it. May yet, if they are not engaged, which they usually are. There is a heavy demand for sympathetic bachelors who can still look 40 years old in the drama. Maude Hanaford plays opposite Mr. Duncan, and Louis Kimball, Cecil Owen, and Harry Blakemore are in the cast.

Colored Players Win Favor.

The colored players, representing the Ethiopian Art theater of Chicago, did very well their first week in New York. But they were more generously commended for their "Chip Woman's Fortune," which is a one act folk drama written by a Negro author, Willis Robertson, than they were for the more elabprate production of Wilde's "Salome."

In his own territory and for his own people there is no reason why the colored player should not attempt anything in the line of drama that interests him. But when he invades the white man's theater he would do better to stick to his own plays.

These Ethiopian artists are, from what we have seen of them, splendid comedians. They have no difficulty extracting all the comedy values from "The Chip Woman's Fortune," relating the incident of an improvident Negro's threatened loss of his phonograph and his job because he has been unable to keep up his installments.

But when they get to "Salome," for all the setting is much superior and far more care has been expended upon the staging, they become the exponents of an imitative art. Not consciously are they imitating their white sisters and brothers, but unconsciously they can hardly avoid doing so. And as in the picture they cannot hope to achieve the illusion necessary, there is little that is satisfying or stimulating in their reading save the earnestness and infinite care they take with it.

Tragedies Sweep Prizes.

All three prizes in the Little Theater tournament last week were awarded to tragedies. Proving either that the amateurs do their best work in the gloomy drama or that their judges took their jobs too seriously.

The $100 prizes went to the Gardens Players of Forest Hills for their performance of Robert Courtney's "The Clock"; the East-West Players of Manhattan, who offered a Russian bit, "The Little Stone House," by George Calderon, and the Fireside Players of White Plains, who gave an original sketch called "The Crow's Nest," by William Manley.

In the playoff of this automatic tie on Saturday, the East-West Players were adjudged the best three groups, and to them was presented a tall silver vase from David Belasco, which they will be called upon to defend next season.

The tournament was an artistic success and paid for itself financially, which is all its promoters hoped for. How many hopeful amateurs are likely to be turned into bad professional actors by the effects of the contest time alone will tell.

An Amateur of Judgment.

But they may all be like Dorothy [Mrs. George G.] Cochran. There was an added prize in the form of a contract for a Broadway appearance offered to the lady the judges picked as the best actress of the tournament. Earl Carroll gave this and the award fell to Mrs. Cochran, who is the executive manager of the Clark Street Players of Brooklyn. She played Mrs. Pencil in their performance of "The Pot Boiler."

Presented with the chance to sign the Carroll contract, Mrs. Cochran declared it would not interest her unless it happened to be for short engagements, which would give her needed experience without interfering with her home work. Otherwise she was content to go on being an amateur. If they are all like that I shall not worry.

BACK TONIGHT

[Moffett Photo.]

Here not so long ago in "Garrison and the Girls," he returns this evening to appear at the Harris in the leading rôle of "Rolling Home," something new by John Hunter Booth.

Pensive Words on 'Peter and Paula'; News of the Stage

to indulge in a finished dramaturgy where his neighbor, Capek, of Prague, is as yet in the tentative stage. Comparison of their work is irresistable and not as unfair as it sounds, for though their ways are widely divergent, a certain fantastic irony, characteristic of central Europe, seems to have got into the blood of both. The soaring flights of "Lilliom" kidded mankind quite as brusquely as do the grim jeers of "R. U. R." And "Peter and Paula," gentle trifle though it may be, conceals a mean snicker at the expense of human nature.

Not the least interesting thing about the latter piece was that it brought into our ken the rising young actress named Helen Gahagan. A year ago she was a student in Barnard college. A few months later the New York critics were devoting columns of rapture to her performance in an Owen Davis play called "Dreams for Sale." How she got the part does not matter; she got it, and was a romantic, dazzling, and sudden success. But "Dreams for Sale" failed, and Miss Gahagan permitted herself a bit of a breakdown. Various rôles were offered her while she was recuperating, and after much deliberation she chose that of the scheming young secretary in "Peter and Paula," then known as "Fashions for Men." It was a characteristic choice, for it wasn't really much of a part.

"But," she says, "it was a hard one, and that is what I needed. I have played it a little differently each night, and I feel that I have only 'got' it twice. The whole play was odd that way. If it got away from you once the whole act was gone. I've learned a lot from it."

"Chains," to which the chief figures in "Peter and Paula" now turn, is said to have a better rôle for this vivid personality. It was sent to William A. Brady by an agent, bearing some imaginary name as that of its author. Mr. Brady had about decided to accept it when Jules Eckert Goodman dropped in one day with a manuscript.

"I have," said Mr. Goodman, "a play called 'Chains' which I'd like you to read."

"I've read it," said Mr. Brady.

It took the astonished playwright some moments to remember that he had sent out the play with an assumed name on it, to see if he could "get it across" on its merits, and then had made up his mind to abandon the masquerade as futile. Anyway, "Chains" was taken and turned over to Messrs. Lester Bryant and John Tuerk, who will make their bow as a Chicago producing firm with it tomorrow night.

Gossip of Plays and Players.

Lionel Barrymore, who has been under the management of Arthur Hopkins this season, will be added, it is said, to the impressive group of stars David Belasco has collected for next year.

The players from the Moscow Art theater return to New York tomorrow for their last two weeks of performances in this country.

to take place next week will be an announced in due time.

The Week in Concert.

Though the coming of spring usually puts off the concert season with considerable abruptness, a number of concerts remain to be heard in the course of this week. First in point of time is Jessie Crawford's organ recital at the Chicago theater, one of a series of weekly appearances occurring promptly at the hour of noon on Sunday. He is featuring Gordon Balch Nevin's "Sketches of the City" today with the "Martha" overture and some music in lighter vein also on the program. Marie Walter, soprano, will be the soloist, with Musetta's waltz song from "La Bohème" as her principal number.

In the afternoon there will be a "Recital of American Negro Artists" at the Studebaker. Among the artists listed are Hazel Thompson Davis, dancer; Clyde Glass, pianist; Lou-Ella Lyles Smith, soprano; Hugh Buchanan, baritone, and Harrison Emanuel, violinist. The event will be under the auspices of the National University of Music, which occupies the former home of Mme. Schumann-Heink on the south side, and was donated by the famous contralto to the organization.

Also listed for this afternoon is a piano recital by Leonard Shure, a pianist of extreme youth, who will play works by Mozart, Beethoven, Chopin, Liszt, John Alden Carpenter, and others at Kimball hall.

Brahms' monumental and seldom heard "German Requiem" will be sung by the choir of St. Chrysostom's church tonight. Emory L. Gallup is the organist and choirmaster. The soloists will be Mrs. Christina Barker, soprano; Geraldine Rhoads, contralto, and George Gordon Beck, bass.

Julie Manierre, soprano, and Harold Ayres, violinist, will appear in joint recital under the auspices of the Musical Guild at the Fortnightly club Tuesday night. Jane Holter, 13 years old, will make her musical introduction in a song recital at the Gladys Hight School of Dancing Thursday night.

The Chicago Sunday School association will present a large women's chorus at Orchestra hall Friday night in numbers by Franck, Saint-Saëns, Dvorak, Costa, and the director, H. W. Fairbank. The assisting artists will be Mrs. Valerie Walker Hoffmann, soprano; Gulda Bustabo, violinist; Francis S. Moore, organist, and the Oriental Kids quartet. On the same evening Dorothy Dienstfrei will give a piano recital at Lyon & Healy hall.

"Composed and Compiled by—"

A question regarding the musical accompaniment to moving pictures came up the other day. It was known in a general way that the music in the orchestra fitted to the action on the screen, but the details of the process were mysterious. It became somewhat more clear when a "thematic music cue sheet" came to this desk.

The name of the particular film makes no difference, since the cue sheet is typical of many others. It was, so the legend states, "composed and compiled by"—and again the name is not essential. It pointed out, however, that the ingredients for such a composition and compilation are a stop watch, a well catalogued music library, and a touch of imagination. Armed with these, the composer and compiler goes into his projection room and evolves a set of directions that will do for any conductor in any movie theater of the land.

In this case compilation has been more important than composition. At the beginning Jensen's "Festival Procession" is prescribed, to be played four minutes. At the title, "And So Our Story Begins," number two on the list, the orchestra will change to Grainger's "Shepherd's Hey" and play it half a minute. Number three, which is "action," representing an old couple at a table, is pointed with "Dear Old Pal of Mine" for another half minute, whereupon, at the words "I congratulate you," number two is repeated for five minutes, about enough to play the piece through twice.

Others of a similar nature are introduced until finally there appears what seems to be the one bit of humor in the entire composition and compilation. The title is "They Talked and Talked" and the music is "Kiss Me Again," the waltz song that Fritzi Scheff used to make more than commonly alluring in "Mlle. Modiste," and it runs for four minutes. Comments of censorship committees and societies interested in the betterment of films are not included.

The film runs for the customary hour and a half, and in that time there are fifty-five music cues for conductors and players to watch. As the lamented B. L. T. used to say, quelque compliation.

Here and There in Music.

Much of the news of musicians of the last few days will be found in the shipping intelligence and under the subcaption "Headed Outward." Rosa Raisa and Giacomo Rimini have sailed for Italy, so has Edward Johnson, and others pointed in the general direction of Europe are Frieda Hempel, Erika Morini, Michael Bohnen, Jacques Thibaud, Ignaz Friedman, Maria Ivogun, and the members of the Flonzaley quartet. Frederick Stock intends to go on the search for new compositions if the deadlock now existing between the union musicians and the Orchestral association is loosened in time to allow him to make the trip.

Charles Wakefield Cadman is also due for a Paris hearing. A report coming by way of London holds that "Shanewis" is to be given at a new lyric theater at St. Cloud, and that Charles Hackett will function as chief tenor and stage manager.

IN "CHAINS"

MISS HELEN GAHAGAN.
[Raymor Photo.]

She has been acting at the Playhouse in Molnar's "Peter and Paula," but has abandoned this comedy, with Mr. O. P. Heggie and some others of the "Peter and Paula" cast, to appear tomorrow at the same theater in Jules Eckert Goodman's new play, "Chains." The piece has a tryout performance tonight in Waukegan.

The New Plays

Hitchcock Here; "Rolling Home", "Chains" This Week; Two More Entertainments Promised.

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK relighted the Garrick last night with his new revue, "Hitchy Koo 1923," which he has been offering here and there about the middle west but has revised somewhat for its Chicago engagement. The show engages the services of a number of people who may be classified as "home talent"—Marion Green, the baritone, long associated with the Chicago Symphony orchestra in the capacity of soloist; Miss Virginia Fissinger, dancer, who graduated from a local convent school and learned to pirouette here; Miss Irene Delroy, once of Hyde Park high school and later of the Chicago opera ballet; the antic Hickey brothers, Chicagoans for three generations back; Miss Alice Gerstenberg of the Junior league, who provides a mock melodrama to open the extravaganza, and others. Some account of the performance will be given later in the week.

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK.
[Hixon-Newman Photo.]

OPENING TONIGHT.

"Rolling Home" (Harris) — A new comedy by John Hunter Booth, vaguely in the manner of "Wallingford" and "The Fortune Hunter," they say, having to do with a bright young man who is fired by an ambition to put his native New England village on the map. Donald Brian is the bright young man, and others in the cast are Miss Lee Patrick, Miss Leila Frost, Miss Cora Williams, Frank Allworth, Edward Poland, and Theodore Babcock.

OPENING TOMORROW NIGHT.

"Chains" (Playhouse)—A drama of American life by Jules Eckert Goodman, presented as the initial offering of a recently formed Chicago producing firm, Lester Bryant and John Tuerk, Inc. For its first metropolitan performances—to use the grandiloquent phrase of showdom—the play will have O. P. Heggie and Miss Helen Gahagan in the leading rôles, and, in other parts, Paul Kelly, Edward Donnelly, Miss Frances Goodrich Ames, and Miss Olive Meehan. Miss Meehan, a newcomer in Chicago, is a sister of John Meehan, general stage director for George M. Cohan.

IMPENDING JOYS.

"The Voice" (Cort)—William Courtenay in something new by Frederic Arnold Kummer, designed for summer residence here but with the date of its arrival as yet unappointed. George Parsons, Henry Mortimer, and Miss Virginia Hammond are among the players.

"The Dancing Girl" (Apollo, June 3)—An opulent and kaleidescopic entertainment from the New York Winter Garden, with Miss Kitty Doner, Mlle. Conchita Piquer, Lou Holtz, Miss Jane Green, Miss Gilda Leary, and various others in it.

NOTES OF THE THEATERS

Hatcher Hughes, who wrote "Wake Up Jonathan" for Mrs. Fiske's use a season or two back, will have another play produced in the fall. It is called "The Runt," has to do with the mountaineers of North Carolina, and is said to be a wide departure from his earlier work—which, you remember, Mrs. Fiske did not bring to Chicago because there were some children in the cast.

John Stokes, recently of "The Cat and the Canary," and Leonard Doyle, who has been playing in New York in "Within Four Walls," will join the cast of "Up the Ladder" at the Central tonight, replacing Edward Donnelly and Paul Kelly, who move over to the Playhouse to act in "Chains."

That Max Reinhardt will stage several plays in the United States next season is now definitely settled, the famous Austrian having signed a contract to that effect with Morris Gest. His productions will include August Strindberg's "The Dream Play" and Offenbach's "Orpheus," and perhaps the huge spectacle, "The Miracle," devised by Karl Vollmoeller and Engelbert Humperdinck, which was a sensation in London and Berlin in 1911 and 1912.

Condensed versions of plays that have run their course with members of the original casts to act them, are becoming quite the thing in vaudeville. The second act of "The Torch Bearers" is being thus presented, and so is a section of Glen MacDonough's "Within Four Walls," in which Miss Helen Ware had a distressingly brief career in New York.

"Winnie and the Wolves," William Gillette's dramatization of the stories by Bertram Atkey, will have its first performance in Philadelphia tomorrow night, with Miss Lola Fisher as the delectable Winnie O'Wynn. . . . Also new, and in Philadelphia, are "Adrienne," a musical comedy, with Billie B. Van, Richard Carle, and Miss Vivienne Segal in it, and "I'll Say She Is," a revue by the Johnstones, with a variety of entertainers. Van's emergence in "Adrienne" marks the end of his long vaudeville partnership with James J. Corbett.

Thomas E. Jackson, who played one of the many Smiths encountered by Miss Frances Starr in "Shore Leave," establishes himself as an impresario in Milwaukee today, offering a session of summer stock by a company which calls itself the Players' guild. Miss Elizabeth Risdon, until recently of "The Green Goddess," is the leading woman.

Hotels Windermere, overlooking Jackson Park

Why are the two Windermeres "Chicago's most homelike hotels"

Of all the claims which might truly be made for Hotels Windermere, one fact which has been chosen as almost a part of the name is the statement that these are "Chicago's most homelike hotels."

After all, doesn't this plain and homely statement cover everything else? Isn't delicious food, skillfully prepared and faultlessly served, a part of the ideal home life? Wouldn't you sometimes like to go into your kitchen and prepare a meal with your own hands, and sometimes have servants prepare and serve almost anything that your heart desires, without the need of a single thought or care on your part?

Aren't quiet surroundings, the broad porches of Windermere-West, the inviting terraces and beautiful interior appointments of Windermere-East, what you would want in a comfortable home?

Wouldn't you include in your home such conveniences as running ice water, a place for dainty washing, an abundance of closet space, and artificial refrigeration and ventilation, if they were practically possible?

In Windermere-East you get the full benefit of thirty years experience in Windermere-West. In both you find hospitality, a spirit of service, a desire to anticipate your wishes and provide for your comfort.

Come to Windermere-East or Windermere-West as a guest, for a day, a week, a year, or a lifetime. Visit these two hotels, and see the accommodations which make this variety possible.

THE TRIBUNE has a booth at the Motion Picture Pageant of Progress which opened at the Coliseum last night. Many of the stars arrived early in the week in order to be there on time. Among those who got here before the opening and helped to make the occasion a gala one were Charles Ray, May McAvoy, Hope Hampton, and Elaine Hammerstein. They were met by a reception committee and also a large crowd who followed them about the city in motor cars. Friday night next will be festival night at the pageant. The Coliseum will be decorated with hundreds of balloons and ribbons of paper and a snowstorm of confetti will fall.

CLOSEUPS

Mildred Harris is now a star again. Her work in "The Fog," a Metro release, was so good that Max Graf, the producer, signed her as a star for a forthcoming picture.

Margaret Irving, the celebrated Ziegfeld beauty, is now to be seen on the silver sheet. She made her screen debut in "M. A. R. S."

Lillian Gish has been eight months in Italy completing the screen version of "The White Sister." A hard way to spend the winter?

Marilyn Miller, America's favorite musical comedy siren, is reported to have joined the ranks of her husband's profession and soon will be seen in movies, it is said.

Col. Anton Vaverka, a former Austrian army man, will be awefully arrayed as the Emperor Franz Joseph in "The Merry Go-Round." He was engaged to play the part because of his likeness to the emperor.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

TO A CORKSCREW.

On your lonely little shelf
By your lonely little self
You await that tug and strain
That will thrill you no'er again,
You await that gay outpour
That will gurgle never more—
Surely you were never meant
For uncorking liniment.

What a sad yet silly end,
O my damp and devious friend—
You with such a jolly past—
Was it, then, too good to last?
Must there for us all await
Some humiliating fate
Just because we try to give
Joy to others while we live?
You who sipped of usquebaugh,
You must feel that life is blah
Pulling corks from brews and pills
For pious folks with pious ills.

Where will you rear your children?

THOUSANDS of Chicagoans, eager to have a desirable home in a desirable place, endure discomforts of congested living conditions while they ponder the all important question of where to live.

And yet, within a short ride of Chicago, easily accessible by electric or steam railroad, there is a happy family-land where children can have their pets, where the streets are safer and the air is cleaner.

In the encircling cities and towns comprising the Metropolitan District of Chicago, you will find desirable home-sites near adequate schools and churches. Values are on the up-grade in these growing communities. Opportunity for interesting investment is coupled with the selection of a home.

Indicative of the potential growth of this Metropolitan District, a survey shows an estimated increase in population of 1,657,000 in the next 17 years. Of this total, it is estimated Chicago's population will increase 1,048,000. This leaves for the cities and towns adjacent to Chicago, an estimated population increase of 609,000 or 58% as much as Chicago itself.

This area around Chicago is the very heart of the Public Service Company's territory, so in making your plans you may be certain of the same full measure of Electric or Gas Service which you now enjoy

If we can assist you to select a location for a home or industrial site, we shall be glad to have you call at any of our offices.

WE'VE been inviting you to come and share our summer joys and blessings—our cool, delightful days and cool, refreshing nights; to golf and motor and swim and climb and hike and yacht with us; to rebuild yourself physically, mentally and spiritually in this scenic wonderland and this vitalizing air with the tang of the sea, the ozone of the mountains and the balsam of the evergreen forests; to feast your soul on vast snow-clad peaks, shimmering mountain lakes, rushing streams, tumbling waterfalls, a lovely archipelago nestling in an emerald sea, and the pounding surf of the broad Pacific; to drink this water so pure that we use it in our automobile batteries as it comes from the tap.

We've only sketched the high spots—the realization will be better than we've promised. Come out away from the heat and dust and din, away from mosquitoes, pests and storms—out to the land of content and summer delight. It's your heritage as well as ours.

No visitor to any part of the Pacific Coast should fail to travel at least one way via Seattle and The Charmed Land.

Wearing Apparel Week

For the Fiftieth Anniversary Sale's Wearing Apparel Week Our Corset Store Presents

The New Corset Styles for Spring and Summer on Living Models; Daily 2 to 4 P. M.

—Third Floor—Dearborn Street—

Every woman who is particular about her figure—about the way her clothes hang and fit—about the fashionable figure lines—about her ease and comfort—will find the display of the styles for spring and summer on living models full of the utmost interest.

Each of the sixty-eight models of Warner's Corsets, Wrap Arounds, Corselettes and Brassieres, Binner Corsets and R. & G. Corsets and Elasticside Corsets displayed on living models, featuring every type of figure, will be demonstrated and its merits explained by leading corset authorities—Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday—2 to 4 P. M.—in our Corset Section.

The Corset Makes the Costume

No woman who gives the least thought to the way her clothes appear can overlook the real importance of the corset—for no gown, no suit—and seldom a coat or wrap can look its loveliest if your figure is not at its best. The corset is the all-important garment that brings a graceful and well-poised appearance—if it is chosen with due consideration. The corset that will re-make your figure and bring it into conformity with the newest style developments is the Binner

Binner Corset

Designed differently from most corsets—and in so wide a variety of styles that our expert corsetieres can fit you to bring to your figure the fashionable lines without in the least interfering with your comfort, features that are quite unusual in the ordinary corset.

Your corset difficulties, no matter what they are—can be overcome by the expert individual attention with which we serve our patrons—aiding in the proper selection and fitting of your corset in a scientific manner few other corset stores in America can equal—and for this service of such inestimable value to every woman no extra charge is made.

A Binner corset that is exceedingly popular for the tall, long-limbed, plump figure—made especially for this type—it comes well down on the figure, taking wonderful care of large thighs, low down—the ungraceful lumps of flesh will disappear and curves that are long and slim will take their places. The bust is extremely low with elastic inserts to center of diaphragm—this model is quite low in the back above the waistline. Sizes to 36 at $10.

Binner corset as illustrated—for the more average figure that wants the diaphragm controlled and reduced. A model that comes up slightly over the diaphragm, but slips away at side and under bust—extremely low. Many women find that this corset gives them an appearance of greater slimness than any corset they have ever worn. The flesh is gently controlled where control is most needed. In handsome flesh brocade, as illustrated, at $13.00, or in serviceable coutil at $9.

Binner Corsets in complete variety at $5 and up to $15

R&G Elasticside

The Elasticside corset is made of alternate sections of elastic and fabric—so arranged that while you scarcely realize you are wearing a corset you experience the most delightful feeling of support—made in both closed or laced back styles—sizes to 36 at..... $4 to $8

To the Young Woman

Apropos of the Elasticside

A word of advice to the young woman who wishes to retain her graceful figure will not be amiss. It is just this—no matter how willowy your figure—as the months creep upon you there will come a time when neglect through insufficient corseting is bound to take its toll.

Here is a corset which gives absolute freedom of movement—in your play, your work, your dancing—and yet will definitely guard your health—your youth—and youthful figure lines. Sizes to 32—at .....

Fer or Agin? What Say You of the Movies?

Dear Miss Tinée: After the pitched battles of the last few Sundays I don't know whether it is safe to send in a letter. When one takes a slam at a critic, it is always the better plan to do a little fortifying in advance, if you ask my opinion—which I don't suppose you do. After all else is said, the big kick in a review is the actual criticism of the picture, the little quips, sidelights, etc., being matters of minor importance.

Once each month you have been giving us a list of the features which you declare to be the best of the current releases. Now, let's see how your choices compare with the reports sent in by the first run theater owners throughout the country. Twice a year a leading trade publication checks up on the films which have been generally shown and rates them on a percentage basis.

For the first half of 1922 the best liked films have been, in the order named, "Robin Hood," "When Knighthood Was in Flower," "Tess," "Dr. Jack," "The Christian," "The Pilgrim," "The Dangerous Age," "Suzanna," "Adam's Rib," "The Voice from the Minaret," "Peg o' My Heart," and "One Exciting Night." These twelve pictures have been selected from a list of more than 250 in all, and, unless my memory plays me false, at least eleven of the titles appeared in your different monthly selections. A record that any critic should be proud of.

I would advise disgruntled fans, and also those who are personally connected with the movie game, to stop, look, and listen before showering abuse on a motion picture editor whose work shows such an intimate knowledge of just what goes to make a high class photoplay.

No critic can please evrybody. Charles Gatchell of Picture Play once put the matter up to me in this way: Just pick ten people at random, and try to make them admit they like the same kind of books, or the same kind of hat, or the same color scheme in clothing. After you have done that you will understand how easy it is for a reviewer to satisfy the different groups of movie fans!" And I guess he was right. JAY DEE CEE.

Dear Mae Tinée: Why this prolonged absence, please? Thousands and thousands, I'll wager, are asking that question also. What! No jolly, piquant, exasperating (at times), and yet lovable companion at the breakfast table in the morning! What does it mean? It can't possibly mean you have "turned us down." Sincerely now, honestly, I am hungrily anxious to have you with me again in the morning. CAPTAIN TONY.

[Indeed, Miss Tinée has not thrown you down. She is having a much needed vacation and will come back as soon as she is thoroughly rested. I am but her helping hand. Don't think of me as a usurper, please!]

IN VAUDEVILLE

MME. OLGA PETROVA.

She has laid aside "Hurricane" for the time being (though she plans to make a movie of the play) and will confer her presence this week on the bill of variety at the Palace Music hall.

Dear Miss Tinée: I saw "The Tiger's Claw," and I think Aileen Pringle runs away with what there is to the picture. She has everything for a future star.

B. B.

Dear Miss Tinée: Please thank THE TRIBUNE for me for that picture. I have been reading THE TRIBUNE for many years, and must say, judging from the photo, that you must have been a mere infant when you first joined the staff of TRIBUNE writers.

W. C.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am not a nut, nor a fan, but a believer in the movies. You write what you think about the movies and so I am going to write what I think.

To begin with, I think it is futile business for you or any one else to criticize the movies. Your saying so doesn't make a picture good or bad. A picture is good or bad according to its reception by the audience. Another thing is that you are too likely to reflect your mood in your criticism. It can be done.

People do not go to the movies to be uplifted, downcast, or preached to. They go to be entertained. If the picture fails to make the greater part of its audience feel a little better in spirit, or have kindlier feeling in their hearts, or emotion of some sort, it is a failure. I have, in my own experience, enjoyed immensely pictures that, if I had listened to the critics, I never would have seen.

Just the same, I read most of your stuff in THE TRIBUNE, and I like it. Your latest criticism or review, call it what you like, in regard to Pola Negri in "Mad Love," I agree with heartily. But I do not always.

Incidentally, I took a good look at your picture when it was in the paper, and I must say if you are as nice as you look a person could look several times without hurting his eyes. I think you look like a person one would be glad to know and be better for it. Besides, I never say a person with gray eyes who didn't have brains and sense. Many people have brains, but few have sense. I'm for you, and may you live to write for the movies for years to come.

W. A. W.

[Though Mae would be too modest to print this herself, I think you both deserve it—she because what you say of her picture is true, and you because you have written a sane letter.]

Dear Miss Cunningham: You ask fans why the same brands of gestures and facial expressions are invariably used in the movies to indicate certain facts and situations. They are brain savers. If the actors and actorines did not use these patented devices they might have to learn how to do some genuine acting. The optience—ouch! it sounds as if we had a sty on our eye—is not supposed to have much, if any, brains, and, therefore, the actors are obliged to use the most simple devices in order to make it understand things.

Sometimes the audience—it hears music any way—laughs in the midst of a tragic scene—not because it has no brains, but because the scene is overdone and reaches the burlesque point.

In "The Girl I Loved," with Charles Ray, in the tragic scene where he dreams he tells the girl of his love, the audience laughed during the entire scene. It was a matinee, and there were no children. Ray overdid the scene so that it was like a burlesque. If he had only used a little restraint and not acted like the wild man of Borneo, no one would have laughed.

I enjoy reading your interesting reviews, and hope to have the pleasure of reading them for many tomorrows.

He Thought His Disease Incurable

A man recently shot the young woman to whom he was engaged to be married and in explanation said that he had an "incurable disease."

But was it incurable? Probably not—because the cases of "social" disease that are actually incurable are surprisingly few. In any event those afflicted have no right to pronounce judgment upon themselves and say that their cases are incurable until they know the true facts regarding their condition. And these one cannot know without a thorough examination, supported by scientific laboratory tests.

For the purpose of rendering efficient aid to those afflicted with "social" diseases, the public spirited citizens whose names appear below organized the Public Health Institute. It was not their purpose to operate the Institute for financial gain but solely as a public health measure. Hence the fees for treatment are very low and, if desired, liberal terms will be arranged.

At the Institute every facility for the intelligent diagnosis and treatment of these diseases has been provided for on a large scale. Its physicians are now treating more than 800 patients every week day—a monthly total of more than 20,000.

These physicians have specialized intensively in the treatment of these particular diseases. Every diagnosis is verified by germ and blood tests conducted in the Institute's own laboratory.

There is also a department of dermatology where the exact nature of different skin manifestations which may or may not have their origin in one of these diseases, is scientifically determined. Similarly a special department for tracing the origin of persistent nervous symptoms that have not responded to ordinary treatment. If they are found to be due to venereal infection it is often possible to arrest their further development and prevent those dreaded conditions known as paresis and locomotor ataxia.

Women and children are treated in a special department located on a different floor from the men's department. It is equipped to meet the special requirements of women and children patients and trained nurses are in attendance.

Again let it be emphasized that, in the vast majority of cases, "social" diseases ARE CURABLE. If anyone has reason to believe that he has become infected, or, if having previously been treated, there are now vague symptoms which give rise to doubt as to whether or not he has been completely cured, he should come to the Institute for a careful examination and at once begin a course of treatment should the examination reveal the necessity for it.

Stars of Today and of Tomorrow Meet as Guests

A delightful way to sell you a home, isn't it?

Corinne, however, owns her own X-ray gown and she has just loads and loads of new georgette and chiffon frocks, too.

Alice Calhoun is planning on a two months' auto trip in her next vacation between pictures. She likes to drive.

The tempestuous Pola Negri has taken herself to that delightful Delmonte, quite without her husband to be. And the tongues are wagging, as they will. Charlie gave her a dinner at his home Wednesday night. Will she be Mrs. Chaplin? Ah, will she?

Pola and Charlie were among the picture folks seen at the Mason Opera house when Margaret Anglin opened in "The Woman of Bronze." Others were Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Sutherland, Joe Schenck and Norma Talmadge, Charles de Roche, Nell Newman, Mrs. Thomas Santly, Mary Astor, and Mr. and Mrs. Aigren.

Pola has a rival, too, let it be set down here, one Sylva Nadina, fresh from Poland, a product of the dramatic and light opera stage and foreign films. She is taller than Pola and has dark hair and eyes. She speaks English—but there is a broad accent.

Gets Realistic "Pasting."

Theodore Kosloff—another prominent member of the large Slav family in Hollywood—performed a nifty Polish mazurka with Mlle. Vera Fredowa as a compliment to the lovely Pola during the filming of "Hollywood." Many other notables were present, including Viola Dana, William S. Hart, Walter Hiers, Mary Astor, Jack Pickford, Estelle Taylor, and Julia Faye.

Theodore, by the way, was soundly trounced a few days ago by Ricardo Cortez, a former boxer. The two men had been giving each other nasty looks for some time and it seemed something serious might happen—like the duel that was arranged between Norman Kerry and Capt. Albert de Conti, which, alas! never was fought except in print.

During the filming of "Children of Jazz" the two were supposed to fight with bare knuckles for the heart of a girl. They were more than realistic. Kosloff was assured of winning—by the director. But Ricardo—to put it politely—pasted him too hard on the snoot. Kosloff remained unconscious for quite a little time—and required much sponging to free himself of gore. Eileen Percy fainted and missed the most exciting part.

ASK ME! ASK ME! ASK ME!

Address Nazimova care Metro Pictures corporation, 1476 Broadway, New York. Cullin Landis is not Judge Landis' son. Hope this is soon enough. Thank you.

DEAR SID: Miss Dana's manager gives the date of her birth, but I don't think it is polite to repeat it. However, I will tell you she has not yet lived a quarter of a century. Is that near enough to settle the argument?

DEAR NEW JERSEY: I am very fond of your state, because it's so close to the Atlantic you have a right to be proud of it, no matter what New Yorkers say. I am sorry I can't supply the information you wish about Marguerite Clark. It is a personal question, you see, and—well, only the lady herself could answer truthfully, don't you know. We'd better leave her the privilege, don't you think? Mae Marsh is now rehearsing in a Griffith production, and you can soon see her again on the screen in "The White Rose." She is charming. Mable Ballin is slightly over 5 feet tall and has brown eyes. You are welcome.

DEAR J. A. E.: Johnnie Walker's address at present is care Robertson Cole, Hollywood, Cal. I cannot tell his age. Will remember to print these facts as soon as I get them.

DEAR R. W.: Will I please "print a picture of Rodolf Valentino—pretty please, with maple sugar on it"? Do you mean on the picture or on the please. If you mean the former—I prefer raspberry juice. But I'll ask Miss Tinée to do so.

DEAR CARL: Thank you for your kind letter. It is especially appreciated, coming from an ex-newspaper man. I shall try to take your advice, because I know if I should fall into the habit you warn me against it would have to be through a deterioration in taste. Thank you.

DEAR J. D. K.: Thank you for the French movie magazine. It is most interesting, and you are certainly right in saying that Jaque Catelain looks like a brother of Creighton Hale.

DEAR A. B.: Art Acord's address is care Universal studios, Universal City, Cal. Yes, it is necessary to send a quarter when you ask for a photograph. The poor actor folk would be bankrupt if they had to pay for every photo sent to admirers, but they are anxious to have you have them. Thank you for the good wishes. I return them. Don't be timid about writing. We are glad to hear from you.

DEAR ONLY A READER: I will give your request for a picture of Ethel Clayton to Miss Tinée and am sure she will try to comply with it in the near future.

DEAR H. M. B.: Address Marjory Daw, 6809 St. Francis court, Los Angeles, Cal., and Norma Talmadge, United studios, Hollywood, Cal. I thank you on behalf of Mae Tinée for your letter. Her reasons are always the best for condemning a film, but as I did not see the one in question I cannot defend her. Write her your reasons for liking it and your reactions to it, instead of just saying you do, and she can print your stuff in "For and Agin" if you have anything to say. After all, if every one liked chocolate there wouldn't be much chance for vanilla, would there? And vanilla's a good old flavor.

DEAR 14: Lloyd Hughes' address is care Ince studios, Culver City, Cal. Yes, to your other two questions. I don't blame you.

THE KICK KORNER

Its Object—Objection

Dear Critic: It is quite apparent that Mae Tinee is away this Sunday morning, and it is also apparent that the press agent of "The Covered Wagon" is taking advantage of that absence. Surely, after reading the several communications in the Kick Korner one could not fail to recognize the ear marks of said P. A. in the series. Well, anyway, they got away with it, didn't they? Say! When does Mae get back? DOROTHY.

The only press agent who took advantage of me was death. I thought it only fair to use some of the large number of commendatory letters for "The Covered Wagon" when Emerson Hough "went west." Besides, I thought it a good picture. We must judge pictures by pictures, just as we judge people by people and not by angels. I should have left your letter for Mae Tinee to answer, and let her slay you as only she can, slay. But I did not wish to annoy her with trifles. She will be back as soon as she is rested.

Dear Miss Cunningham: I thought "The Famous Mrs. Fair" was a punk picture, and your criticism led me to believe it was a good one. How do you get that way? BOY BLUE.

DEAR BOY BLUE: I'm sorry you thought I was deceiving you. I didn't think it was perfect but I think it has many of the elements of a good picture.

Dear Critic: "Souls for Sale" is certainly whitening the sepulcher of Hollywood, and it was a rotten picture, too. At least, the wife and I both thought so. And why do people as prominent as Rupert Hughes try to put over such bunk on a trusting public? I guess it mumst be the money he can gather out of it. H. McD.

Dear Miss Tinee: I suppose it is rank heresy to criticize Thomas Meighan unfavorably, but to me he is so monotonous; he never loses his identity for a moment. One always knows just what he is going to do next and how his part will be put through. No personal magnetism, and he never knows what to do with his hands; no expression at all. He is "a hardworking conscientious actor," and you have said it. A. D. G.

Yes, A. D. G., you are the first kicker about Thomas and probably will be the last, as he is generally much admired. I said a "workmanlike actor" if I remember correctly, not a "hard working actor." You have a perfect right to your opinion which is just as good as anybody's else.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am an interested reader of your column. C. W. S. is evidently laboring under the delusion that omission of certain scenes in pictures is due to the film's being old. Reference is also made to certain pictures which were shown in Davenport and Milwaukee months before being shown in Chicago. For the information of all film fans let me say no picture is released at the same time over the country, due to local conditions in certain cities, details of which would take up too much space to tell here.

No first run theater in Chicago is furnished any but new prints—feature, comedy, or news reel. I am not connected with any theater but am an employé of a film company and know whereof I speak. A. O.

Dear Miss Tinée: In your review of "Bella Donna" you state that the average housewife will never understand the heroine's line of reasoning. You also seem to believe she uses no reason, but is swayed only by emotion. Did you ever see a woman who had any reason? NINETEEN YEAR OLD CYNIC.

CAT'S FANGS IN ARC.

CATS' fang teeth are deeper curved than dogs', and dogs' are more bent than alligators'. All three animals use them for the same purpose—to seize and hold prey and to aid in rending it to pieces. Why, then, should identical structures differ so much in shape? Their forms did not just "happen" to be, for nothing happened without a good reason in nature.

Look at a cat's lower jaw. If possible select the jawbone itself, without any flesh. Hold the condyles of the jaw, or hinges, between your thumb and forefinger and swing the bone back and forth like a pendulum. You notice that the canine teeth are shaped in exact arcs of the circle whose center lies at the hinge.

The jaws of carnivores swing only up and down; they cannot grind sideways like human jaws do. Animals with grinding jaws do not develop flesh rending fangs. The first purpose of a fang is to pierce. All the force of the jaw should be expended in driving it deep into the flesh. To do this efficiently it should not twist or slide sideways in the wound.

The arc of a cat's fang.

If the cat's teeth were straight they most certainly would twist. The one shape that they can have and still not rub the sides of the wound is in the arc of swing of the jaw. This is the most efficient form of fang possible. Dogs have longer jaws than cats; their arcs are flatter, and consequently their teeth are straighter. Alligators have even longer jaws; in fact, most of the face of such an animal is mouth. Here the teeth are all piercers and almost straight.

Activities of Women

"The Useful Women," an organization which is sort of a league of fairy godmothers, has started operation in Manchester, England. The object of the organization is to mend bachelors' clothes, darn their socks, look after children, act as guides to visitors, find vacant houses, teach languages, and do packing.

In Washington, 49 per cent of the women are engaged in gainful occupations.

Moslem Leaders League to Guard Their Holy Lands

LUCKNOW, India.—At a conference of prominent Moslem leaders, recently held here, it was decided to send a deputation to Mecca during the coming Haj pilgrimage. The members of the deputation will meet in an informal conference and discuss there the questions of administration of the Jajirital and of the control of the Moslem holy lands by non-Moslem powers.

The deputation will try to bring home to the minds of the rulers of Hedjas and Iraq the imperative necessity of safeguarding the interests of Islam by refusing to accept the aid and the consequential direct and indirect control of non-Moslem powers in matters pertaining to administration and otherwise.

Five learned and influential Mahommedans will constitute the personnel of the deputation.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Anti-Volsteadism Arises Powerful in Social Circles

By Mme. X

IT was at a cheerful little dinner given last week by one of the most popular hostesses in the local world that amuses itself. (I have given her name prominence here so often that I have sworn off it for a month.) "O dear!" she sighed. "How I hate prohibition! You have to make so many more cocktails than before it happened; everybody takes not only one but as many as he can get." It is true, and does not include a successful law.

Apropos of this, have you been asked to join the new anti-Volstead society? It is being organized all over the land. The idea is to have that element in the country which does not believe in such a paternal and personal law as that established by the eighteenth amendment as well coördinated as are the supporters of it, those who put over during the stressful days of the war when the rest of their fellow citizens were only thinking of achieving victory and bringing peace. It costs a dollar a year to belong to this society, and its platform is:

1. Beers and light wines now, but no saloons ever.

2. The liquor traffic should be regulated locally by the states and should have no place in our federal constitution, which ought to contain only the framework of government and the great fundamental principles acknowledged of all men and no longer a subject of controversy.

3. So long as the prohibition amendment and the Volstead act are the law of the land they should be obeyed.

4. Meanwhile it is the right and duty of all who still believe in real temperance, in self-respect, self-restraint, and the logic of personal morality, to work for the repeal of the Volstead act and then of the prohibition amendment itself.

Notables Among Supporters.

This new association is supported by a long list of notabilities, if one may judge by the names of its vouchers appearing on the society's letter paper. Glancing down the roster, I see the names of R. L. Agassiz, Vincent Astor, Thomas F. Bayard, Rex Beach, Spencer F. B. Biddle, Maj. Gen. W. M. Black, U. S. A.; Thomas Morrison Carnegie, Irvin S. Cobb, the Hon. L. A. Coolidge, Walter Damrosch, Edward Everett, Marshall Field, Harrison Grey Fiske, ex-Gov. John W. Griggs, the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Edward J. McGolrick, the Hon. James M. Monroe, Archibald B. Roosevelt, Kermit Roosevelt, Agnes Repplier, Charles Scribner, the Hon. John T. Sherman, Augustus Thomas, Henry Kitchell Webster, and Admiral C. S. Williams. Mind you, I have only skipped down the long line of representative names, lighting here and there as a title or a familiar name caught my eye. It is an impressive rallying of the intelligentia of the country to correct what those subscribing to this organization and countless thousands not registered in it think was a mistaken piece of legislation passed at a time when the attention of the commonwealth was directed towards other things.

Those backing this anti movement in what they propose to make a nation-wide society of "moderates" are undertaking to modify and eventually to repeal the Volstead law and to curb fanaticism and rule by the minority. The prospectus states the situation in these words:

"If every voter who is against prohibition and in favor of temperance could be induced to write two letters, one to his political leader and the other to his member of congress, we believe that the Volstead law would be repealed; but since those of us who are against the present state of affairs are not much given to letter writing, and since the prohibitionists are given to that practice, it results that a member of congress gets on an average nearly a thousand letters from the fanatics for every one he gets from people who are accustomed to attend to their own business."

Capt. William H. Stayton, the founder of the organization, is national managing vice president. G. C. Hinckley is national secretary and treasurer. The national headquarters are at 511 11th street, N. W., Washington, D. C. The whole name of the organization is "The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment." Probably its members will be known as A. A. P. A.'s, or Aapas.

Active state divisions of the parent organization are now operating in California, Colorado, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Texas, and Wisconsin.

Good Points Conceded.

The X. family has long been on the fence with regard to this law. Its benefits are recognized. The entire elimination of the saloon, if it can be completely accomplished, would almost justify the passing of the impossible to enforce the amendment. The improved financial status of many a wage supported family is acknowledged. The harmful nature of most alcoholic beverages is granted. The industrial value to the business of the country is conceded. The possible moral benefit is admitted. We almost drop off on the Volstead side of the fence.

Then arise the banners of the anti-prohibitionists on the other side. The enfeebling qualities of moral strength achieved, not by conviction, but by law; the universal disregard of the amendment by so-called honorable men and good citizens of every walk of life, with the inevitable lowering of respect for all law; the advantage the rich have over the poor in gratifying their desire for liquor (one of the strongest arguments against the Volstead act); the evil, destructive quality of much of the stuff which is drunk in the name of Bacchus, causing death, insanity, blindness; the dangerous extent to which the "bootlegging" industry is carried on to the peril of life and order; the failure of the law to lessen crime, disorder, or accident (all of which, according to statistics, are on the increase); these and many other considerations have jerked this ardent advocate of temperance on to the anti-prohibitionist side of the fence. If any one should organize a society to promote temperance in every department in life, in eating, drinking, and sleeping; in loving and hating; in working and playing; in study and idleness, then will we be the first and most enthusiastic member.

In the ages to come, when mankind is much further toward its ultimate goal, those who come after us will probably smile at the chains we put around ourselves today in the name of freedom and virtue. Then it is to be hoped that it will not be necessary to compel by law the average man or woman to be sane and decent.

Rhode Island "Not Affected."

Did you know that in the little state of Rhode Island the Volstead act is not legally in force? Since the days of Roger Williams there has been a strain of independence in that community without its equal in the length and breadth of the land. He and his followers sought there a freedom not to be found at that time in the rest of New England. They went there to found a colony which should not be controlled by the narrow, harsh dictates of the original pilgrim fathers, who escaped from one tyranny to found another one. When the original thirteen states federated, Rhode Island refused to join the union until promised that no federal law touching directly the personal interests of the residents of that state should be considered as binding there until ratified by the legislature of Rhode Island. The eighteenth amendment has never been ratified by that body of legislators.

As a matter of fact, there is about the same regard for this law there as elsewhere, and what that means you and I know.

One of the most distressing by-products of this much cussed and discussed law is the conduct of the average American when he starts out on a tour of the rest of the world. He and his kind form a long line of thirsty ones at the door of the smoking saloons on all ships sailing under a foreign flag and there wait the opening of the bars after crossing the three mile limit. The first night at sea is apt to find the majority of the male contingent of the American passengers, to put it mildly, much the worse for wear. (Put truthfully, it would read disgustingly drunk!) This is a humiliation to the loyal American who knows what those of other nationalities are saying about us. It is not a pretty situation, nor are a large proportion of our fellow countrymen an attractive element in foreign lands. Their conversation is generally concerned with what they have had or are going to have to drink. No other people are so deeply interested in a consideration so unworthy and so harmful. This is what the Volstead act has done for us—made us the by-word and laughing stock of our contemporaries—and justly so.

By the way, a recently returned traveler, who came over on the George Washington, one of the ships run by the United States shipping board, says that it is the best managed and most comfortable ship on which she has ever sailed; that the table was the most delicious, bar none, and the service, equipment, cabin, and everything else superior to anything provided by the ships of any other country. The shipping board is making a supreme effort to compete successfully with the steamship lines of other nationalities and is apparently succeeding.

G. O. P. Women to Gather.

There will be a great powwow among the members and friends of the Illinois Republican Women's club on Tuesday next at the Congress hotel in the Elizabethan room. The occasion will be a luncheon and grand rally of the women of the G. O. P. The guests of honor, as we announced last Sunday, will be Mrs. Barclay H. Warburton of Philadelphia and Mrs. Charles H. Sabin of New York. Mrs. Warbuton is head of the women's Republican organization of Pennsylvania and vice chairman of the Republican state central committee. Mrs. Sabin was prominent in the organization of the Women's Republican Club of New York, which has a membership of more than 2,000. Both are reported to be capital speakers, and the occasion promises to be both snappy and enlightening.

Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman is chairman of the entertainment committee, with a long list of hostesses on her staff who will receive with her that day. It reads like the most carefully culled list of Chicago's most active and representative women. Every name is conspicuous on the boards running charitable or reform organizations, as well as on society's roster. It will be a great rendezvous for the active forces which make Chicago women celebrated from Dan to Beersheba for their ability and achievements.

Tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday the Daughters of the British Empire in the United States of America are having their annual meeting in the rooms of the Chicago Woman's club on Michigan avenue. The national president of this association is Mrs. George Cooke Adams of Chicago. The honorary president is Lady Auckland Geddes, wife of the present English ambassador to this country. National vice presidents are Mrs. L. Webster Fox of Philadelphia and Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick of Chicago.

There will be many meetings, luncheons, and other social and official occasions. One of the latter will be breaking the ground for the British Old People's home on Tuesday afternoon at Riverside, Ill. The home is being built under the auspices of the D. B. E. in the middle west. Mrs. G. Cooke Adams will turn the first spadeful of earth on the site of the new building. The Rt. Rev. S. M. Griswold, D. D., suffragan bishop of Chicago, will invoke the blessing of God on the undertaking. Other speakers will be the British consul and Samuel Insull. All of the architectural work on the building has been donated by the well known firm of Graham, Anderson, Probst & White. It promises to be a lively and interesting three days for the D. B. E.

"Bolo" Given Glad Hand.

The brief visit here last week of the former Italian consul general to Chicago, Count Giulio Bolognese (called by his intimates "Bolo," was made the occasion of a round of luncheons and dinners at which every one tried to prove to him that, though out of sight, he was never out of the minds of his friends here; that his place was kept green, and that some day we all hoped that he and his wife would return here. He is now stationed in Montreal, where he is consul general to Canada. When he landed here he was on his way to his famous farm in upper Wisconsin. There he and his brother devote their energies chiefly to producing a wonderful cheese which must rival that of the count in the play, "Peter and Paula," which, if you remember, was the offspring of the sagacious and musty Camembert and the snappy and pungent Roquefort.

The largest social affair for Count Bolognese was a dinner of about thirty at the Saddle and Cycle club, given by Mr. and Mrs. George McLaughlin and Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus Swift. That lively club is now open for the season, and its members assemble there in goodly numbers, especially on Saturday evenings, when there is music and dancing as well as having the games of "bridge" and Mah Jongg sets in full swing. Just why the last named importation from China has such vogue it is hard to say. I think that the pretty and costly little outfit has something to do with its popularity. The dominoes are so chic, the counters so smart, the box so attractive, that its devotees satisfy an esthetic sense besides indulging a pleasure in a game that gives considerable opportunity

The Nash Six Touring
Here's Real Proof That It Excels!

Here's undeniable evidence that you get far more for your money in the Nash Six Touring than in any other car of similar price.

First, you get longer wheel base. The Nash Six has from 2 to 9 inches more than others of like cost. The tires are bigger on the Nash Six. So the traveling is easier, and the tires wear longer. It's another point where you get more for your money.

Next, you get more car—more actual material—and it's the choicest steel, and wood, and fabric available.

And you get more and finer workmanship. There is actually more labor put into the building of the car.

You get more smoothness, more power, and smoother and more rapid acceleration.

In fact, you get plus value and plus performance in every feature of the car and every phase of its operation.

Come in and see our special week's exhibition of the Nash Six Touring with its many improvements and refinements.

Amazing Work by Children.

The City club last Wednesday entertained at luncheon the young Czecho-Slovakian band of singers and their guardian angel, Frantisek Bakule. This extremely interesting organization is touring the country, not to get money, not to sell their handiwork, not for any national propaganda, but simply to demonstrate to the Junior Red Cross of America their gratitude for aid extended by the Junior Red Cross to them during the strenuous times of the war when this band of crippled children was threatened with extinction.

The members of the City club were enthralled by the exhibition of what these youngsters, under the direction of Mr. Bakule, have learned to do to overcome their seemingly desperate disabilities. Not all of the thirty-two are crippled, but about six or seven are. One of these is a lad of 14 who was born without arms. He has trained his feet to take the place of his hands and fingers. He demonstrated this to the members of the club by taking from his pocket with his toes a pair of scissors and cutting out things from paper with them. When he was not satisfied with the way the scissors worked he took from a waistcoat pocket an ordinary pocket-knife, which he opened and used instead of the scissors with entire success.

Another youth, who was born with no hands and only two little undeveloped fingers on the stump of one arm and three of the same unfinished kind on the end of the other, is one of the best lithographers in Czecho-Slovakia. He can do much more with his pathetic little fingers than most ordinary children can with a full equipment of fingers and hands. He picked out a pine cone from a box of them which the band carries around with them and out of this, by whittling the stem into a sharp beak, he made a charming little stork. He attached long legs to it and fastened the whole on to a base while the club members looked on.

Czecho-Slovakia Interested.

Mr. Bakule said that these children had been of immense service in the rehabilitation work among war victims which is being carried on in their country. The discouraged, maimed, and crippled soldiers, when they see what these children have done to overcome fate, are inspired themselves to outwit ill fortune and recover their independence and self-reliance.

To have an organization come from so far whose only mission is to show to us their gratitude and achievements, with no thought of asking financial or other assistance, is worthy of record and appreciation. In their own land one of the chief supporters of the enterprise is Miss Masaryk, daughter of the president of the youngest republic in the world today. As Mr. Bakule expressed it, the youngest republic sent its greetings to the oldest. Both signed their declarations in Independence hall, Philadelphia. The Bohemians did this when their great leader, Thomas Masaryk, was here during the war, a political exile under the rule of the now deposed and exiled Hapsburgs. What a lot of water has passed under the bridge since then.

The John A. Carpenters and their lovely daughter, Miss "Ginnie" Carpenter, are now on their way to Spain, where they plan to spend some time. They will visit Mr. and Mrs. Roy McWilliams at Bidart, near Biarritz, where the McWilliamses have one of the most delightful castles in Spain that the mind of man ever devised and made a reality. The Carpenters have rented their house on Rush street for a year, which means possibly that they will not be here next winter, an irreparable loss to Chicago's gay world, to which they add so much.

The Arts club, of which Mrs. Carpenter is the enthusiastic and insp/ring president, is practicaly decided as to its new home. Circumstances over which it had no control made it necessary to leave its attractive quarters at 610 South Michigan avenue. But when its members find that the new home is to be in that impressive building the London Guarantee and Accident Insurance Company building, in the most desirable site south of the river, the southwest corner of the Boulevard Link bridge, they will soon become reconciled to the change. The plans for arranging the space leased sound most attractive. They include an outer terrace overlooking the tremendous street traffic that crosses the bridge at almost every moment of the twenty-four hours and the river's slower commerce, with its morning, noon, and sunset effects of light and shade. It is an ideal situation for such a club, being central and accessible.

But those who knew the old rooms, arranged and wrought out of a bare warehouse by Arthur Heun, will sometimes sigh for the beautiful vista of gallery after gallery seen through high arched doorways and leading from the lofty, crimson hung windows at the west end to the large windows overlooking the lake to the eastward. All is change in Chicago nowadays, though not decay. The final rest and settling is still afar off. When it comes we shall be as sumptuous and grand as any city of the world. Speed that day!

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Moneyless Girl Has Real Friend in Woman's Club

By Kate Webber.

DURING the year 1893 on the streets of Chicago were hundreds of women who had been thrown out of employment at the close of the World's fair. The genuine helplessness and hopelessness of these women appealed strongly to the generous heart of Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, one time president of the Chicago Woman's club. She went before this club and stated that there was no place in this great city where a woman without funds could find shelter—a woman who would work if given an opportunity. She demanded in the name of humanity that this, her club, do something at once to relieve the situation.

Her plea had its effect, and money was subscribed for beginning work. Other clubs responded to the call for help and contributed both furnishings and funds. And what was called the Woman's Model Lodging House was opened to the public.

No questions were asked of those who came for shelter—the past was not the thing to be dealt with—only the present and future. A charge of 15 cents a night was made, and if they were without money work was given them and they were paid for it—they, in turn, paying for their lodging. It was the principle of the organization that the actual handling of this money helped to preserve self-respect and that they might not feel themselves objects of charity. This principle has held through the years and no woman or child is turned from the door as long as there is a place to rest.

Senator William B. McKinley of Champaign, Ill., gave as a memorial to Dr. Stevenson the present home at 2412 Prairie avenue, which will accommodate sixty women and about fifty children. The organization has become one of the strongest in the city—a nonsectarian delegated body of 225 members who represent women's organizations of Cook county. For the last few years the work has grown and broadened until almost every trouble and sorrow that can come to women and children is brought to this door.

The woman who is on the downward path of years, when it is so hard to find employment, her little money gone, often weakened both mentally and physically from lack of nourishment and from worry, if not able to work for her lodging, is supplied from the loan fund. Often she can return the small amount and she does not feel that she has received charity, but that the hand of a friend has grasped hers, and her faith in humanity is restored. The young girl who is alone and without money is safe from the cheap rooming houses of the city. The mother with her little family who has been left, by desertion or death, without the father's protection, comes to this home and remains until she can gather up the thread of existence once more. She is saved from placing her children in institutions or giving them for adoption.

As time brought the need of better facilities for the care of the children, the generous friend of the institution, Senator William B. McKinley, gave another building for nursery purposes. Here the children are cared for during the day while the mother is seeking employment or otherwise adjusting her affairs.

In th elast year 435 homeless, discouraged women and 385 helpless little children have been cared for. During this period 22,110 lodgings have been given to women and 19,377 to children, an average of 113 per day, and 69,840 meals have been served.

In the nursery 18,255 days' care have been given and 43,714 meals served.

The great need for this work is demonstrated each day by the call from our cooperating organizations, which number sixty of our best agencies in the city and country.

We urge that those interested visit the home that they may know the work that is being done. A campaign for sustaining membership is being carried on by which it is hoped the budget for the coming year will be met.

Officers elected for the coming year are: President, Mrs. Herbert D. Sheldon; first vice president, Mrs. E. J. Brausseur; second vice president, Mrs. William D. Hurlbut; treasurer, Mrs. Sarah A. Graham; recording secretary, Mrs. R. F. Morrow; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Earnest H. Christy.

Mrs. Herbert D. Sheldon, president of the Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial Lodging house executive committee, is directing a sustaining membership campaign by which the committee hopes to interest the public in the work which is being accomplished at the home at 2412 Prairie avenue. A history of its founding and maintenance is given in the club notes today.

MRS. WILBUR E. FRIBLEY.

Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley, recently elected president of the Washington Park Woman's club, is also state chairman of home economics for the I. F. W. C., which will convene in Chicago on Tuesday. Among the especial interests of the Washington Park Woman's club is the restoration of the Columbian Fine Arts building in Jackson park, also the work of the Visiting Nurses' association and of the Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial Lodging house. The club has donated work and financial aid to all of these causes.

MRS. ROBERT E. GRAVES.
[Hutchinson Photo.]

At the annual meeting of the Chicago College club held last Saturday, Mrs. Robert E. Graves was elected president, succeeding Miss Nettie Baumann. Officers who will assist Mrs. Graves are: Mrs. Bruce Scott, first vice president; Mrs. Herbert W. Sanborn, second vice president; Miss Mildred B. Dennis, corresponding secretary; Miss Dorothy S. Clark, auditor; Mrs. Robert Watt, historian.

Citywide Play Festival Scheduled for June 9

Practically all recreation groups in the city are interested and will participate in the city-wide play festival to be held on Saturday, June 9, at Garfield park. In case of rain the event will be postponed for a week.

By bringing together those who maintain our parks, playgrounds, and community centers, the officers hope to enlighten the public as to their activities and accomplishments. The organizations sponsoring the festival serve in the capacity of assistants to the recreation leaders, who arrange for the larger details. The committee of 100 men and women includes the presidents and directors of many of the larger clubs of the city.

Four years ago the Woman's City club revived the play festival, which had ceased to function for a few seasons owing to the temporary discontinuation of the committee. The following summer the City club produced the second play festival at Grant park. Last year its welfare was in the hands of the Chicago Woman's club. This season the Chicago Woman's Aid, under the direction of Mrs. Kate Hirtenstein, is directing activities. Headquarters have been established at 4622 Grand boulevard.

Christian F. Wiehe is honorary chairman of the play festival committee and the other officers include Mrs. Kate Hirtenstein, general chairman; Mrs. Leo Adler, secretary; Everett L. Millard, treasurer; T. J. Smerjalski, chairman of arrangements; Mrs. E. E. Smith, chairman of participants; Theodore A. Gross, program chairman; Albert W. Noll, music chairman; Mrs. Morris Woolf, publicity chairman.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

Interested and excited consultation over what is the ideal arrangement of a small house, to be occupied by a family of five people, are being held these days in the office of Mrs. Russell Tyson, which is headquarters for the Better Homes in America demonstration week, to be held here June 4 to 10. Plans have been submitted by Russell Walcott, architect, for a four room, five room, and six room house, to be occupied respectively by families living on annual incomes of $2,500, $3,500, and $5,000. These house interiors, to be demonstrated in Grant park, are to be equipped with proper furniture, adequate linens, dishes, and other household appointments, and besides allowance must be made in the budgets for savings accounts and educational funds for the growing children. Among the cooperating groups who will furnish lecturers during the week, or help in other ways, are the Chicago Association of Commerce, the Chicago Woman's club, the Women's City club, the University of Chicago, the Housewives' league, the Association of Housekeeping Centers, Chicago Commons, University of Chicago settlement, Northwestern University settlement, Hull house, Ellen Bates house, the School of Domestic Arts and Science, the Chicago Church federation, the board of education, the Young Women's Christian association, the Parent-Teacher association, the Catholic Women's league, Lewis institute, the Visiting Nurses' association, the Chicago Woman's Aid, the United Charities, the Association of Arts and Industries, the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial fund, and the Infant Welfare society.

The board of directors and chairmen of committees of the Woman's City club will meet tomorrow at 10:30 o'clock. At 4 o'clock the Forty-second and Forty-third ward branch will meet with Mrs. John M. Blakeley, 1210 Astor street. A cross section of the varied and helpful summer activities in these wards will be presented by the speakers, all of whom are connected with the wards' parks, schools, churches, or local settlements. The Tuesday citizenship class will study the subject, "Legal Problems Confronting the New Administration." Francis X. Busch will be the speaker. The Twelfth-Thirteenth ward branch will meet jointly with the Tuesday citizenship class at 11 o'clock, followed by a luncheon at 1 o'clock. The Cook county affairs committee will hold a luncheon meeting on Wednesday at 12:30 o'clock. The young woman's auxiliary dramatic class will meet on Thursday at 6 o'clock and at 7:30 the Third ward branch will hold a meeting in the club lounge. Joseph Moss, chief probation officer, will speak on the "Work of the Juvenile court." On Friday at 12 o'clock the house library committee will hold a luncheon meeting at the round table. The Fortieth-Forty-first ward branch will take a trip down the drainage canal on Friday. The young woman's auxiliary will have a May party in the club lounge on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

The Cordon announces a dinner for next Friday evening, after which Adolph Bolm, ballet master of the Chicago Civic Opera association, will speak on "The Art of Dancing," illustrating his talk with dancers from the ballet corps.

Plans have been completed for the twenty-eighth annual convention of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held from Tuesday through Thursday. Among the prominent speakers on the program will be Miss Mary L. Stoughton of New York, Mrs.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

City Leads as Vacation Bible School Center

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

PREPARATIONS are under way for next season's daily vacation Bible schools, which are conducted under a commission of the Chicago Church federation and the active leadership of Emerson O. Bradshaw, whose headquarters are in the Chicago Temple building, Clark and Washington streets. Mr. Bradshaw, in presenting a report of last year's work as an incentive to larger results this year, says:

"Chicago is the world's greatest daily vacation Bible school center. More children were enrolled last summer in Chicago than in New York, including the state of New Jersey. Five weeks ago attendance on the vacation schools furnishes a religious opportunity equal to a year's attendance on the regular Sunday school.

"In Chicago there were 200 schools held last year with 250 cooperating churches with an attendance of 29,460. The holding of these daily vacation Bible schools began in Chicago in 1907 with four schools and an enrollment of 912. There has been a steady increase each year. We are calling attention to pastors and teachers in the churches and Sunday schools a month before the training of teachers begins on June 16 because of the need of creating favorable sentiment in advance. The International Association of Daily Vacation Bible Schools reported a total last year of 5,000 schools, 50,000 teachers, and 500,000 boys and girls in attendance. The schools interest the children in music, handwork, patriotism, and Bible study."

The Rev. O. F. Jordan of Park Ridge, Ill., has assumed editorial management of the Unity Messenger, news organ of 300 community churches, sharing this responsibility with the Rev. David R. Piper of Elgin, Ill.

The League of Religious Fellowship will hold its final meeting of the year tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock at the Grace church parish house, 924 Lake street, Oak Park. Mr. S. J. Duncan-Clark will speak on "Religious Fellowship and the Citizen."

A collection of $1,000,000 will be asked today of the Catholic churches of the archdiocese for charity work for the coming year. Archbishop G. W. Mundelein has made the appeal and the Associated Catholic charities have carried on the drive. Last year $649,400 was expended for the relief of the poor and it is hoped a much larger sum will be contributed today.

The first national conference of community church workers will be held next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at St. Paul's Union church, South Winchester avenue and 94th street. Charles E. Coleman of Beverly Hills, a layman, is president of the organization and the Rev. O. F. Jordan, pastor of the Park Ridge Community church, is chairman of the program committee. "There are," says Mr. Jordan, "300 union, federated or community churches in the United States. There are 14 of the number in Chicago, some of them among our largest churches." The conference will begin at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, and the closing session will be at 5 p.m., Thursday. Speakers from Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Waterbury, Conn.; Wellington, Colo.; Des Moines, Ia.; Malta, Mont., and intervening places will be on the program.

The Rev. Cornelius Woelfkin, D.D., pastor of Park Avenue Baptist church, New York, the church attended by John D. Rockefeller and family, will speak at 8 this evening at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall on the subject, "The Call to Religious Reconciliation." Dr. Woelfkin is counted among the liberals in his denomination and also a minister who preaches with evangelistic fervor. At 7 o'clock Clifford W. Barnes, president of the club, will give an informal Bible talk on "Friends of the Master."

The choir of forty voices of the Halsted Institutional church will sing today at the 11 o'clock service at the Mandell Methodist Episcopal church, La Vergne avenue and Congress street.

John J. Harrison has donated a sanctuary lamp to the Cathedral Shelter, Episcopal, 17 North Peoria street, in memory of Mrs. Marie Berton Gibson.

Karl Borders, recently returned from Russia, will tell of his observations in that country at 3:45 this afternoon at the Memorial Church of Christ, Oakwood boulevard near Cottage Grove avenue. Organ recital will begin at 3:30 and a reception will follow the address. The Disciples Social Union of Chicago is in charge of the meeting and presents Mr. Borders to Chicago.

THE REV. COLIN J. ROBERTSON.
[Gibson, Sykes & Fowler Photo.]

The Rev. Colin J. Robertson is the new pastor of the Memorial Church of Christ, Oakwood boulevard, near Cottage Grove avenue. The church is a federation of Baptists and Disciples of Christ. The Rev. Mr. Robertson is personally affiliated with the Disciples of Christ, as was his predecessor, Dr. Herbert L. Willett. As his name Colin denotes, the new pastor is of Scotch parentage. He was born near Toronto, Canada.

LOSING WEIGHT?

If Stomach Is Gassy, Sour, Acid, with Belching, Heartburn and Pressure, Try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Any number of thin people have great trouble with what they eat or drink and suffer with indigestion. The food does not seem to prepare itself to nourish the body. The stomach is in an acid condition and such people often complain of weakness, rheumatic pain, headache and a run down condition when what they need is the alkaline effect to overcome or neutralize this acid condition. A host of people have found that by chewing one or two of the large white tablets from a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets they get this alkaline effect, they then begin to pick up, take on firm flesh and eat whatever they like and feel fine. Get a 50 cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets of any druggist and note the splendid results after eating pie, chops, sausage and all the other tasty foods.

COMMERCIAL ART

A BIG FIELD FOR MEN AND WOMEN

Be a Creative Commercial Artist. Don't be the "tell me what to do" kind. Creative artists are worth from $100 to $500 per week and more. Our academy bases its instruction only upon the actual practices of Master Commercial Artists. By constructive instruction we teach those principles, developing the student step by step, until he is producing high grade Commercial Art.

The 1923 edition of our course embodies all up to date Commercial Art Practices. Large Commercial Art houses, employing hundreds of artists, have endorsed us as their training school. Students finishing half of this unusual course can secure and hold desirable positions. Four month students can begin to sell drawings.

Home study or class room instruction. Classes during the day; also Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings. Get our illustrated book telling all about Commercial Art and the opportunities it presents as WE TEACH IT. Send 6 cents in stamps for a copy or call in person.

Yellow Cab School for Drivers

Yellow Cab wants 3000 intelligent men over 21 years of age to operate 1000 new cabs which we must put into service—men of clean moral character, who are qualified to meet and deal with the good people of Chicago, who know the value of courtesy and the rule of good conduct.

Men who can drive are preferred, but experience is not necessary. Our three-week course of training is free of charge. New class now forming.

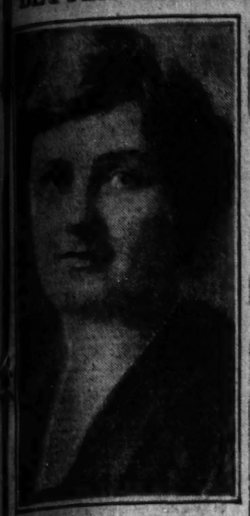
BETTER HOMES



MRS. WALTER H. BUHLIG.
[Mosell Photo.]

Mrs. Walter H. Buhlig represents the Parent-Teacher associations on the advisory council for the Better Homes in America movement, which is to have a demonstration week in Chicago and throughout the country June 4 to 10. Many of the puzzling problems of the household will then be solved by homemakers of the city, through lectures, demonstrations, and exhibitions of model interiors in various centers in the city.

Boys' Day Today, Boys Will Direct Church Services

Boys' day will be observed today by many churches. Boys will be asked to assist in services, reading the Scriptures, offering prayer and carrying the bag in processionals. Ministers will preach on the relation of the boy to church life and the home. Boys' week is one of the few special weeks not started with asking for money. The primary object of boys' week is in creating interest in the boys themselves and the interest of others in them.

The Disciples of Christ, who began work in Chicago in 1849, are planning to observe the 75th anniversary of that event in the fall of 1924. Next Sunday announcement of the plans will be made in all of the Disciples churches. A dinner meeting will soon be held to arrange details of the celebration. The first Disciples church in Chicago was organized under the leadership of the Rev. Lathrop Cooley of Detroit, Ohio, and in the register of church members appear the names of Miss Bertha Honore, who later became Mrs. Potter Palmer, and Miss Julia Dent, who later became the wife of Gen. Fred D. Grant., son of former President U. S. Grant. Former Presidents of the United States James A. Garfield occupied the pulpit of the first church on several occasions. There are now 76 Disciples churches in Chicago and nearby suburbs, with a membership of over 6,000 and property valued at $75,000. On the 75th anniversary a campaign will be put on to increase the total membership to at least 7,500 and to raise a general fund of $5,000 with which to aid church building enterprises. It is expected that leading Disciples ministers and laymen from various parts of the United States will come to Chicago to speak. The staging of an historical pageant will also be a feature. The Rev. Perry J. Rice, Chicago Temple building, is the Chicago executive in initiating plans.

In every Episcopal church in the Chicago diocese today announcement is to be made of the coming international convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and conference for church men and boys which will be held at the University of Chicago, Dec. 29-31. The Brotherhood of St. Andrew originated in Chicago at St. James' church in 1883 and the coming convention will be the fortieth anniversary. Plans are in making for the largest convention to date. The office of the Brotherhood is at 136 North Wabash avenue. Courtenay Barber is president, C. W. Brickman, secretary, and J. E. Houghteling, Jr., is treasurer. The late James L. Houghteling, Sr., was the founder of the Brotherhood.

The First Congregational church, corner of Michigan avenue and Twenty-sixth street, the Rev. Hugh Elmer Brown, pastor, has plans for a new building on the site of the present edifice, which will be wrecked. The church has the same small park on which are located the First Baptist, First Presbyterian, and First Church of Christ, Scientist.

The Rev. Robert W. Van Kirk, a specialist as an interpreter of Browning, will give a dramatic sermon-recital of Browning's "Saul" this evening at the Normal Park Baptist church, 76th street and Stewart avenue, the Rev. C. T. Holman, pastor. The Rev. Van Kirk was formerly pastor of the Normal Park church.

The Baptist Northern convention will be held in Atlantic City, N. J., next September. On Tuesday the Fundamentalists will hold a meeting as a preliminary to the convention. Dr. Robert E. Taylor of Indianapolis is president of the convention.

Mayor Thomas Nicholson will speak today at Bowen Methodist Episcopal church, Greenview avenue and Byron street, in connection with the promotion of a forward movement of the church. A campaign for $4,000 already been carried through and Sunday today will be more of a dedication than a solicitation. The pastor, C. F. Kiethauser is pastor.

Dr. John Aberly, professor, author, and for the last thirty-three years in Guntur, India, will be one of the speakers at the fourth annual convention of the Illinois synod of the United Lutheran Church in America, which will be held in Dixon, Ill., Tuesday to Friday, May 22 to 25. About $100,000 has been expended by the boards of the synod during the last year for missionary and benevolent work. Additional speakers will be the Rev. Dr. John M. Bramkamp, president of the synod, and the Rev. F. W. Stellhorn, under whose leadership the Austin church of Chicago has grown to 600 members within three years from the date of its organization.

Japanese Losing Faith in Old Gods; Peers Are Worried

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TOKYO.—[Special Correspondence.]—The people of Japan are forsaking the gods of their fathers, declared a number of the members of the Japanese house of peers, who have, accordingly, presented proposed legislation to have the matter investigated, to determine why this lapse in faith and to propose the proper remedies.

Reverence for the many main gods and the countless minor deities of the national beliefs is declared to be breaking down, and a nation of agnostics is taking the place of that nation which, thanks to the national divine leaders, has become the leader among the colored races of the world.

From statistics it does not appear that it is the inroads of Christianity which are undermining the respect of the people for all the big and little gods of the Shinto faith, old and new.

The official records of the bureau of religions, a branch of the department of education, show that out of the 62,000,000 Japanese, fewer than 300,000 are listed as "believers" in Christianity, of whom 72,367 are Roman Catholic and 110,013 worshipers in the various Protestant churches and missions.

Some other reason has to be ascribed for the fact that the throngs do not attend the temples and shrines as of yore, and the peers propose to find out what it is.

Minister a Week in New Germany

BERLIN. — [Special Correspondence.]—One new minister per week has been the record of the German government ever since, four years ago, the German people decided to overthrow their aristocratic administrators and try republicanism.

Sixteen metal workmen, eleven professors, thirteen farmers are among those listed in the ministerial statistics of the German republic published recently, inspiring democratic Germans with pride in their new administration.

Trout Season Is Now On—Bass Season Opens June 15

BITE? Ye gods, they do! Come right now before that old fishing fever burns you up at your desk. There are gamy "muskies" that strike like Dempsey, battling brook trout, the wily bass, pickerel, perch, and blue gills. Boy, if you're a fisherman, come up and get 'em!

Write Today for Free Literature

Wonderful lakes dot West Michigan and countless trout-filled streams crisscross it. This is the ideal vacation land for disciples of good old Ike Walton. How delightful to the palate is a mess of freshly caught fish done to a turn over an open fire in a scenic setting of Nature's best. Michigan's water-washed air instantly relieves hay fever.

Come up now, for TRAVEL COSTS ARE GREATLY REDUCED COMMENCING MAY 15. West Michigan is easily accessible by railroad or steamship. That's why throngs come up here every summer—why it is "The Playground of a Nation." Come up and play.

For free, impartial information about fishing and about your vacation in West Michigan, write:

Vacation in Canada

The Highlands of Ontario

GET out of the rut; choose a resort beyond our national boundary. Select Muskoka Lake, Lake of Bays, Algonquin Park, Timagami, Nipissing, French River or 3,000 Islands of Georgian Bay, just north of Toronto.

There you will find clear skies, cool days, unusually beautiful scenery—forests, islands, promontories, massive rocks, lakes, rivers—and a society in which you will delight to move.

Vacationists now comprehend that a domestic resort which merely substitutes one "Main Street" for another cannot possibly provide the complete change in daily habits which is essential to a successful holiday.

May we not tell you just what it all costs and how easily you can reach this land of lakes and valleys which has so much in common with the Scottish Highlands including golf. Our guidebook is free and not too extravagant in expression; the illustrations, maps and hotel directory speak for themselves.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and if it is published $5 will be paid. Address Best Joke Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

Dear Me, Dear Me.

Fond Wife: John, do you know you haven't kissed me for eight days?

Absent Minded Professor: No? Dear me, how excessively annoying. Whom have I been kissing? H. W.

Might Have Been Worse.

Many stories have been told of the mud seas which engulf the unpaved streets of certain oil towns in the rainy season, but these are all outclassed by one which is being told of a central Texas settlement.

Looking out of his front window a resident espied a hat apparently floating along on a sea of mud which a few days before had been a highway. Going out to investigate he discovered that the hat was on the head of the owner who was having difficulty in keeping his nose and mouth above the surface.

"Hey, Rastus, you're in a bad fix out dar, ain't you?" he called.

"Wall, boss, I ain't bragging, but I ain't in nowhar nigh as bad a fix as dis heah mule I'se riding." R. A. C.

Laughed Out Loud.

The minister, hearing that Jones had been blessed with twins, offered congratulations.

"Ah, Jones, I hear the stork has smiled upon you."

"More than that," returned Jones, mournfully. "He laughed out loud at me." L. A.

Up and Coming.

On the corner of a block in a downtown section is a restaurant with the flaming sign: "Never Closed." On another corner a drug store displays its motto: "Open All Night." Between the two Wu Ting Lung has his modest laundry. Not to be outdone by the Yankees, he has hung out an electric sign that can be read for a block or more. It reads: "Me Wakee Too." R. J.

First for Fifteen Years.

A minister who was officiating for a friend in a small country church was scandalized to observe the old verger, who had been collecting the offertory, quietly abstract a fifty cent piece before presenting the plate at the altar rail.

After service he called the old man into the vestry and told him, with some emotion, that his theft had been observed.

The verger looked puzzled a moment, then a sudden light dawned on him.

"Why, sir, you don't mean that old half dollar of mine? Why I've led off with that for the last fifteen years." C. E. J.

Declined with Thanks.

Officer to woman motorist who has hit another car: "I'm afraid I'll have to run you in."

She: "No, I thank you. I can get home without help." E. R. T.

His Nickel's Worth.

A small boy strolled into a drug store and said: "Gimme a nickel's worth of asafedita."

The druggist wrapped it up and gave it to the boy.

"Charge it," said the boy.

"What name?" asked the druggist.

"Hunnyfunkle," was the answer.

"Take it for nothin'," said the druggist, "I wouldn't write 'asefetida' and 'Hunnyfunkle' for a nickel." H. E.

Time to Start.

"Mother, dear, I want $5. Will you ask father for it?"

"No, you must ask yourself. You'll be married yourself some day, so you might as well start practising now." H. J.

FROM PARIS

MLLE. ZITA LOCKFORD.
[Apeda Photo.]

This flaming and exotic young person is among those present in "The Passing Show," at the Apollo, where she indulges with her brother in eager acrobatic dances.

MAN

HE HAD NO FOREHEAD.

DOWN in a bone pit, buried under tons of fossil skeletons, the Rhodesian man was found. The shaft was once the sink hole of a cave, where wild beasts wandering over the veldt would fall in. Perhaps men fell in, too, for the remains of two skeletons were uncovered. The pit is now being mined for the metal ores that have been fossilized in the bones. Each shovelful of remains is looked over, however, for more human relics.

The Rhodesian man is one of the strangest creatures who ever passed under the shape of man. Anthropologists were amazed to find in him, not the familiar Homo traits, nor yet the Neanderthal build, but the structures of Pithecanthropus Erectus, the ape man.

Rhodesian man stood erect, just as modern men do. He carried his head easily on a fairly slender neck. But he had no forehead. His skull went back from his eyebrows to the top of his head.

This person had as an additional mark the largest mouth ever seen on a fossil man. The jaw of the Heidelberg man, previously considered the record for size and strength, was far too small to fit this skull.

What did the Rhodesian man look like in the flesh? Tall, even lank, he was, with probably frizzly hair and a black skin. His eyes peered about dully, and his mouth drooped and gobbled. He went naked, ate grubs and roots, and in all ways behaved little better than a beast.

The Rhodesian man was not a Negro. He was not even ancestral to the Negro. His face, while superficially negroid, is as different from the typical Negro countenance as it resembles it.

Neither does he resemble a Papuan, or a Negrito, the other two great branches of the black race. In truth, scientists believe that he was not in the line of human ancestry at all, but belonged to a group of races that has passed away.

The reason why the whole pithecanthropus tribe is no more is not far to seek. They were bestial without having the redeeming virtues of being aggressive and courageous. They could not think. Eventually they were displaced in Africa by the true Negroes who even in their lowest strata were immeasurably their superiors.

The Rhodesian man.
[Restoration drawn over a tracing of the outlines of the skull.]

Do you know that just 40 minutes from the loop there is one subdivision which is the most ideal subdivision ever offered for sale; the most beautiful spot on the South Side, surrounding beautiful new park with lagoons, shrubbery and landscaped with shrubbery and trees; 2 blocks from transportation; close to golf club and boulevard drive running to golf club and Masonic temple; a most beautiful property. All highly restricted. This property will be sold, on account of death of the owner, for half of the price of what it is actually worth; 50 ft. lots all with shrubbery and trees, for about $400 or $500 on easy payment plan; also we have to build and finance it. This is a very large tract and therefore, we will start on the biggest advertising campaign ever employed by any subdivision; every salesmen will be accepted by us unless they have satisfactory references. BODY BY RUBAY.

$2,750

If you admire extremely smart appearance combined with good taste in a quality motor car this quiet running Packard twin six 4 passenger sport with velvety smoothness and liquid power will cause you to exult with joy at the first sight of it.

The exclusive style of body was designed and built by Rubay, whose reputation for distinctive custom built sport bodies is international because of their rare beauty, durability and artistic appeal. The complete car cost over $6,000.

The body and fenders are finished in Saxon blue. The perfectly hand tailored top and top boot seat covers (which are new) are made of finest imported English gray Burbank cloth. The massive Vesta Rolls-Royce type head lamps, the radiator shell and windshield are in silver. "Le tout ensemble est tres chic."

We cannot speak too enthusiastically about the mechanical condition of this motor car; it is 100 per cent perfect. New cord tires, 2 extra, and the equipment you would expect to find on a fine car.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

A GOOD TIME TO START IN A BUSINESS OF YOUR OWN

A great merchant recently said:

"I started selling in the worst business years ever known in this country and I made money, even then.

"I selected a business that handled necessities rather than luxuries—

"Necessities that could be sold cheaply; because that sort of merchandise sells in fair weather or foul. Hard times don't hurt it much."

While other businesses were losing ground in 1921 Variety Stores made money—many of them showing gains over the previous year.

They can sell more for a nickel or a dime than can other stores, because of their economy of operation and quick turnover.

In such a business, however, the matter of location is important.

We know of many excellent locations in different parts of the country where Variety Stores can be started on a reasonably small capital and operated successfully from the very start.

Being originators of the Variety business, we have helped thousands of men and women to a successful start in selling variety goods at retail.

And in helping others we have gained a vast fund of information which we are glad to pass on to those who wish to enter this great and fertile field.

If you have $2,500 to $6,000 and the ambition to establish a successful business of your own, we shall be glad to outline our complete plan whereby we help you attain this ambition.

Or if you prefer taking over an established business we know of one Variety Store on the Northwest Side in Chicago, which can be bought for about $4,000; another in Evansville, Wis., for $3,500 and another in the same state for $3,000.

A visit to our nearest house or an inquiry by letter, telling about yourself, will be treated in strict confidence and will place you under no obligation whatever.

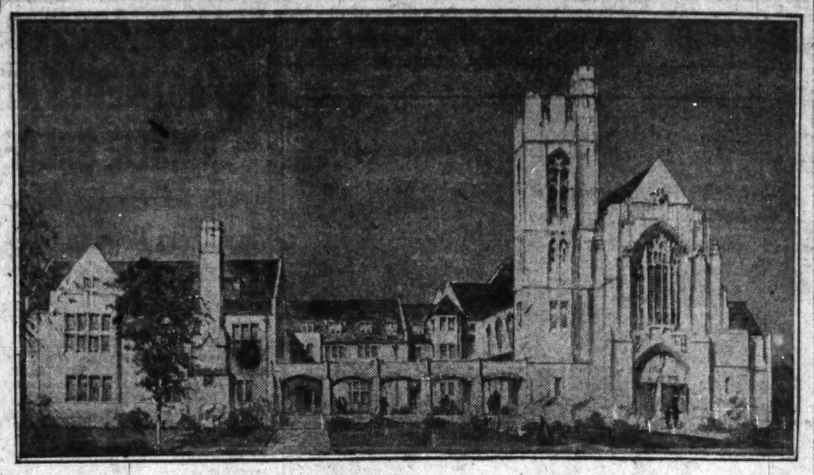
REAL ESTATE NEWS

Hunching Skywards

The Tower building on Michigan boul Mich and Madison street is the latest building, at the northwest corner of Boul Mich and Madison streets. Workers are now adding four stories to the twelve story building, which, as is shown above, will make the tower look considerably higher, but add much valuable space to this famous structure, for many of Chicago's tallest Chicago temple 00 feet soon will be topped 156 feet by the magnificent Chicago Methodism. According to Aldis D. Browne, Wrigley, and its office building. It is now equaled, of course, by been leased or spoken for. The Charles F. W. Nichols company, genadvertising, will have half of the sixteenth floor, Holabird & Roche have designed what is said will be about the most elaborate shop in the city for both stories will be ready Jan. 1.

Bryn Mawr Community Church



It is expected work will start shortly on the new home of the Bryn Mawr Community church, designed by Lowe & Bollenbacher, as shown above. The original of this picture is now at the Art institute at the annual architectural exhibition. The church's present edifice at the southwest corner of Jeffery avenue and East 70th street will be moved back on the lot and the new $200,000 building, a Gothic structure of Bedford stone, built in front of it. The lot is 200x134.

The organization is only a few years old and has completely outgrown its old quarters. The new edifice will care for church, school, and community activities. There'll be a boys' "hangout" equipped for basketball and other games; a girls' room, lockers and showers for both men and women, class and committee rooms, a large dining room, and well equipped kitchen. Present plans call for the erection of the north and west wings, leaving the south, the part on the reader's left, for future expansion.

New Home of Cicero's Oldest Bank

Above is the new $100,000 home of Cicero's oldest banking institution, the Cicero State bank, to be erected at the northwest corner of Cicero avenue and 25th street, directly across from the Western Electric company's big Hawthorne plant. The architects are C. W. Lampe & Co. The building will be 60x85, of fireproof construction, with exterior finish in face brick, terra cotta, and ornamental bronze. Work will start the first of June. The present bank site is a block from the new building, at Cicero and 25th place.

OAK PARK PLANS FIRST INTERCITY REALTORS' MEET

Eats, Motor Trip and Ball Game Scheduled.

Oak Park's real estate board has plans under way for an annual intercity realtors' conference. The first meeting will be held at Oak Park on Monday, June 4, and the following real estate boards have been invited: Aurora, Du Page county, Elgin, Evanston, Harvey, Joliet, Maywood, North Shore, and Waukegan.

WARREN T. EASTER.

Harry Goldstine, president; John R. Magill, last year's president, and J. Soule Warterfield, business manager of the Chicago Real Estate board, have been invited; also William Herron, national field secretary; State Field Secretary Ross, and Herbert Nelson, national executive secretary.

Arrangements are in charge of Warren T. Easter, of the Whitmore & Berry company, of Oak Park. His plans call for a complimentary dinner to the visiting realtors at the Oak Park Arms hotel. Afterwards a motor trip around Oak Park and River Forest will be made.

The festivities will wind up with a "championship ball game" (the quotes being supplied by Tom Roberts, of G. Whittier Gale & Company's office) between the uniformed team of the Oak Park Real Estate board and that of W. K. Young and Brother, Chicago.

PREDICTS "U" COURSE NEED FOR REALTY LICENSE

Joseph K. Brittain, secretary of the Real Estate Brokers' License commission of the department of registration and education of the state of Illinois, at a lecture given before the realty class of the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce, predicted that within a few years a two years' course in real estate at a university will be required to qualify for a broker's license.

"The young man who expects to go into the real estate brokerage business as his life work would welcome such a course," said Mr. Brittain, "which would be a great saving of time as compared with the old way of gaining experience by hard knocks. It would also do away with the embarrassment of attempting responsibilities the realty novice was not qualified to assume."

Mr. Brittain stated that licenses had been granted to date to more than 14,000 real estate brokers and salesmen in Illinois. Approximately 10,000 of these are in Cook county.

"The department of registration and education at Springfield is continually receiving applications for real estate brokers' licenses," said Mr. Brittain. "I attribute it to the fact that little capital is required to open a real estate office and that the realty market for the last few years has been very active. Many of these applicants are incompetent so far as knowledge and experience are concerned."

Mr. Brittain urged honesty and accuracy in all dealings if the realty students intend to render the public the service expected of men in the real estate profession.

SKYSCRAPER TO BE NEW HOME OF HILLMAN'S STORE

Ed Hillman, president of the State street department store, confirmed the statement made in New York by his son, Edward Hillman, that he intends to erect a skyscraping home for his department store.

Five plans drawn by Mr. Hillman's architect, whose name has not yet been made public, call for a seventeen story building, 264 feet high, or as high as lawfully possible.

With the new building will have only four feet frontage on State street will be only 143 feet deep, as compared with the present store front of 183 feet on State, the new building will have considerable more floor than now.

The store will be directly across the street from the Boston store. Mr. Hillman has a lease on the old section but his proposed new store and the entire building, until 1927.

"Building conditions improve," Mr. Hillman said, "we'll probably go ahead next year with the intention of giving it ready for business early in 1925. Of course, we'll have a modern store on State street, and many innovations for the comfort both the public and employes.

The will be around $2,000,000. Hillman was founded in 1899. The late Wm. W. Partridge was at one time part owner with Mr. Hillman, but years ago sold out to Mr. Hillman. Edward Hillman Jr. is vice president of Hillman's.

GIGANTIC MOVIE TO TAKE PLACE OF GREEN MILL

Balaban & Katz Plan Big Uptown Theater.

BY AL CHASE.

Uptown Chicago at last is to have a gigantic Balaban & Katz moving picture playhouse on the present site of the Green Mills garden, probably as large as the Chicago theater and possibly larger. The ground area at Lawrence and Broadway is larger than the site of the big Chicago theater at State and Lake, but whether the new playhouse will have more seats has not been determined. Anyway, tentative plans by Rapp & Rapp call for as magnificent a theater as either the Chicago or Tivoli, both of which they designed, and, of course, the largest place of amusement outside the loop.

It will mean the elimination, probably some time in 1925, of the present Green Mill garden, though it is expected Tom Chamales in the meantime will secure another site. It is not thought construction can begin for at least a year on the new theater, and it will take at least eighteen months to build it.

Bigger Lobby than the Chicago.

The corner now occupied by the Green Mill café, fronting 128 on Broadway and 110 on Lawrence, will not be affected by the proposed theater. Balaban & Katz bought the 80 feet of frontage adjoining on the north, giving them a Broadway entrance of that width, with a lobby 110 feet deep, which is 25 feet deeper than the Chicago lobby and the same width.

Back of this they bought the property now occupied by the Green Mill garden, fronting 181 feet on Lawrence, with a depth of 188 feet. This gives an area for an auditorium considerably larger than that of the Chicago, which is only 150x170.

They bought the entire theater site from Tom Chamales and Otto L. Annoreno for a reported $400,000. The final signatures will be affixed within a few days.

Now for a Good Name!

According to Barney Balaban, no name has yet been selected, and, although he has no intention of starting a contest, he says he'll be glad to get suggestions. We might add it wouldn't be a bad idea to get a name that ordinary folk can pronounce. Most of the Wilson avenue literati refer to the Riviera as the "Rivsera," accent on the "e's." And many Woodlawn film fans call the Tivoli the "Tivoole," with the accent hard on the "o."

But, no matter what it's called, the uptowners can be sure if it's a Balaban & Katz house it'll be architecturally as fine as money can build, well managed, well ventilated, and well cooled in hot weather, and the scene of unusually well put on programs. It should be a tremendous asset to the Wilson avenue district—in fact, the entire north side and north shore.

May Not Affect Riviera.

This will be the sixth B. & K. theater. They opened their Central Park in 1916, their Riviera in 1917, the Tivoli and the Chicago both in 1921, acquired the Roosevelt in 1922, and when the new uptown playhouse is completed announce they will give Chicago two more magnificent theaters. Tentative plans call for the continuance of the Riviera as a picture house even after the new theater is built.

L. L. Sachs & Co. were the only brokers in the acquirement of the uptown site. Charles Weinfeld of Schuyler, Ettelson & Weinfeld was attorney for the sellers and Hugo Sonnenschein of Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson represented the buyers.

TEXAS OIL LEASES CORNER.

The Texas Oil company has leased from A. August of the August House Wrecking company, the southwest corner of Southport and Clybourn, for a term of years for filling station purposes. Anton Mundl, formerly with C. & R. Rauschert, negotiated the deal.

Waiting for Old Man Hi Cost to Say the Word

Here is the $1,000,000 apartment project to be erected at the southwest corner of Ainslie and the lake shore, from plans by B. Leo Steif & Co., by the Ainlake Building corporation, of which Bernard Neuberger is president and A. Branower is secretary and treasurer, as soon as building conditions improve. It has a site fronting 237 feet on Ainslie, 113 feet on the lake, 110 on the west, and 263 on the south. More is told in a nearby column.

PLAN $1,000,000 APARTMENTS AT AINSLIE SHORE

Architects Hope to Start Work July 1.

Old Man Hi Cost is blocking another big apartment project. Plans are all completed by B. Leo Steif & Co. for a seven story building involving, with the cost of the land, approximately $1,000,000, which will go ahead as soon as the cost of labor and materials slides down to a more reasonable basis. The site is at the foot of Ainslie street, overlooking the lake, directly south of and across the street from the southern end of the Spoor Aquitania apartment project.

And Mr. Steif is optimistic. He believes he'll be able to start work by July 1, and in that event hopes for completion by the first of the year.

"Prices are slipping already," said Mr. Steif. "We've passed the peak and things are looking better, and newspaper publicity has done a lot to help things along."

"Ainslie at the Lake" is the name of the new apartments. There'll be ninety-nine unfurnished suites of two, three, and four rooms, and practically every room in the building will be outside.

The new building won't be of "the "shirt front type." It'll be of the same material, cream colored brick, and with the same decorations on all sides. The future west line of Lincoln park, as it will be when extended that far north in a year or more, will be just twenty-five feet east of the new building. In other words, it'll be set back twenty-five feet from the park boundary. It will have a ten foot setback on Ainslie.

New South Side Jewish Temple

Contracts have been let for the $250,000 temple for the B'nai Bezalel congregation at 6028 Champlain avenue, from plans by Architect David Saul Klafter. The 90x150 site was bought by the congregation and its affiliated organizations, the Young People's Jewish Council of Woodlawn and the Women's Jewish Council of Woodlawn. The building is to be 75x150, and in addition to an 1,800 seat auditorium there'll be an assembly hall for social and community work, classrooms, etc. It will be of brick with terra cotta trim, and will be fireproof.

The building committee is as follows: Hyman Pimstein, president; Mrs. S. H. Herron, vice chairman; Mrs. S. B. Bransky, chairman; Miss Ruth Eisenberg, secretary; Leo Behrstock, Joseph Leibowitz, Morris I. Roman, A. Katz, J. Siegel, E. K. Brown, Nathan Braun, Samuel M. Levin, Mrs. F. E. Sonnenfeld, Mrs. Charles Ruwel, Alfred M. Pos, and Mrs. Markbreit.

PIERRE BLOUKE MADE NEW PRESIDENT OF ARCHITECTURAL CLUB

Pierre Blouke has been elected president of the Chicago Architectural club. Mr. Blouke is with Bennett & Parsons. He was a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, class of '17, and later studied in Rome. He won the $1,000 traveling scholarship of the Chicago Architectural club in 1919.

George Nedved of N. Max Dunning's office was elected treasurer of the club. Paul MacGrath also of N. Max Dunning's office is the new vice president. L. C. Allen of Clark & Walcott is treasurer.

The retiring president is Clarence Farrier, who recently opened offices on upper Michigan avenue. Both Mr. Farrier and Mr. Blouke were on the city zoning staff. Mr. Blouke has measured drawing of San Marco in Rome at the annual exhibition of architecture now being shown at the Art institute.

DEVER, UPHAM WILL SPEAK AT REALTY DINNER

Mayor Dever, Fred W. Upham, Thomas E. Wilson, Harrison B. Riley, John J. Stream, Harry Goldstine, and others are to be speakers at the fortieth birthday banquet of the Chicago Real Estate board, to be held on the trading floor of the Chicago Board of Trade next Thursday evening. The entire entertainment will conclude with a travesty depicting the realty board for forty years hence.

Dinner will be served promptly at 6:30 amid decorations and surroundings which are expected to bring vividly to mind the days of '83. Following the dinner will come an entertainment under the direction of Hyde W. Perce showing the transition from the early days to the present.

Everything from grand opera to jazz will be exemplified including Haverly's minstrels, Anna Eva Fay, Kohn & Middleton's dime museum and the original Oriental quartet. George R. Quin is chairman of the committee in charge of the entire affair. Henry G. Slavik and Mr. Perce are on the committee.

DEPARTMENT STORE FOR ROSELAND.

Work has started on a $100,000 two story department store building at the southwest corner of Michigan and 118th for J. Kaminsky, from plans by Minchin, Spitz & Co. It will be 82x125.

CHICAGO ARCHITECTS PLAN $1,000,000 WAR MEMORIAL FOR U. OF I.

Lowe & Bollenbacher, Chicago architects, associated with a New York architect in the Northwestern university's new campus development, have been commissioned by the trustees of the University of Indiana, to design a $1,000,000 Union building, to be a war memorial. Only the first section, costing $500,000, will be built now. Lowe & Bollenbacher also will design a $250,000 women's dormitory for the Hoosier university.

Grain Leaders Confer on Futures Trading Act

A conference of representatives of leading grain exchanges with the grain futures administration's representatives was held here yesterday. The administration of the grain futures act was discussed, representatives of grain exchanges presenting their views on the tentative regulations submitted by the government. These have been taken under advisement. Chester Morrill, Dr. J. W. M. Duvel, W. F. Logan, and J. R. Mathewson represented the government's "future trading act." The exchanges were represented by John R. Mauff, executive to the president of the Chicago Board of Trade; former President L. F. Gates of Chicago, C. W. Lonsdale of Kansas City, and Mr. Van Dusen of Minneapolis.

First Englewood State Bank Buys for Annex

The First Englewood State bank has bought sixty feet frontage in 63d, next to that institution's present property at Yale and 63d, from James H. Moore, and will use it for further expansion. A. H. Whitley & Co. represented both parties.

Jewish Congregation Buys South Shore Temple Site

The Congregational Agudath Achin Anshei Cheltenham has bought from the Joseph Sproules estate 55x159 at 7845 Muskegon avenue, for $11,000 and will use the frame residence for purposes of worship for a year or so, when a synagogue will be erected. Louis Berg is president of the congregation.

ORLANDO NOBLE BUYS 70 ACRES ON NORTH SHORE

Orlando Noble of Noble & Thumm, plumbing contractors, bought seventy acres adjoining the western limits of Highwood from Ferdinand Hotz of Glencoe for $80,000. This is east of Old Elm Golf club. The north thirty-five acres are wooded with some of the oldest trees on the north shore. Prussing & Co. were brokers.

Mr. Noble bought through the same firm seventy acres on the west bank of north shore drainage channel, bounded by Pratt, North Central Park and Arthur avenues, for $129,000. The sellers, Isabel A. Bross and Margaret A. Clement, were represented by H. C. Edmonds and Perkins B. Bass. It is understood that both purchases were made for investment.

North Shore Golf Clubs Complete Site Purchases

McGuire & Orr report closing two sales of tracts to golf clubs. The North Shore Golf club bought 170 acres at Waukegan and Glen View roads, just west of the Glen View Country club, from the Edgewater Golf club, which originally bought it for its own use and then decided to remain where it is. The North Shore will lay out a course and erect a $200,000 clubhouse. It has sold its present forty acre tract to a syndicate of Kenilworth residents for residential purposes.

The Sunset Ridge Country club has completed the purchase of 120 acres two and one half miles west of the Winnetka station, and work is now under way developing the property.

Will Broadcast Address on Torrens Registration

Robert E. L. Brooks, former president of the Cook County Real Estate board, now secretary of the Torrens Land Title Registration league, will broadcast an address from W. B. U. municipal station on the city hall on Wednesday, from 7:30 to 8 p. m., on "The Torrens Land Title Registration System."

On next Thursday evening at 7:45 a movie exhibition of some of the scenes to be met with on the coming western tour will be given in the Cook County Real Estate board rooms in the Conway building.

Beg Your Pardon

John M. Thomson was the broker representing Winfield H. Schendorf in the sale of the Greenwood block, fronting 270 feet on the north side of 43rd, between Berkeley and Greenwood, to Henry Schoenstadt for $220,000, subject to $139,000. It was incorrectly stated in this department on Friday that Schendorf & Boehnicke were the brokers.

And owners who have had long experience with the car, know how trouble-free those miles are, and how little it costs to enjoy them.

They know, too, how light and convenient the Touring Car is and how easily cleaned.

Dodge Brothers power plant, the all-steel body, the permanent baked-on enamel finish, the genuine leather upholstery—all combine to explain why more than 850,000 owners almost invariably speak of the car in terms of highest praise.

EVERY DAY IT GETS MORE CROWDED in New York's harbor. Maybe the rum fleet is adding to the congestion. At any rate, the fleet of small craft plying between New York and New Jersey grows daily, and the big ships have a worried time of it putting out to sea. This airplane photo shows two ocean travelers pulling out for Europe, the S. S. Veendam at the left, and La Savoie at the right.

ACROSS AMERICA

THE TAKE-OFF at Long Island, N. Y. Lieut. Oakley G. Kelly waving good-by as the trans-continental army plane T-2 hopped off at Curtis field on its record-breaking flight across the continent. Lieut. Kelly and Lieut. John A. MacReady landed in San Diego, Cal., just 26 hours 50 minutes and 48 2-5 seconds after their start. The distance covered was approximately 2,635 miles.

LOADING UP WITH GASOLINE for the great test. The T-2, a monoplane of the Fokker type, started from Long Island with 737 gallons of gasoline. There wasn't much of that left when the intrepid flyers coasted down to land again 'way out in California. The pilots carried cooked rations for two days and two gallons of coffee to keep their personal engines tuned up.

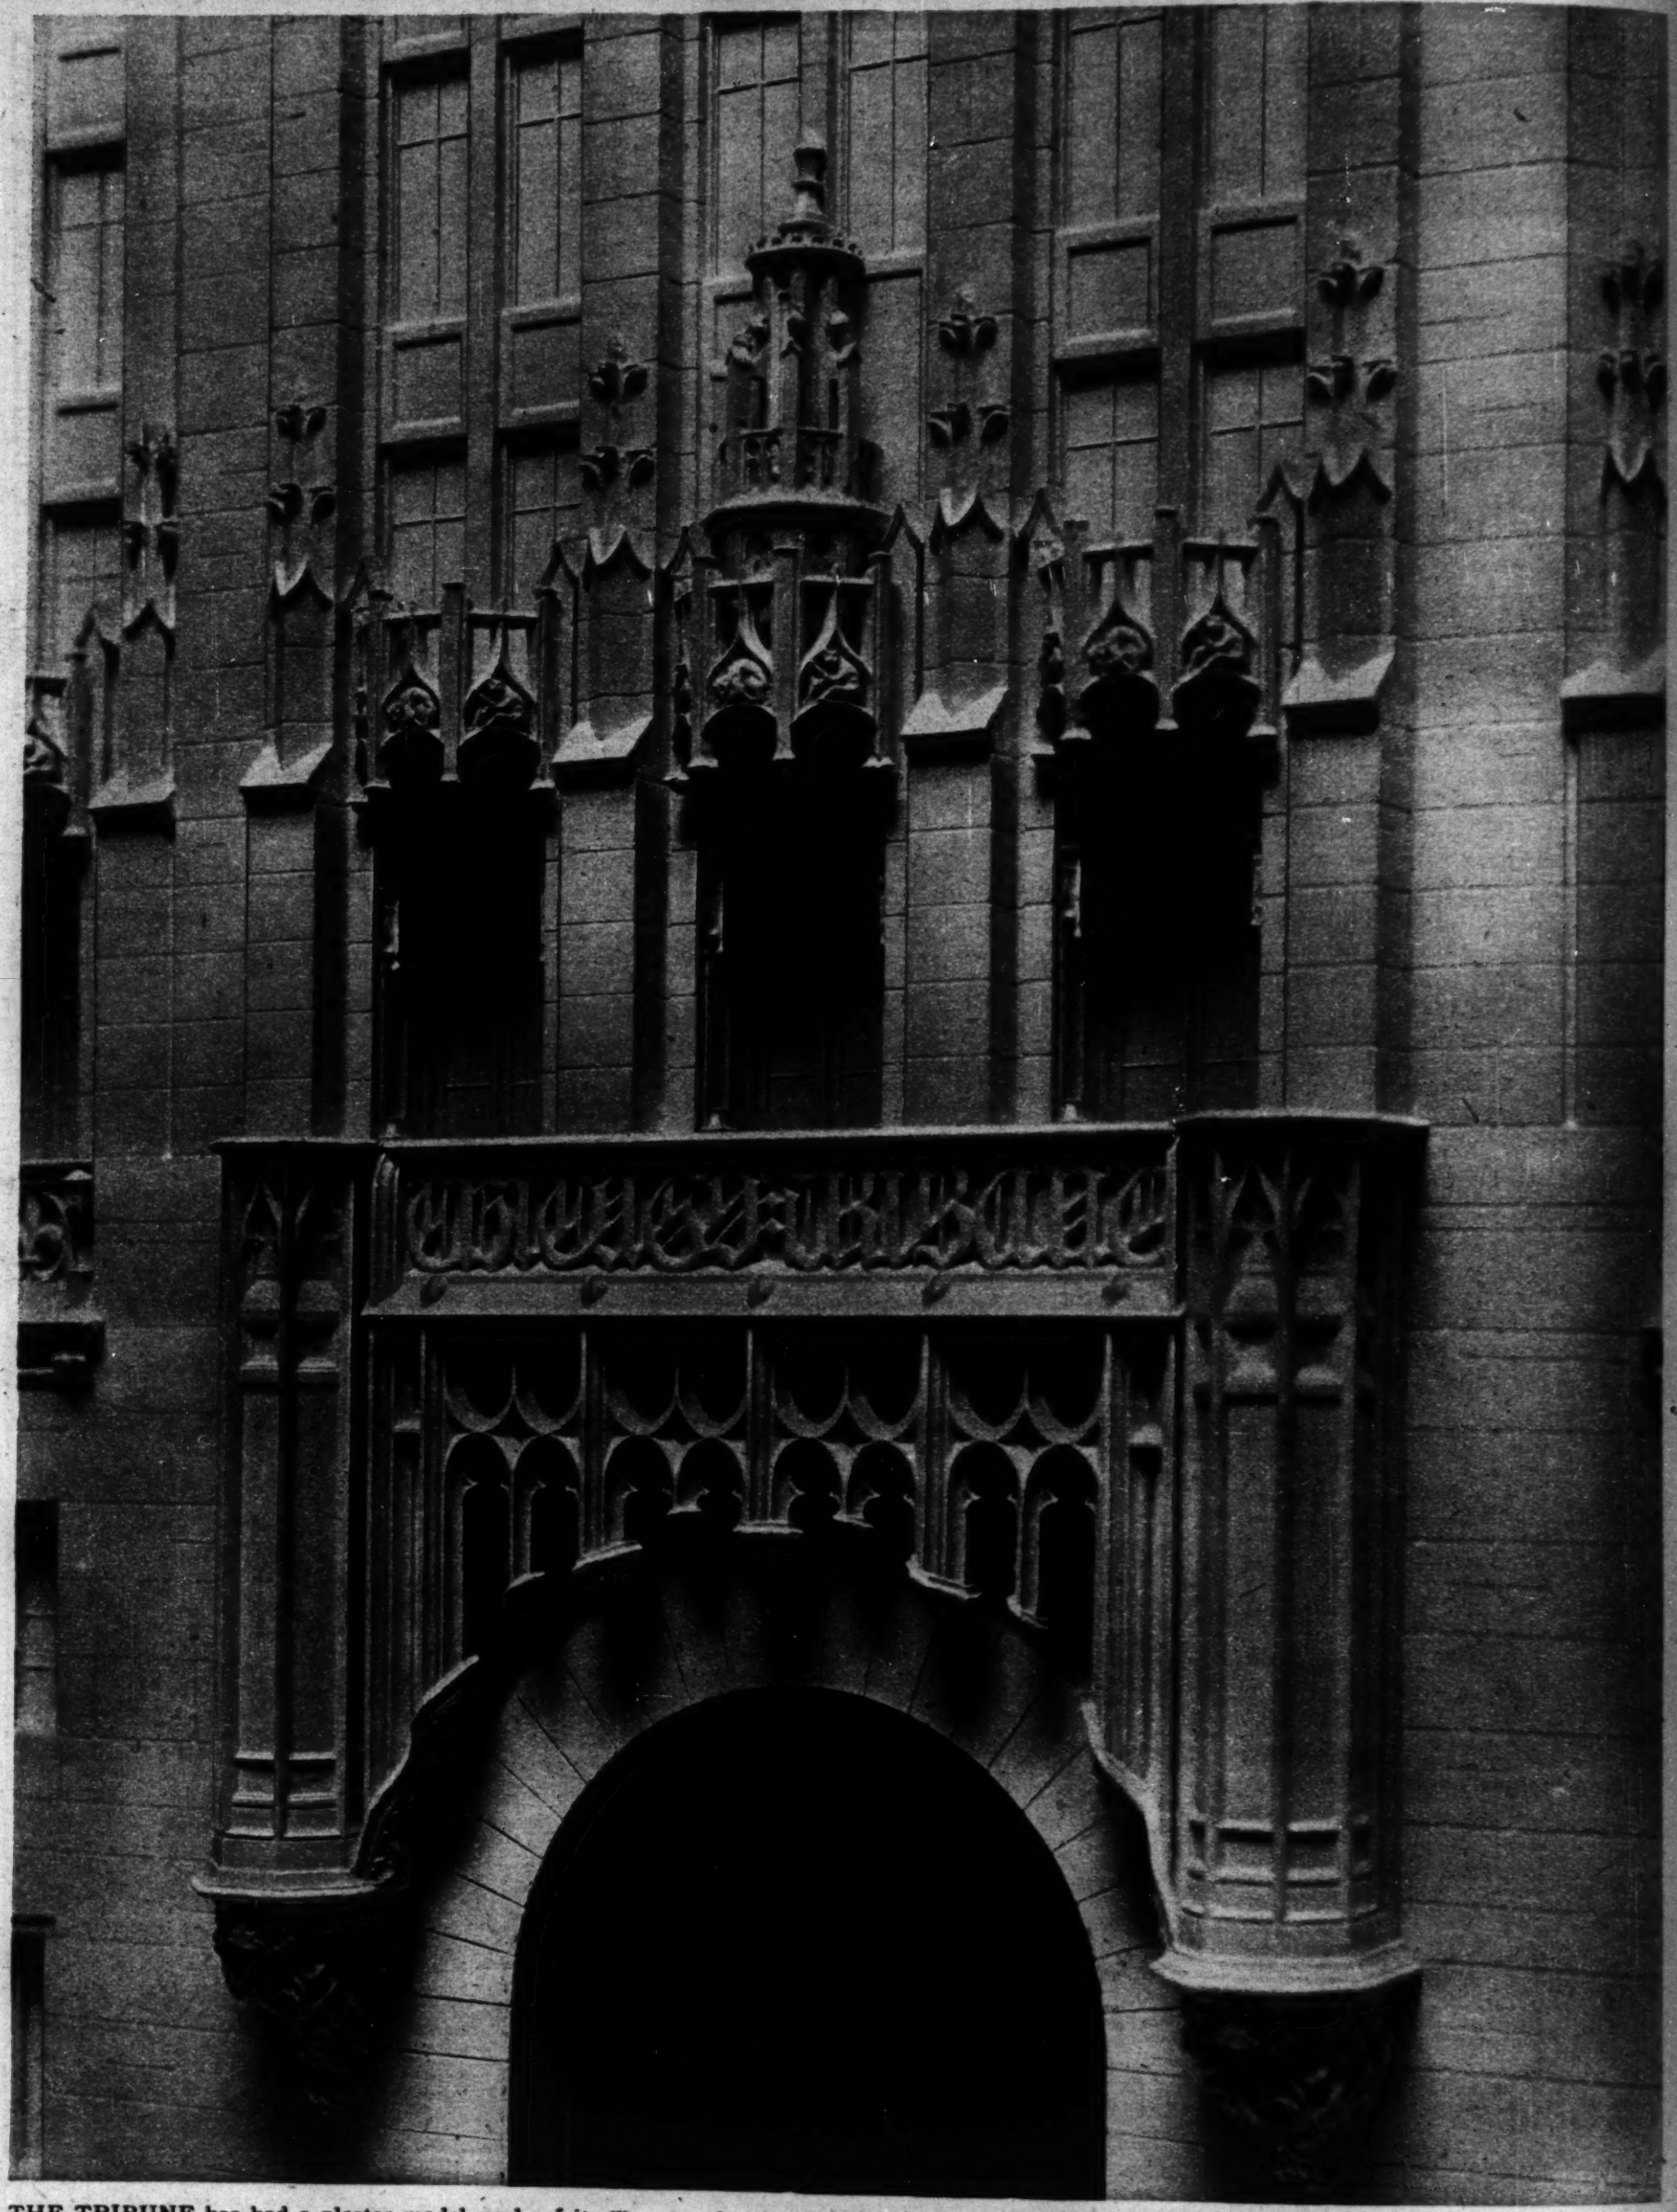
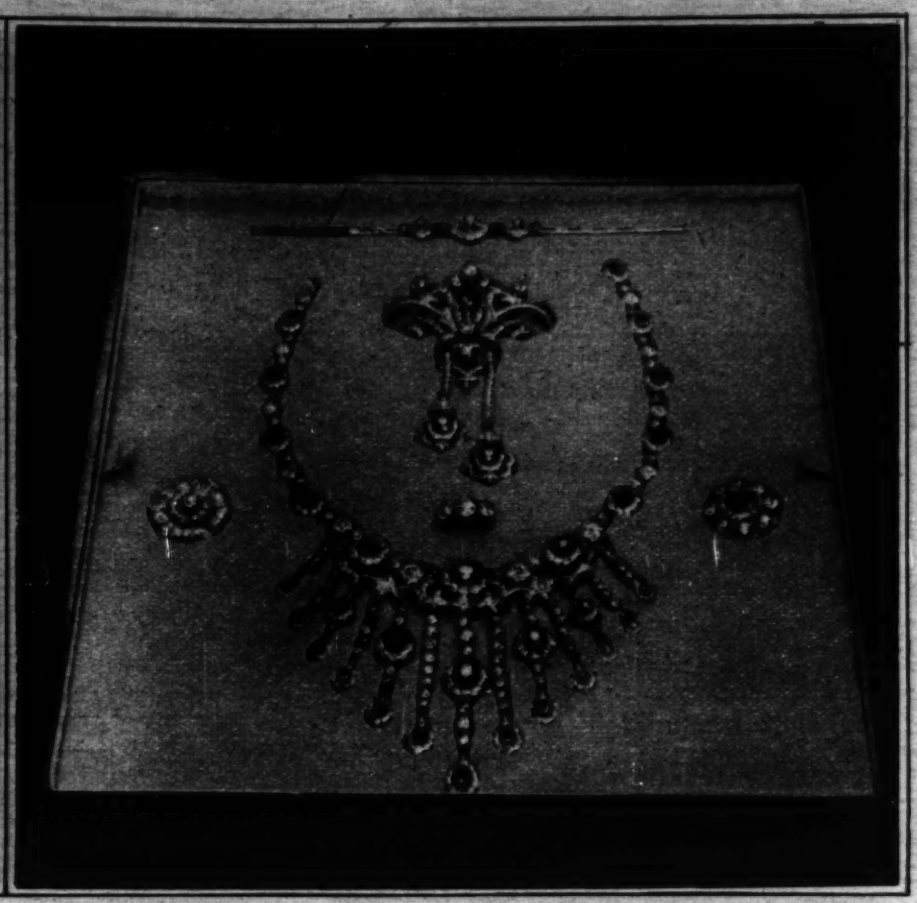
A DETAIL OF THE TRIBUNE TOWER'S MAIN FACADE



THE TRIBUNE has had a plaster model made of its Tower-to-be, and this photo gives a realistic view of part of the main facade. Note how the serene magnificence of the design as a whole is carried into the treatment of detail—the filigree stonework above the entrance, the finials gracefully emerging with the buttresses, the grotesqueries contributing a whimsical alleviation. Some one with a sense of humor has suggested that these grotesques be made to resemble Tribune people! Ground will be broken on the site of The Tribune Tower probably about June 1st.

ROYAL WEDDING GIFTS

KING GEORGE WAS GENEROUS to his son's bride. A tiara, a necklace, a brooch, earrings, and a hair ornament were his gifts to Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon when she married the Duke of York. Presents from minor personages also appear in this picture.



FROM ONE QUEEN TO A POSSIBLE QUEEN. This diamond set was the bride's present from Queen Mary. If the Duke and Duchess of York outlive the Prince of Wales, the new duchess may be Queen of England.

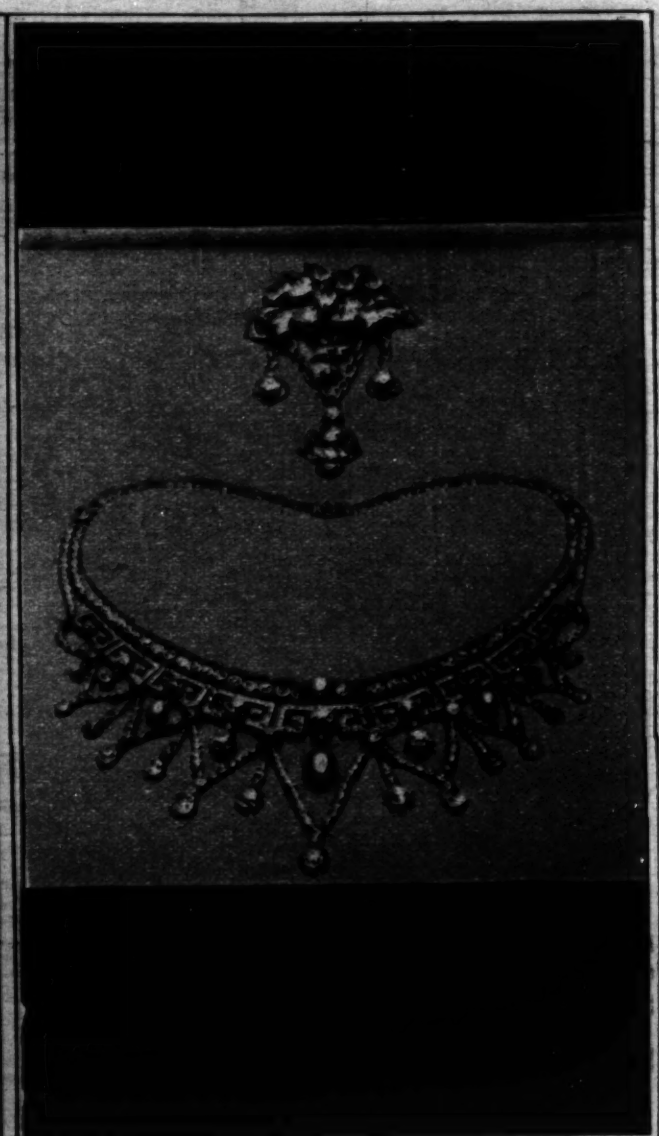
PAPA PRESENTED THE BRIDE with this tiara, a marvel of the jeweler's art. The contribution of the Earl of Strathmore shared interest with the gifts from the royal family when the presents were exhibited in Buckingham palace.



A PEARL AND DIAMOND SAUTOIR mounted on platinum was the Duke's gift to his bride. Several hundred pearls and half a dozen diamonds compose the collar, with a larger diamond and a marvelous pearl drop as the finishing touch.

Restoring health to thousands—

This simple fresh food!

The buoyant health and vigor which are every man's birthright—

The sparkle and animation which every woman craves—

Today we realize that they are impossible without one thing: a body kept free from poisons! You must get rid regularly of the poisonous waste that accumulates in the intestines.

Drugs and cathartics are worse than useless, for they have to be taken in larger and larger doses, and at last the weakened intestinal muscles refuse to respond at all. That is why so many physicians and hospitals today are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast.

It is not a medicine, but a fresh corrective food. Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants which help to increase the bulk of our concentrated modern diet, and gently encourage the intestinal muscles to act for themselves.

Regular daily eating of Fleischmann's Yeast is helping thousands of men and women to regain the splendid vigor of normal health. Like any other natural food, it must be eaten regularly to achieve results.

Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast — yeast in its natural fresh form. Recent experiments have shown that yeast corrects constipation only when its cells are alive and active—and that it loses its laxative effect when these cells are "killed" and dried. Eat two or three cakes a day—plain, or dissolved in water, milk or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal or the last thing at night. If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep several days in a cool, dry place. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast! All grocers have it.

Back to normal health!

A New York woman was badly run down. "In a serious state of lowered vitality I became afflicted with a series of boils," she writes, "and constipation soon became a contributing factor to my continued ill health. My doctor prescribed Fleischmann's Yeast. In a short time the boils cleared up, and intestinal action was restored to normal."

THIS SPRING ~ IN QUEBEC

THIS spring, Chateau Frontenac becomes Greater Chateau Frontenac. In that event, is dramatized the romance of Quebec. . . . Down the St. Lawrence, in 1608, sailed Champlain. Found the site of Quebec. Built a Normandy town by the river. Put a fortress on the cliff. . . . . Round it raged a 200-year battle for American Empire. Then, peace. . . . America became a continent of 20th Century newness. But, on the St. Lawrence, remained the Quebec of 17th Century quaintness.

This spring, on the cliff-top, where stood the original Chateau Frontenac, looms now Greater Chateau Frontenac. It dominates famous Dufferin Terrace; lords it over the Normandy town; rises 600 feet above the St. Lawrence. . . . . Greater Chateau Frontenac is a magnificent example of the medieval castle —with far-spreading turrets, majestic tower, stone courtyards, and immense halls. It is a new experience in American hotels—with its clublike lounges, continental restaurants, period-furnished rooms, and Canadian-Pacific service.

Its opening this spring is the link between America's romantic past and its luxurious present. Come for it. By railway or motor. . . . For information and reservations, apply to the Canadian Pacific, 140 South Clark St., Chicago. Or, write Chateau Frontenac, Quebec, Canada.

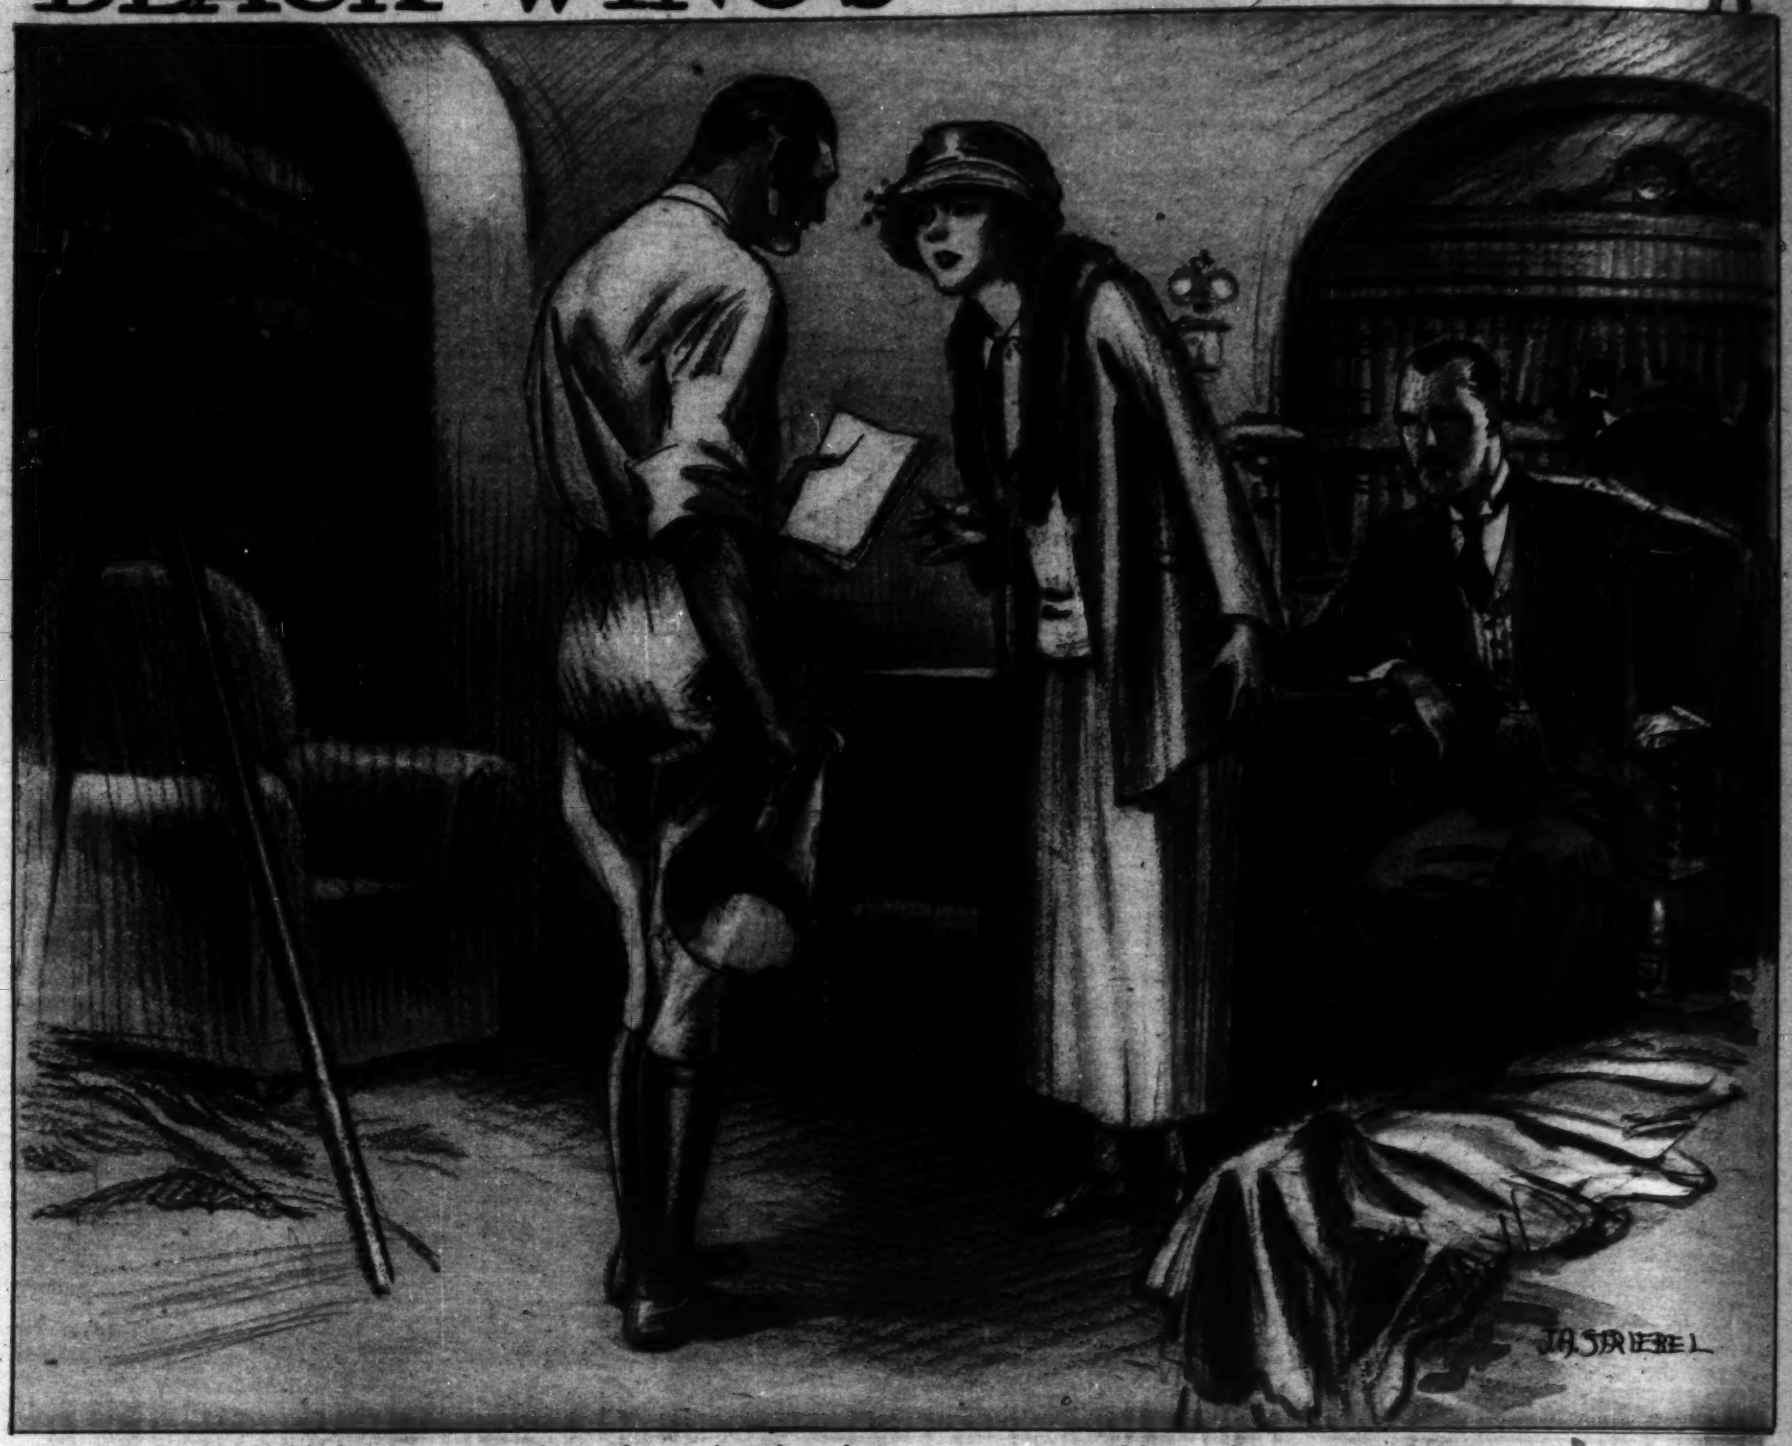
BLACK WINGS By James Oppenheim



"Do you think a woman who is betraying her dearest friend would act the way you want me to act?"

All Her Life Had Been a Terrible Fight; Women Were Not Safe with the Famous Movie Director; They Met, and He Was the Great Test for Nan.

A DARK fate shadowed Nan Tinney. But she came out of it. Now she is a well known scenario writer.

That she was made for disaster showed when she was only four. A flood rose in the night and swept away the little frame house. Her father had gone down to Cutter's wharf to see if he could get a boat, and her mother had taken her and her elder sister into the attic. They managed then to get on the sloping roof through a scuttle by the aid of trunks and a chair. As they clung to their mother, who had her hands fastened to the top of a dormer window, they felt the house lurch under them, and it was borne away in the night. It was a starless night, with a great wind, and the waters roared around them.

They were silent. They were cold. Hours passed. Then, as the day broke, the house was dashed to pieces against some rocks. At that moment the mother clutched Nan in her arms. This saved her. For the mother, scrambling in the water, got ashore. Nan fell asleep at her mother's breast, for the woman lay unconscious for an hour and then was too weak to move. Searchers that afternoon found them and carried them to a farmhouse. But her sister was never found, and neither was her father.

Mrs. Tinney was left destitute, but she had a brother in Chicago who had a little. So she took Nan and went to live with her brother. She became a seamstress, and as soon as she could she sent Nan to public school. The street was on the south side, near the stockyards, and all of Nan's childhood had the reek of slaughter in it, the stench of fertilizer, the odor of smoke.

The street they lived on was dusty; the flimsy houses were shoddy; the children were rough. Nan did not like the children. She was a miserable child. She had no use for children's games, or for dolls, or parties, or picnics. What she wanted she didn't know. But it had to be mysterious, strange, wonderful. It had to be something different from the life she knew. So she withdrew from the other children, grew sullen, and moped alone. Her misery was so great at times that she couldn't talk when people addressed her. They thought her stupid and sullen. But her mother knew that she wasn't stupid. There were times when Nan flared up at her, when she stamped her foot and went into a paroxysm of anger; and then a flood of words came to her, and she spoke her scorn of her mother's authority.

"I hate you," she would say. "You're a horrid mother. I wish you had been drowned. When I grow up I won't live with you. I hate you."

But when she was fifteen life became interesting to her. She fell in with a girl around the corner. This girl, like herself, did not care for dolls or games, but she seemed to enjoy life. There was an air about her home, a kind of mystery, that made Nan feel that these people were different from others. Her father was a tall, dark man who dressed like a workman and looked at every one suspiciously. Her little mother was always worried and excited. Jeanette and Nan became great friends and told each other their secrets. Jeanette told Nan that her father was a burglar and that he had taught her to be a pickpocket, and that if Nan wanted she would teach Nan.

SO Nan and Jeanette went down to the Loop and at the rush hour they boarded a street car and were wedged in among the men and women. A man next to Jeanette was hanging on a strap and holding a newspaper with the other hand. Jeanette leaned against him. Then she motioned to Nan to get off the car with her.

On the pavement she showed Nan a little roll of bills amounting to $18. Nan was astounded.

"How did you do it?"

"Put my hand in his pocket."

When Nan tried it the first time she put her hand in the wrong pocket, but no one detected her. After that, on holidays and sometimes after school, she would accompany Jeanette and they would make a haul. It ran anywhere from small change to thirty and forty dollars. Out of the haul Nan was allowed a dollar; all the rest went to Jeanette's father.

"I should think," said Nan, "your father would be rich."

"Well, he is, sometimes," Jeanette answered. "But he drinks and gambles, you see."

For nearly a year Nan found life interesting. She felt that she was different from every one around her and that she was living a guilty and terrible life. She knew it might kill her mother if the secret came out. But the danger and feeling of guilt seemed to keep her alive.

One evening, however, as Jeanette put her hand in a man's pocket the man caught her and held her. There was a commotion. The car was stopped, a policeman called, and Jeanette was led away. Nan quietly got off the car a few blocks further on. She had done nothing when the arrest was made because it had been so agreed between them.

She never saw Jeanette again, and never stole again. The arrest had frightened her. For a whole year she was only able to relieve her misery by reading and by going to the motion pictures. Finally she became infatuated with the pictures. She went every night if she could. The more melodramatic they were, the more exciting, the better she liked them. She lived the stories, especially if they related to criminals or to women who were ruined.

At seventeen Nan had a strange kind of beauty. She was not tall and she was thin and, though she was graceful, she was awkward. Her head was shapely, her hair, of a light color, was bobbed and curly, and her large eyes were more green than brown. The thin nose was uptilted, the mouth was rich and well curved. But there was no telling why she seemed beautiful. People found her strange and fascinating.

At this time she had an adventure. Walking along a side street, she almost stepped into an open manhole at the same time that a well dressed young man coming the other way approached it. She saw at a glance that he was looking across the street and would fall in. With a bound she caught him, and they sprawled on the pavement together. Then he picked her up and stood dazed, staring from her to the open hole.

"You saved my life," he said.

She laughed. They brushed themselves off. He was a handsome man of about thirty, tall and well built. They walked down the street together, and he questioned her about herself. She hesitated in her answers, for she felt that he was well dressed and had a manner and that she was shabby in her loose old clothes and was very awkward and crude. At the same time something stirred in her, the thing that later on she came so to fear. It was a deep, great darkness. It came to her as a picture. She saw a pool of still, black water in an immense cave. The water stirred and turned into two broad wings of black that arose slowly. What body those wings bore she did not know. It was a terrible vision, but this first time she saw it she was thrilled to the marrow; her nostrils dilated; she thought: "This is what I am."

From then on for several weeks she moved as though she were under a spell. Her alarmed mother could do nothing. Neither tears nor threats made any difference. She was out every night until late, and finally she ran off. When her mother next heard from her she was in New York.

THE young man, whose father was a Chicago banker, shook her off at the end of several weeks. At the same time he left some money with her. When she received the note and the money—she was living in a boarding house on West 36th street—she suddenly came out of the spell. Her mind became intensely alert and fear possessed her. She saw herself. She saw that this craving in her for the mysterious and terrible would ruin her. She felt very old and a little bitter. She was in New York, with neither friends nor money, and possessed of a nature which she could not control.

What should she do? The temptation to follow her nature was terrific. It didn't seem to matter that it meant disaster and premature old age and perhaps a horrible death. Something in her demanded all that. It would be so interesting, so exciting, so strange. What was there in ordinary work for her? Could she stand all day behind a sales counter, or tap at a typewriter, or become a librarian? Such thoughts were repugnant.

She walked up to Central park and sat down on a bench and thought. She had a good mind: it was quick and inventive: it teemed with fancies. Whenever she let go it raced on, making up stories about herself. She was the heroine. She went through all kinds of adventures. This afternoon she let go, and her mind seemed to answer her question. She saw herself as a motion picture actress.

"Yes," she thought, "that's it. If I act strange and mysterious things I won't have to live them."

The next day she looked up the address of a motion picture company on the west side, near the river. The company was lodged in a remodeled factory building. They were a rough lot, those directors and managers, and the crowd of supers waiting for jobs was large. It was fierce to sit around all day, but Nan sat. She had begun a long fight with herself, and she endured this new misery as she had endured the misery of her childhood.

The first time she went on she was merely a bit of background. But she had on a Greek costume, and the men and women fluttered all about her in their colored garments, a musician played for them on a piano, and it was strange and dazzling to come under the snake-green lights and to feel the thrill of the grinding camera. But more wonderful was an awakening in Nan. She forgot her own small part, and lived the whole drama, lived all the parts that were important. She was the hero as he scaled the wall and the heroine as she was carried down the ladder. Her imagination was fed and satisfied. She felt safer now from herself.

All during this period Nan refused to become intimate with men. She felt that they were her enemies. Yet men were fascinated and tried to make friends with her. They would see her sitting on a box in the studio, her legs folded, leaning forward, those strange green eyes, that somewhat wild head of curly hair, and something in her drew them. But she grew stiff and formal. She made her friends among the women. In this way she grew to know Myrtle Reed, the star, a black eyed, black haired young woman, with an open, childish face. Myrtle was good to her and finally felt responsible for her. So when Myrtle was offered a position with one of the big companies in Los Angeles she decided to carry Nan off with her.

"That's the place for you, Nanno," she said. "You can make your way out there. They don't appreciate you here. The idea of keeping you a super! I'm sure you could do a part."

Nan thought to herself: "Young woman, my little finger knows more about life than your whole head. You think I am a child. Well, think it. I've got to get on. I can play act as well as you. You won't hear a murmur out of me—but when I've gotten a good start, then you'll see me. What is a star next to a comet?"

SO she let herself be petted all the way out to Los Angeles. But when she got there she insisted that she must live by herself, though Myrtle took a beautiful bungalow in Hollywood on Ivar street, and had a maid, and a garden, and a spare room. Myrtle would not hear of it, however, and Nan thought: "Well, I can stand it for a few weeks." So she took the spare room.

Myrtle worked over in one of the big, airy studios on Sunset boulevard. Here she introduced her friend. But still Nan had to do super work.

She liked it, however. She liked the sunny studios, the quiet of the lot, the avenue outside of drooping pepper trees. She liked the automobile parties, when the whole company filed off in cars, sweeping down the long avenues and out into the large, loose scenery of Southern California. She liked the deserts, the mountains, the dry arroyos with their orange orchards, and the sunshine, perfect in its blue amplitude.

In one of the fields one day Danny Duval was going up in an aeroplane. His pilot tinkered with the engine, and the company gathered about to watch. A girl named Betty Lang, who had a small part in the production, was to go up with Danny. At the last moment she demurred. No entreaty could move her. Hal Turner, the director, who had a temper, swore at her. Then he turned around and thundered:

"Is there one girl here with any spunk?"

Nan, in imagination, had already been flying above the clouds. She had already lived the parts both of Danny and of Betty, in her usual way. So she merely said:

"I'll go up."

A few minutes later the machine rose. But when she felt a little breathless with the altitude she became self-conscious. This was her first part, and now that she had it she did not live it. It was her old awkwardness. She turned and looked at Danny, who was puffing at a wind shielded pipe, and she saw, not the hero of the piece, but an extraordinarily good looking young man with a face like baked clay, blackened eyebrows and discolored lips. He caught her look.

"Afraid?" he asked.

She spoke awkwardly. "No."

He smiled brilliantly. "But suppose we fall?"

She hesitated. "Well, then—we fall."

"But suppose," he went on, speaking slowly and with great enjoyment, "you aren't killed, but are maimed for life?"

"Well," she said suddenly, "you've got more to spoil than I have."

He slapped his knee and laughed. "Who are you, anyway?"

But before they had time to say much to each other they were down in the field again.

They went up again. Danny kept his eye on Nan. He was plainly fascinated. But, then, so was she. In spite of her resolve, and her year's practice of having nothing to do with men, she found herself answering his looks, and talking. But, then, Danny was not the kind of man who brought that vision of the pool in the cave and the black water changing into the black wings.

Danny was a blonde actor who had courage but no ambition. His real name was Macavoy, and people said he was an "awfully good fellow." He would lay down his life for a friend; he was full of fun; he whistled light heartedly; and money in his hands was water in a sieve. He loved "good times"; he played the piano by ear and with great facility, and he preferred the company of men to that of women. But he did not rise in the profession.

Nan was delighted with him. She liked his fresh look, his twinkling blue eyes, the play-boy in him, his genuine joyousness. She felt safe with him, as she had not previously felt safe with a man. She could let go, and all was light and easy. She thought almost immediately: "I can allow myself to love this man."

As for Danny, he said: "You are a deep one." What he meant was that she was dark and mysterious, but it didn't matter. They could be children together, they could laugh and play.

The next day Danny took Nan out in his racer. On the road to Santa Monica he asked her again:

"Are you afraid?"

"No," she said.

"We'll prove it," said Danny. "I'll let her all out to hell."

But she never flinched, and on the way home he declared that he was madly in love with her. "You're the girl for me," he said. As he said the words something happened in her. She knew, by an inner conviction, that they were for each other. It was right. It meant a chance to come out of her darkness. She said: "You are right, Danny."

He stopped the car with a jerk and caught her in his arms. He said: "Let's not bother with red tape; let's get out a license and go through with it."

Within two days they were married and had taken a little bungalow near Myrtle's on Ivar street.

Danny told Nan she was done with work and that she now had a husband to take care of her. She shrieked with laughter.

Men were fascinated and tried to make friends with her.

"You poor boy," she said, stroking his blonde hair, "a husband? You? Don't put on airs. And don't make me stop loving you. If I'd been looking for a husband I would never have picked you."

"Shucks!" he said, "I don't want my wife to work."

"I've got to work," she replied. "I must. I'll go to pieces if I don't. And you see, Danny, you don't know what ambition is. I do. I've got to have a lot of power, and I've got to have money, or I won't feel alive. You don't know me. I'm a high explosive. So play safe with me. Let me go the limit. Then I'll be a good fellow with you."

"Well," he said, "I'll fetch the stuff for you."

"You?" She looked him in the eyes. "Danny, you don't know anything about money. You're not made for such things. If you try to economize and cut yourself down you'll be miserable and our marriage won't last a week. If you love me, go on having a good time. Then I will, too."

He was convinced. By her order he went over to Hal Turner and asked Hal to give a real part to Nan.

Hal snorted: "What's that woman to you?"

"Well," said Danny seriously, "she's my wife."

"O," said Hal. He gave Nan a part.

THE part was fairly important. In this particular photoplay the heroine has concealed her past from her husband. She has, however, an intimate friend, to whom she confesses. This woman, in love with the husband, betrays her. Nan was given the part of the unfaithful friend.

Things went better in the beginning than Nan had expected. She knew she must live the part, and she knew that as soon as she was in it it would not seem real to her. So she tried desperately and fairly well succeeded. Hal found her a little awkward, and sometimes absent minded, and brought her up sharply. But he was not dissatisfied. At the same time she was absent minded because of a storm that was gradually rising in her. In her usual way she was imagining herself into every other part in the play—she was hero and heroine and whoever else was important. But as the play went on she thought:

"It's all absurd. This isn't the way such things happen. Hal knows nothing about life or art, either. He's spoiling the whole thing."

Finally there came the scene of the betrayal. The false friend comes into the room where the husband is sitting at a desk. She breaks down and weeps and he extorts from her the story of his wife's past.

Nan tried to do this, but in a minute Hal was bellowing at her:

"Why don't you bawl? You're no good."

It bleached my skin snowy white in 40 minutes

by Martha Ryerson

One day as I was strolling along the banks of a little stream in Wales, I came upon the most beautiful creature I had ever seen—a simple little country girl, whose beauty lay mainly in her marvelous complexion.

She was so sweet and naive that it took but a moment to gain her confidence, and soon we were chatting away like old friends. After awhile I plucked up courage enough to ask to what secret she owed her lovely complexion. And imagine my surprise when she attributed it entirely to a magnetic clay that she scooped from the river bed!

She must have read my thoughts, for immediately she invited me to try her "treatment," and with her own hands gathered up some of the silky clay and applied it to my face.

I can never tell you what I felt during the 40 minutes I was waiting for the clay to dry. All my life my complexion had been my despair, and I hardly dared hope this natural clay could give me what all the scientists and chemists in the world had failed to do—and what I had been longing for all my life. It hardly seemed possible, and yet—how I did hope!

Finally the time was up and I was removing the clay with feverish haste. Then a glance in my mirror—and I could hardly believe my eyes! Gone was the murky color; gone was the oiliness that had always troubled me so much; gone were the blackheads and wrinkles! Now my skin glowed with youth and beauty. A miracle had happened.

My father, who is a dermatologist, had been searching for years for such a magic beauty aid as this, so I immediately shipped him samples of this magnetic clay.

My father and his assistants compounded it by a formula of their own into a delightful, satiny clay-pack called "Terra-derma-lax" (Earth Skin Laxative)—a magic emollient that not only bleaches yellowish, murky skins to virgin white and eradicates all blackheads, pimples and wrinkles, but brings a rich, warm glow to the skin and completely rejuvenates it.

Last year over a million women bought Terra-derma-lax by mail from the laboratories at $2 a jar. Now you may get it at any drug or department store at $1 a jar—half the old mail-order price.

If you use it twice a week you will need no other beauty aids—except a daily cleansing cream. I especially recommend Terra-derma Creme, an English cold cream prepared to supplement Terra-derma-lax. The price, with the new skin vitalizing English Beauty Brush, is $1, or with Terra-derma-lax added—in the English Beauty Kit—all for $1.87 at all stores where toilette goods are sold.

BLACK WINGS

Nan turned on him in a fury. A terrible look was in her green eyes. But she spoke in a deadly quiet way:

"Do you think a woman who is betraying her dearest friend would act the way you want me to act?"

"Do you think," he thundered, "that I don't know what I'm talking about?"

"Yes," she said, "you don't know."

He was dazed. No actor before had dared to talk to the terrible Hal in this way. He went up to her, clenching his fists.

"You're nothing but a third rater, and you come in here to show me my business. All right, if you know it all, show me how it's to be done or get out."

She stood up to him in a cold rage and spoke distinctly so that all the other actors could hear her:

"If I betray my dearest friend, whom I love, I am torn between my love of the woman and my love of her husband. So I feel guilty. I know I am dastardly. And I try to cover up my dastardliness, and my fear, and my guilt, by being aggressive, by getting up a devil in myself. And so when I come into this room I seem to menace this man. I am menacing. And that's the only way it can be acted. All this breaking down in tears and being coaxed is slush and piffle."

Hal turned pale, but before he could strike at her with his temper she added crisply:

"Get some one else for the part. I'm through."

And she walked away.

"Well," she thought on her way home, "this ruins me. Perhaps poor Danny will have to take care of me after all."

BUT this thought did not hold her long. She was aroused. She kept thinking furiously about the play and how it should have been shaped and acted. It was wrong from start to finish. It was all wrong. She knew how it ought to be. She'd show them. Then she laughed. How could she show them? Well, then, she'd show herself; have the satisfaction of proving to herself that she was right and that Hal Turner was wrong. As soon as she got home she'd sit down and write it all out as she saw it. For if she were wrong she had merely given way, in the old manner, to something destructive in herself. And she wanted to know it.

"And if I am right," she thought fiercely, "I'll tell them all to go to the devil!"

Luckily Danny was out when she reached home. She sat down at a table and worked. She worked for hours. And as she worked she began throwing away the story that Hal Turner had concocted and substituting a new one. She laughed as she went on. "What will this prove?" she asked. "It's a new story. It hasn't anything to do with the old. It proves nothing."

But before it was finished it proved one thing to her that made her pause, breathless, and look up.

"I'm a scenario writer," she thought, with a dazzling flash of insight. "That's what's the matter with me. I'm not an actress. I thought if I acted strange and mysterious things I wouldn't have to live them. But I am not an actress. I haven't been an actress for a minute. I've simply been among the actors living the whole play in my mind. But that is a writer. That's the way I'll live the very devil in me. I'll make plays of it. I'll write 'em the most mysterious, the strangest, the most romantic, the most terrible and wonderful things. That's what I'll do."

When Danny hove in she was finished.

"Whoo!" he ejaculated. "You've done it, Nan. The studio is in ruins and Hal is doing the Samson and pulling down the roof. What a demon you are!"

"O," she said lightly, "we're made, Dan. I've written a scenario that is a hummer. And I'm going to take it to Bob Winchester himself. He's the man for it. I'm through with Hal."

All that he seemed to hear was the name Winchester.

"Winchester?" he repeated. "No, Nan. I wouldn't have any woman I cared for go to him."

"O, tut," she said; "you leave it to me."

He pleaded with her, but she was obdurate, and he had to give in. She went that evening. Winchester lived in a bungalow by himself, with a Japanese servant. He was a thin, tall man, with thin lips, a pallid face, and gray eyes that were piercing. He had a reputation for his power over women. His curt speech, the authority in his manner, the piercing eyes, and something indefinable, a sort of hidden glow, made him almost absolute with certain kinds of women. They idolised him, they submitted to him, they wanted him to master them. Nan trembled as she went along. She knew herself. And as she thought more vividly of Winchester suddenly, and for the first time in months, she saw distinctly the black pool of smooth water in the immense cave, and the water slowly stirring into two great black wings. She shuddered and put the vision from her. Winchester was the sort of man to whom she was fated, the sort of man who could own her body and soul, who could leave her helpless and so could destroy her.

"I have only Danny," she thought, "to keep me strong."

But there was something else that gave her strength. It was the manuscript in her hand, into which she had poured, that afternoon, something of the darkness in her nature. That relief made her more able for the encounter.

Nevertheless, as she rang the bell and waited at the door she felt unsure of herself. She remembered Chicago and those weeks of being spellbound. This was the first test since then to which she had been subjected.

He held the door open like a gentleman.

The Japanese servant opened the door and showed her into a room which was comfortable with books and heavy leather furniture and a center table desk with a lamp upon it. The lamp was lit. The room was bathed in a soft light under the shadows.

Winchester came in and stood before her. She remained seated. He said nothing, but looked her over. He was cold and distant, waiting for her to speak.

In spite of herself she betrayed her agitation. She had a longing to let go, to let events carry her along. She struggled against it, but her voice trembled and was hardly audible.

"I have come to show you a scenario, Mr. Winchester. I am Nan Tinney. I did some extra work in one of your plays; and I've just been doing some work with Mr. Turner."

"Come to the desk," he said curtly.

She arose, trembling, and followed him. He sat before the desk; she at its side. The light fell on their faces. They were close together. Glancing quickly, she saw the knotted power in his lean face.

He bent toward her.

"So you are the girl," he said gravely, "who told Hal Turner he didn't know how to direct."

Instead of smiling she flushed and looked away.

"Give me the manuscript," he commanded, and she did so.

He rose then, and she rose. She felt very weak and small and wanted him to precede her to the door. But he insisted on her going first.

At the open door he said to her:

"Come at this time tomorrow night. I shall be alone."

She found herself in the street, her heart pounding, her mind confused. "I shall be alone" pounded in her head, over and over. Perhaps Danny was right. She should never have gone. She felt that all the work of over a year in trying to build up her character against the terrific forces of her nature might be in vain; that the whole structure was beginning to totter. The worst of it was that the old "I-don't-care" feeling came over her. What was the difference? Why not let go? Why not go to the devil?

AT the corner she ran headlong into the arms of a man. She gave a cry and then she laughed hysterically. It was Danny. He had been on the watch.

"Well," he said, "are you all right?"

Her first thought was, "Danny mustn't know," so she tossed up her head and exclaimed: "It's absolutely all right, Danny. I'm to go tomorrow night. And he's a gentleman—at least with me."

But she lay awake all of that night. She lay awake in a terrible struggle with herself. She thought to herself, "The thing to do is to stick to Danny. That will see me through. That, and the writing." She tried hard to see what she really wanted to do in life. Did she really want to be destroyed? Was there not a power in her which demanded success and courageous work? Did she not really want to win to power, to have money and freedom, to become known, to come to genuine superiority? Must she not now give up something? Was there not something to renounce?

"Ah," she thought, "I must be willing to sit at a desk and instead of living my wildness and my darkness, instead of the terrible wonder of letting go, I must suffer; I must keep it in myself; I must shape it into dreams; I must patiently work and make stories out of it. All the darkness in me must go into that, and then, for the rest, I will be quiet and live with Danny and perhaps not be so restless."

But it is no small matter to sacrifice desire. It is, when the time comes, an agony. It is like a parting of flesh from flesh. When the morning broke Danny found Nan with death in her face. He thought she was stricken, but she smiled gently and said: "It is all right, Danny."

IT was all right. That evening when she went to Winchester she found him at his desk. He motioned her to the seat beside him, and she sat down quietly. She was pale, but in possession of herself. She saw merely a man before her.

"I like this," he said, pointing to the manuscript.

Then he was silent, and pierced her with a look. After that he leaned forward to take her hand. She had been waiting for the action, and she stood up.

"Do you like that story?" she asked in a low voice.

He raised his eyebrows. "Yes," he said.

"Well, then," she went on, "take it and be a man about it, and treat me like a human being. You are buying my story—not me."

The poise of the man was a little shaken. He rose. But he allowed his admiration for her to show in his eyes.

"You are right," he said quietly.

He held the door open, like a gentleman, as she expressed it, and they bid each other good-night.

Nan Tinney had emerged from the dark fate that had shadowed her. Her career was begun.

THE CHARACTERS IN THE STORY

MRS. PENDLETON WAYNE, young and beautiful, an author engrossed in her writing, but still fondly in love with her husband,

PENDLETON WAYNE, successful lawyer, forty and inclined to be fat. He is a trifle bored with his wife, Nelly, and enamored of

JULIET WETHERELL ("Jill"), who is characterized as a girl seeking a wealthy marriage by

PERLEY REX, a society philanderer. Rex, resting in his club while his car is being repaired, unexpectedly comes upon an old friend,

PETER GRANVILLE, who has been adventuring in China and other lands. He is an old admirer of Mrs. Wayne. And there is also

MRS. CORNELIUS CALENDER, Juliet Wetherell's sister, with whom Juliet makes her home.

It is the anniversary of the Waynes' wedding. Pen elects to take his wife to the Tanglewood Country club for their dinner. Juliet is to go there with the Calenders, but her sister refuses to let her have a new dress she herself has decided to wear. Perley Rex insists Granville go with him to Tanglewood for their dinner, too.

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

At the Country Club.

THE hooking up was now finished, but Mrs. Corny lingered before the glass, uncertainty in the regard she bent on her counterfeit. "Do switch on the lights, Ella," she crossly said. "How do you expect me to see myself——? Isn't it getting dark awf'ly early?"

"I think there's a thunderstorm coming up, ma'am," the maid meekly replied as she obeyed, flooding the rose clad figure with light.

"That settles it, then." Jill had a secret smile, as if she understood her sister's faith in her own taste had been so far sapped by suggestion that she was snatching at the first fair excuse to put off making public appearance in the gown. "If it's going to rain, I won't risk it. Unhook me, please, and fetch my amber organdie."

"I think you're awf'ly wise, Mary Ann," Jill commented in a honeyed voice; "your amber organdie suits you divinely."

"Don't delude yourself, darling," Mrs. Corny retorted; "whatever I wear, you won't wear this frock tonight. Now run along and dress or you'll be late for dinner."

"Dress!" the girl hollowly echoed. "In what, please?"

"Your crêpe meteor—I told you before——"

"I won't!" Jill passionately stamped her foot. "I'll never wear that rag again if I never go anywhere."

"It's your own choice then."

Mrs. Corny calmly stepped out of the chiffon gown, and the maid, reverently gathering it up, put it out of harm's way on the chaise longue while she repaired to a nearby clothes press to sort out the amber organdie.

"My choice!" Jill stormed, all but in tears. "You mean yours. You want me to lose every last chance I've got, want me to grow into an old maid on your hands!"

The girl's excited accents abruptly fell, and before Mrs. Corny could reply her husband interposed: "I say, Marian——"

Mr. Cornelius Calender idly strolled in through the door that communicated with his dressing room: a round little body of man entirely surrounded by dinner clothes whose abbreviated jacket made him look even shorter than he was; with a pudgy, fresh colored face and small, myopic eyes that blinked through horn rimmed glasses.

"Suppose you know it's going to storm?"

With a small shriek Jill swooped down on the chaise longue, swathed her bare shoulders with the first garment she found there, and fled the room by another door.

"I do wish, Corny," his wife severely observed, "you'd learn to show a little more consideration."

"Hello, what's up?"

"You might be decent enough to remember to knock——"

"What for? Way you talk, anybody'd think we weren't married."

"Didn't you see Jill had practically nothing on?"

"Hadn't she?" The small eyes behind the thick lenses opened in what seemed to be true astonishment. "Bless my soul! I didn't notice anything like that. You women wear so little at any time nowadays, how d'you expect a chap to know the difference?"

But his wife wasn't heeding. Her attention had veered to the chaise longue. "That little imp!" she chuckled, half indignant, half amused—"she's made off with my rose chiffon after all!"

"Marriage is a test of love—it kills or cures."

ALL at once Perley Rex threw out the clutch, unmeshed the gears, and permitted the splendid fabric, which he had been racing over the loneliest of those innumerable byroads that web the lake district of Westchester, to slow down of its own accord, without benefit of brakes. And so certain was his sense of locality, so sure his gauging of the distance and momentum, that the car came to a full stop with headlights squarely trained upon a guide post in the crotch of forking ways.

For a brief wait there was, aside from the drone of the idling motor, never a sound alien to the singing stillness of midsummer night. His guest, reclining in the car's one other seat, made neither sound nor stir, but only rolled eyes toward Perley's face. A dull refracted glow from the dash lamp threw into low relief the salient surfaces of that unbeautiful yet engaging mask and discovered its habitual urbanity overcast. The lips moved, releasing a small but distressing wail: "What to do! What to do!"

"Lost?" Granville cheerfully surmised.

"Not yet," Rex with bitterness returned. "Know where we are, right enough. Trouble is, I can't be sure, and I'm afraid to guess, where I may find myself a half hour hence."

A long drive with warm wind buffeting his face had reduced Mr. Granville to a good humored taciturnity. His considered comment on this obscure utterance was terse: "By me."

"Well"—Rex leveled a dramatic finger at the guide post—"see that, don't you? Read what it says."

Granville squinted through the glare. "Right hand arm says 'Tanglewood,'" he reported, "left hand, 'Croton.' What of it?"

The extended hand described a sign of caution against a sky instantaneously livid with unearthly light. "Hark!" Rex enjoined. The night shuddered with a muted rumble drifting through it from the west. "Know what that means?"

"Storm coming up."

"Bright lad. But how fast?"

"If it's any kin to the squalls that used to sweep this neck of the woods when you and I were youngsters it's liable to swoop down on us before we can say snap."

"Well, there you are. I mean to say, here, in a manner of speaking, we both are."

"Where?"

Again Rex singled out the guide post: "Confronted by a gosh awful dilemma. See it's horns?"

"A little, ordinary lucidity," Granville drowsily suggested, "would be a helpful thing."

"Wait." A switch on the instrument board was shifted, the headlights winked out, the black night pressed them close, opaque and breathless. Vision adjusting itself to the abrupt dousing of that glare, made out, low on the eastern horizon, the dim and milky glow that presaged a belated moon. Then again lightning behind the western hills flared and disclosed a firmament piled high with beetling thunderheads. Blackness erased that portentous revelation, a heavier growl of thunder followed.

"Traveling fast," Rex guessed. "Wherefore the said dilemma: to the left, thirty minutes to my shack and safety; to the right, ten minutes to the Tanglewood club and—who knows?"

Helplessly Granville confessed: "By me again."

Rex switched on the headlights, but hesitated with hand on the gear shift lever. "You might try to help a person out," he querulously complained.

"But—the devil!" Granville expostulated, "is there any choice in sanity? To the left, as you point out, it's half an hour's ride, with a sound drenching to boot before we get to your place—thanks to your sporting whim for a racing car without a top. To the right, an easy run to shelter. Blessed if I can see what makes you hang in the wind."

"Home is safer," Rex darkly enunciated; "homekeeping hearts are happiest."

"A dry skin isn't such a sad thing either. If you leave it to me, partner, clubs are trumps."

Rex reengaged the gears and swung the car into the right hand branch of the fork.

The needle of the speed meter crept up to and past the mark 40 before Granville spoke again.

"Is it a secret why you're so loath to take cover at the Tanglewood club?"

"Confounded place gives me the jumps."

"Go on . . ."

"Well!" Rex savagely ground out, "it's Jill Wetherell's pet stamping ground."

"Don't know the lady."

"Girl I was telling you about this afternoon."

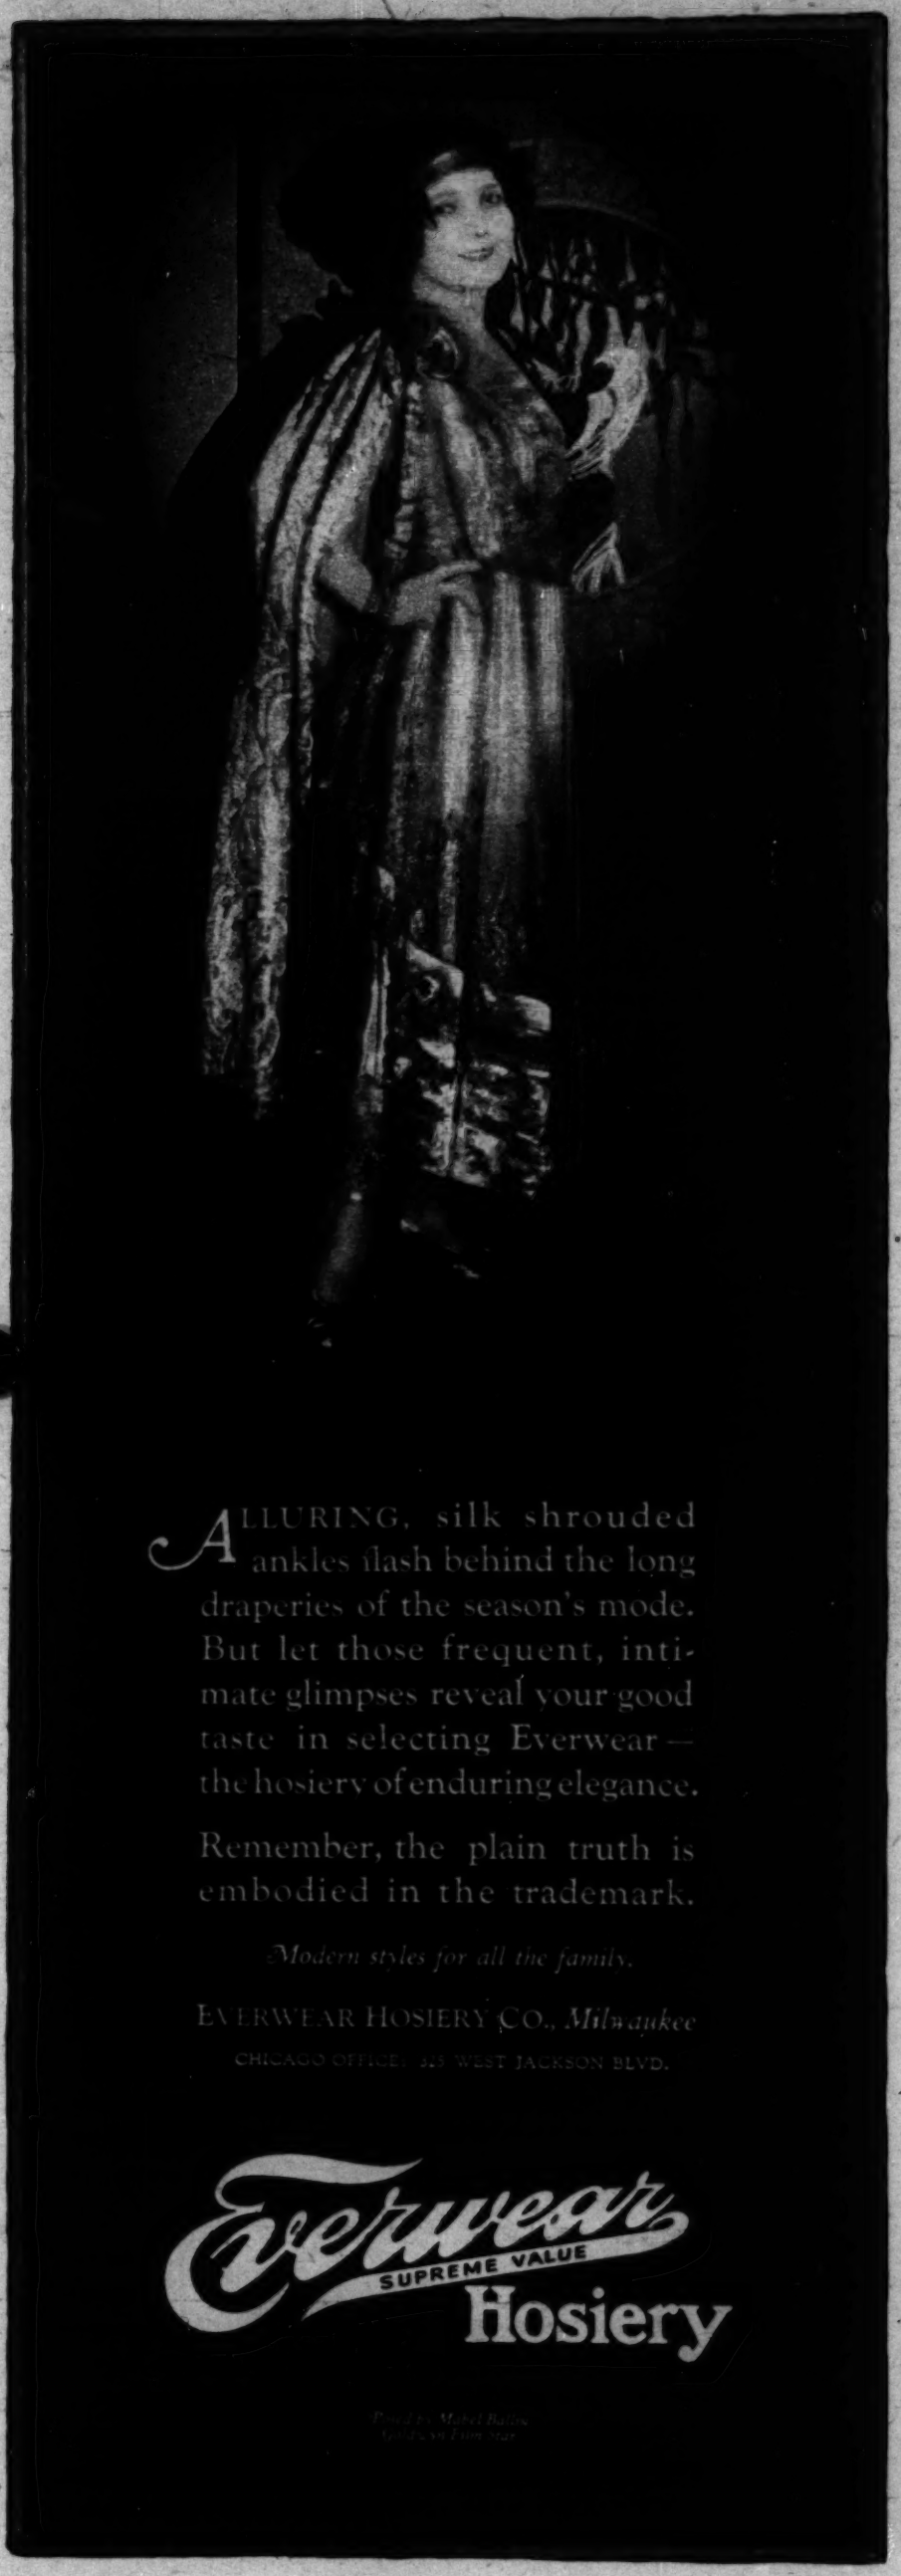
"You weren't. You mentioned a young person named Jill, but you didn't tell me anything."

Living fire gashed the heavens in the west and discovered the car like a wild eyed shape flying for dear life through a spectral inferno. A prolonged roll of thunder died away before Rex opened his mind again.

"Granny," he confided then, "I don't mind telling you I'm scared to death of this Jill girl."

"You make me keen to meet her. I'd give something to know a woman you respect."

"Respect! Good Lord! nothing like that.



The most worthless, heartless, scheming little mercenary that ever——!"

"If you know her so well, what are you afraid of?"

"Myself," Rex declared in savage self-contempt. "That's the kind of moron I am—one of the several kinds—I like danger."

"How can a 'worthless, heartless, scheming little mercenary' be dangerous to you?"

"Well, if you're as naïve as all that I can't explain, but the danger's there, all right. Marriage is Jill's little game," Rex affirmed. "A stout marriage. Nothing less will do. The poor dear hasn't got a sou, and she has been so long on the prowl for a good provider she's a menace to the peace of the community. One doesn't like to seem self-conscious, old boy, but one may without immodesty direct attention to one's self as an eligible party for almost any marriageable virgin."

"O, all of that . . ."

"In other words, meat for the man traps. Live meat. Jill's meat."

"But why hers necessarily? Young enough, unattached, disgustingly well off, steeped to your marrow in all the social vices and—well—not ill favored; you ought to be able to take your pick of women."

"Suppose I did?" Rex contended. "How long would I last?"

"You young rip! I mean wives."

"They do say married women are safest." Rex seemed to consider this angle seriously. "What a lot you know, Granny."

"O, be damned! you and your impertinence," Granville genially retorted. "You know well enough I mean you're in a position to pick and choose if you want to marry——"

"Don't want to marry," Rex interrupted indignantly. "Thought you knew me better."

"Then why, in heaven's name, all this worry about a designing jade?"

"You don't know Jill," Rex gloomily reminded him, "so it's utterly impossible for you to appreciate the frightful temptation. 'Most every other type of woman is more or less an old story——"

Blandly Granville interpolated: "Dog."

"But Jill!"—Rex followed up his thought unheeding—"to marry that conscienceless little vixen, give her a taste of what she's given so many men, break her, tame her—my God! what a temptation."

"At least," Granville gravely reflected, "your home life wouldn't be dull."

"It would be just simple hell, but it wouldn't last. Sooner or later Jill would be sure to fall in love with me and spoil it all."

"Don't half hate yourself, do you, m'lad?"

"Only because I'd treat her so badly."

"Well, and then?" Granville argued, hugely entertained. "Assuming by some wild stretch of the imagination the young woman should fall in love with her husband——"

Rex grunted. Either impatience with Granville's denseness or respect for a difficult bit of driving kept him quiet for a little. Then he broke out again in deep disgust: "Fancy being sentenced for life to live with a woman in love with you!"

"For my part, I wouldn't fancy anything else."

"You talk like a schoolboy. As if any adult of this day didn't know better than to believe that love lasts!" Rex drew attention to clustered lights that crowned a hilltop not far ahead. "There's Tanglewood. And if you're a true friend, old boy, you won't leave your little playfellow alone a minute tonight. That is, if Jill Wetherell's anywhere about. . . ."

The car was turning in between gate posts when Granville gave tongue to an illuminating bit of divination: "Perley, you're in love with this girl. Don't you suppose Miss Wetherell knows it?"

"What do you imagine a woman thinks when a man runs like a deer every time he finds himself within her range?"

"O, well," Granville laughed, "you're sound in wind and limb. As long as you keep on running . . ."

AS the voyager may between two breaths pass from the lively company of mountain waters, brave with sunlight lancing their jade translucence, gilding their myriad facets, lending the high luster of snow to their creaming rapids, into some wide and tranquil pool dim with the twilight of engirdling woodlands, so Nelly Wayne slipped away from the floor of the ballroom, with its gay illumination, with the headiness of waltz rhythms sung by strings and woodwinds adding intoxication to its swirl of life and love and laughter, and found herself alone in the soberly lighted, sedately furnished lounge.

Its desertedness, however, that she appeared to find so disconcerting, continued only an instant. As the door swung to behind her, muffling the music, through another, at the far end of that long and shallow room, entered a portly personage, bearing in each hand a brass candlestick in which a fairly long candle was fixed. His gait was deliberate and consequential, his nose, a formidable feature, was in the air; and if, unlike Nelly, he had fully thought to find the room without a tenant he was none the less on parade and, when he saw her, unmistakably gratified to find that his importance wasn't wasted. He paused, ducked his head, boomed "Good evening, Mrs. Wayne." So might mellow bell metal become articulate.

"Good evening, Biddle."

The response by comparison sounded almost timid, as if an awed little girl were returning the salutation of an imposing elder. But had neither spoken the effect of their encounter would have been much the same; it was Biddle's way to be overpowering, his peculiar gesture to be at once in his place and superior to every other. Biddle, his betters declared, beyond shadow of reasonable doubt had studied his part under the most conventional minded of stage directors, could have buttled to perfection behind footlights without change of makeup, material or mental. Any playwright might have written him; most playwrights had. Notwithstanding, and in spite, or possibly because, of the fact that he had never been known to smile, it remained an open question whether he were more amusing in his chosen characterization than amused by its toleration. He was thoroughly capable of such subtle insolence.

Having paid his respects to the wife of a free handed member, the club steward straightened his back, lifted up his nose anew, and with measured stride bore down upon a table which held the middle of the floor, the two long candles that flanked his convexes enduing him with a pontifical air.

"If I may take the liberty of saying so, Mrs. Wayne," he offered in an orotund rumble, "it is a real pleasure to see you at the club. Especially on a night like this, when we are all so very gay."

"It is nice to be here, thank you." Mrs. Wayne moved a few paces in from the door and again paused with the air of one at a loss. "I only wish," she added nervously, "we might run out more often to the dances, Mr. Wayne and I. But, you see, we're both such busy people. Mr. Wayne especially. He really ought to use the club more than he does, even if I can't always come out with him; I'm sure he needs the golf. But he has so little time to himself nowadays, even after office hours."

With monumental gravity Biddle returned: "Quite so, madam." He had gained his objective, had halted before it, was surveying the center table with a scowl of speculation.

"I'm looking for Mr. Wayne now, Biddle. He stole away for a smoke, I suppose, while we were dancing. Have you seen him——?"

Biddle moved his head slowly from side to side. "No, Mrs. Wayne. But he might be out on the verandah."

Four French windows gave from the lounge directly to the verandah. Nelly Wayne crossed to the nearest and stepped out, to stand for a moment casting right and left. Then, "No," she announced, returning, "I don't see him."

"Perhaps you'd like me to have a look round, madam, as soon as I've placed these candles."

"O, no; please don't trouble—thank you. It doesn't matter. He will show up presently—of course."

"Quite so, madam."

His long study of the problem seemingly repaid by a flash of genuine inspiration, Biddle leaned forward, put down the candlesticks on either side of a great bowl of cut flowers, and stood back, folding his hands, breathing audibly, regarding the work of impeccable taste with a satisfaction which he made no effort to conceal.

"But what are they for, Biddle—the candles? I've been wondering . . . ."

"Storm coming up, Mrs. Wayne. Very black indeed in the west. Haven't you heard the thunder?"

"No—the music must have drowned it out. Still, I don't quite understand——"

The steward of a country club needs must be a man able to be patient without showing it. "It's the electric lights, madam," Biddle explained with unmitigated suavity. "The power house always shuts down during a storm."

"How curious!" Nelly wondered. "Have you any idea why?"

"I couldn't say, madam. But that's how it is." Thunder rattled afar. "One good clap of that and off goes the current for as long as the storm lasts."

"But what a shame! It will spoil the dance."

"O, I hardly think so, Mrs. Wayne." It was impossible to disguise the pain it cost Biddle to disagree. But there were compensations: "Last time it stormed of a dance night the young people seemed to think it quite a lark to go on by candlelight."

Nelly had returned to the window, in whose recess she stood, gazing out, vaguely pained. "It seems hard to believe," she murmured, "a night so still and lovely and the moon just rising. . . ." All but oblivious to the company of the steward, she permitted the thought that stirred in her bosom to find expression: "A night for lovers . . ."

Distant thunder mocked that utterance like laughter of the grim, ironic gods. As it grumbled into silence, "Ah!" Biddle, too, reverberated in profound disdain—"lovers! If I may say so, madam, those who suffer from that complaint can't learn too soon to look out for squalls."

"How very hard you are on lovers, Biddle."

"They're so glad and blind——!"

"Were you never in love yourself, then?" The voice behind her lost some of its uneasiness, had rather a dry and brittle ring when it replied: "Yes, madam, once."

"And did you find it such a very disillusioning experience?"

"I married . . ."

IF this were a bid for laughter, Nelly's unconscious sigh registered its total failure. "Marriage," she supposed, "is rather a test of love—it kills or cures."

"Not always—beg pardon, Mrs. Wayne. But it's my observation some people never do get cured of the love habit. Mostly men they are, I'm sorry to say; with some it's a regular disease, like taking a drop too much every so often."

"Sentimental dipsomania," Nelly translated into the terminology of her trade.

"Something like that. And if they keep on at it in the end it gets them all, every time. Same as it is with hard drinkers. Gives them the horrors." Biddle paused to wag a sage old head, then tolled again: "Ah! many's the case I've known would make you think. Respectable elderly gentlemen, Mr. Wayne's age, say, or mine—big business men, as like as not, that you'd think they would know better."

Nelly Wayne looked round, but nothing in her expression betrayed more than the amusement any student of character might have felt, and the carved blandness of the countenance that Biddle presented was proof against the shrewdest scrutiny.

"A man in my position, Mrs. Wayne, sees a desperate lot of love making going on under his nose, first and last. And men unlucky in love have got to talk to somebody about it; and if they talk to a person they can tip handsome they aren't afraid he'll burst out laughing in their faces."

"I presume," Nelly cast back, "when you say they wake up with a headache, you mean they find themselves married."

"Still married," Biddle corrected, not without deference, but definitely. "It's the married kind always gets the hardest hit, having to stand by and see the little girl he's been fancying go off with some younger chap who is able to marry her, as one might say, out of hand."

The steward fished a match box out of a waistcoat pocket, rattled it skeptically to his ear, dissembled the surprise he felt on hearing that it held at least one match, and extracted this.

"It's a funny thing," he confided to the candles as he set fire to each wick—"I mean, about married men when love takes hold on them out of season. They never seem to understand that what they want and what the young woman wants are two different things entirely. What they're after is a tidy little affair, all roses and rapture, and no questions asked, like the poet says; and what the young woman has in mind all along is a church wedding with pieces in the papers, a honeymoon abroad, and charge accounts all up and down Fifth avenue."

The expectant pause was unrewarded which followed the fall of his voice. Nelly had turned away again, was seemingly absorbed in the prospect from the window. And presently Biddle (unseen) rolled eyes of resignation up to heaven, heaved out of his injured bosom tones like those of a tired bell: "If you'll excuse me now, Mrs. Wayne . . ." And hiding his wounds, hoisted his nose to its right elevation, readjusted his eyebrows to the proper angle, threw out his chest and everything, shot his cuffs, and retired—all circumstances considered—in good order.

THUNDER played claque to a spectacular effect of lighting. In that weirdly compounded illumination of misty moonlight and blue-white glare the countryside resembled a dark tumultuous sea petrified by terror. Then a drift of cloud eclipsed the moon, the night became dense through whose depths the headlights of a motor car could be seen swiftly questing out the highway that skirted the Tanglewood grounds. Incuriously the woman in the window watched their beam, in the semblance of a blunted arrowhead of gold, bore in through the invisible gateposts far below, trace with hazardous rapidity the curves of the drive that wound up the terraced hillside, and swing in beneath the porte-cochère.

The dull glow from the front doorway picked out the graceful lines of a racing body mounted upon a chassis of distinguished reputation. One man got down and addressed himself to the verandah steps, while the other, the driver, kept his place and gave out instructions in a voice of high pitch.

"Wait in the lounge, will you, old boy, while I run this bus down to the garage and scout about a bit to make sure it's safe to stop . . . ."

From the elevation of the verandah floor the old boy looked back. "I'll wait, all right, my son, but, whether you judge it's safe for you or not, here I am and here I stop till the skies have cleared. May as well reconcile yourself to that first as last."

The driver made indignant noises that were lost in the thickening purr of the motor as the car resumed its pursuit of the arrowhead of gold. The other man strolled into the foyer, there disposed of his hat and duster, and entered the lounge.

The woman in the recessed window had moved no more than to lift a hand to her bosom in an unconscious gesture that added the consummate touch to a pose of half incredulous gladness. Her eyes were wonderfully alight and her lips apart but mute, as if she would have given him warning but was somehow strangely prevented, for the moment stirred beyond speech. And at first he didn't see her. Not until he had stopped to bend over and light a cigaret at one of the candles did he idly turn her way, freak of sheer chance or the magnetism of her steadfast regard shaping his course for that one window. Within arm's length he became aware of her quiet, staring presence, and, checking, sheered aside.

"I beg your pardon. . ."

"Granny!"

Even when she moved out into the light and offered him her two hands, laughing low to see him so confounded, though recognition kindled in his eyes, it flickered at first feebly, he seemed reluctant to concede the identity of this wistful lady with her whose image enshrined in memory lived on in loveliness undimmed by lapse of years.

"Granny, don't you know me?" She faltered, as if she winced from the pain of dashed delight, and in a little quaver cried: "Have you forgotten me completely, Granny, or . . . am I so hopelessly changed?"

"Nelly, is it truly you?" So might he have spoken had he hoped to hear the guess confuted. But then he rallied sharply and made amends with a laugh whose happiness rang true as minted coin: "Good Lord! it is—it's Nelly Paramor!"

The QUITTER

TABLOID SHORT STORIES

By RAYMOND KELLY

PAGE, '23, sat in the west bleachers staring with unseeing eyes at his program of events. His name was there, entered in the two mile run, but he was not to compete. For Page, so the campus critics were agreed, was yellow, and the Old Man, as the little coach at Canyon college was affectionately dubbed, hated a yellow athlete as nature abhors a vacuum.

In time trials Page had consistently come close to the sectional intercollegiate record for his event, but in competition he had three times that season ignominiously quit in races which had been won by men who should have been easy picking for him. The first time it had happened the Old Man had listened patiently to Page's explanation, but after the third fiasco he had turned away with the exclamation. "You've lost your nerve, and now you're losing your mind!" Page was beginning to agree with him, too.

"Drop out—hell!"

It wouldn't have been so bad if it hadn't been for the girl. Page had known Doris from childhood, and they had been high school sweethearts. They were classmates at Canyon, and Doris sat loyally beside him in the bleachers pretending to believe the story about the strained tendon. But she had heard the campus gossip. Craig would have seen to that; Craig, who wasn't fit to be on her list of acquaintances, but who had won his letter in the mile, and who today would run both that event and Page's.

A roar went up from the bleachers about him, and Page rose to his feet with the rest of the crowd, urged by a touch from Doris' hand. Craig was coming down the home-stretch leading the field in the mile, with Hawkins, the midget from State varsity, pushing him every foot of the way. Page cheered with the rest, but it was like a dose of bitter medicine to him to do so.

Then he sat down and Doris patted his arm. There was understanding in that, and it hurt worse than anything else had so far. If only—but what was the use? The Old Man had said he wasn't to compete, and the Old Man wasn't the sort to reverse his own verdict.

Event after event was run off, until only the everlasting pole-vault, the two-mile, and the relay remained. Page didn't want to see that two-mile. Canyon would lose it and with it the meet, and he would be blamed. He turned to suggest to Doris that they leave, and found she was no longer there beside him. Well, he couldn't blame her. He hadn't been very good company, and, besides, what girl of any spirit would want to spend an entire afternoon with a quitter, even if she were sorry for him? Slowly he got to his feet and, with a last look at the big scoreboard, started to leave. A hand on his arm detained him, and he turned to find little Paddy O'Brien, for thirty years caretaker and general factotum at Canyon college's athletic field. "The Auld Man do be wantin' ye, Misther Page," said Paddy.

"What for?"

"He didn't say, but I misdoubt that maybe he's wantin' ye to run the two-mile."

For a moment Page's heart leaped. Then hope died again. He wouldn't get another chance, after having thrown away three. He wouldn't go. But he found himself, nevertheless, following the little bow-legged Irishman down the steps and out on to the field. There Page stopped before the little coach and stood digging the sod with the toe of his shoe as he listened.

"I want you to set pace for the first mile and a half in the two-mile," the Old Man said. "We can win the relay, but we've got to get third or better in the two-mile, or lose this meet. Craig's tired, but he has nerve and can turn the trick if Patterson doesn't make the pace so fast they burn him out the first mile or so. You know pace, and I want you to get the pole at the gun and hold it. Run the first mile in four-fifty. Then do the next half in two-thirty and drop out. Craig has a real sprint, and they'll have to go some to keep him out of a place. Go get into your suit."

So that was it. He was too yellow to be allowed to finish a race, but was to set pace for Craig. Page was minded to refuse, but the Old Man was looking straight at him, and obedience to the little czar was a habit. He nodded and went across the field to the gym.

He was still bitter as he took his place on the starting line and listened to the customary warning about fouling. Two years ago, interscholastic champion, and now pace-setter for the man whom, above all others, he hated! And then the gun, and he was fighting for the pace. He got it, and the first half-mile was run mechanically, scarcely acting as a check to his reflections.

A cold wind had set in from the northeast and it took Page squarely as he rounded the turn into the backstretch on the fifth quarter. There was a bit of mist, too. No; he was crying! He, Tom Page, a former interscholastic champion, now a pace-setter—and crying! Well, it would soon be over, and then he would go home and not come back. He had written Dad of his intentions.

Ordinarily those fifth and sixth laps were a cross-section of hell to Page, but they weren't so hard if you weren't going to run the last half-mile. Now they were almost at the end of the sixth, and Craig was at his elbow. What was he saying? Oh, yes:

"Drop out. That's enough."

Drop out, and Craig would win the needed two points. Drop out, and the rooters would say, "He's quit again." He couldn't explain that he had acted under orders, and it was a cinch that Craig wouldn't. Drop out? Drop out—hell!

Page was in second position now, big Patterson in front, while behind him were Carney and Craig, and then the ruck of also-rans. The track had been loosened a bit by the preceding events, and Page could feel the click-click of the cinders thrown against his shins by Patterson's spikes. One—two, one—two. Would the big brute never tire? Damn that band, anyhow! How could he hold his stride when it kept blaring?

The last turn, and Patterson was a bit wide. Page was into the opening, and the final struggle was on. Only a hundred to go now. A hundred yards? No; a hundred miles. Why wasn't the track flat? What made it go up and down like that? One—two, one—two, and scarcely any progress at all.

. . . . . .

It was over, and he was lying on the turf beside the cinders. What was the crowd yelling his name for? And how had Dad got there? Good old Dad! Page's eyes cleared for a moment, and he saw Doris, with the little coach pumping her hand up and down as she kept repeating:

"I told you so! I told you! You can't beat our Tommy when he's mad!"

And then—then the quitter didn't mind the noise any more. He was very tired and sick and very, very happy.

Fare Play

By Morrow Krum

Mike's First Load as a Taxi Driver Provided a Great Fight, but Mike Collected.

JOHN KELLY, the big, raw boned superintendent of the taxicab company, appeared in the door of the garage. Instantly a score of mechanics doubled their efforts and the din that swept out of the doors and windows into the sunshine of the June morning was testimony of great industry. Kelly smiled. Efforts of his men to convey good impressions always amused him.

His smile did not leave his lips as he made his way from cab to cab, from lathe to lathe, from work bench to work bench. He gave each man a cheerful greeting, a gay salute, a hearty cuff on the shoulder. Each hail brought a friendly answer. Kelly was a popular boss.

The superintendent stopped beside a cab. A pair of legs extended from beneath the body of the machine. An Irish song floated up to the boss' ears. The boss bent over.

"That you, Mike?" he shouted.

"You bet," came the startled answer from beneath the taxicab. The legs wiggled and a buckboard dolly, clattering on its casters and groaning under the weight of the man it carried, rolled from beneath the automobile. Michael Doherty, his blue eyes glistening through the oil and grease on his face, stood up.

"Hello, Mr. Kelly," the lad said.

"Hello, my boy," said Kelly. "Say, Mike, how old are you?"

"Just twenty-one, sir," the boy answered.

"How would you like to take a cab?"

The young man's eyes shone. A wide smile spread across his face.

"O, boy! How would I like it? I'd eat it up, sir," the lad cried eagerly.

"Well, we've decided to put you on the street," Kelly said. "Your garage work has been good. You seem eager to get ahead. Driving a cab is a man's job, but we have decided you have the proper stuff."

"I'll make good, sir." The confidence in the young man's voice was reassuring.

"Now, Mike, let me tell you something," the superintendent continued. "You'll have to keep your wits about you and you'll have to have lots of courage. It takes a nervy, wide awake man to be a successful driver. There are many ways a cab driver can get in trouble. Sometimes he gets into an accident. Sometimes he gets hurt. A window may be broken. A passenger may try to cheat you out of your money. A souse may want to fight. A woman may lose her purse and blame you. You might get pinched for speeding. It's a tough job. Any little slip may cause your dismissal.

"Just be careful, Mike, my boy. You're one of the youngest men we ever trusted with a cab."

"I'll be careful, sir."

"All right—you start tomorrow night." The boss turned away. Then he spoke again.

"Remember, Mike, that you're giving full value for the money you will receive for cab hire," he said. "We do not overcharge for our service. Never be ashamed to get the amount indicated by the meter. Never be rough or brutal, but don't let any one kid you out of your fare." With that the boss departed.

MICHAEL DOHERTY'S heart sang. He was to be given a cab, a position he had sought for three years. From now on he would drive one of the bright vehicles over the boulevards, conveying people to trains, theaters, restaurants, and apartment houses. It was a big job. It meant a swelling of his weekly pay envelope.

When he rushed to Kathryn Nolan's home that night his face was radiant. His sweetheart knew before he spoke that some good luck had come into his life!

"O, Michael, isn't it wonderful!" she said after he had told her the news. "O, Michael, O——"

Her words were smothered by kisses.

"Now we can be married," he said after a moment. "We'll have a little flat of our own."

"Michael, you're the —O, I love you," she sighed.

Michael Doherty appeared in the garage half an hour early the following evening and was fitted out with a new uniform. The blue eyes twinkled as he slipped into the gray trousers, the shining black puttees, the jaunty gray coat.

"Doherty, you take 2322 and go to Devon and Broadway," the boss of the night crew ordered.

A thrill swept through the boy's breast as he started the motor and climbed into the seat. His foot pressed the clutch pedal and he put the car in gear. It moved quickly from the garage. In another minute he was rolling along the boulevard to the substation.

He was singing when he drew up in front of the substation, which was far from the center of the city, and stopped the motor.

"Anything for Doherty?" he asked of the man in charge.

"Here's an order." The reply was impersonal.

Michael took the slip. He was to go to an address on Devon avenue and pick up a man who had telephoned for a cab. Outside, he started the motor, then drove to the address. As he approached the small house, five young men emerged. They were singing, a bit loudly, Michael thought. He suspected them of being intoxicated.

"All right, taxi," said one of the men. "Let's go."

"Yes, sir," smiled Michael. He opened the door of the machine and watched them stumble into the seats. As he waited for the address one of the men drew a bottle from his pocket and offered the driver a drink. Michael refused.

"Won't take a drink, eh?" said the largest of the quintet. "Well, take us to 7556 South Evergreen avenue."

Michael sensed trouble in the man's voice, but he smiled, shut the door, and climbed into the driver's seat.

His thoughts were interrupted by a shout.

"Hey, there, put on some speed. Where do you think you're going—to a funeral?"

Michael turned and smiled at the leader of the group.

"I'm going twenty-five," he said. "That's the limit. Can't get pinched."

"Aw, put on some speed—step on her."

Michael smiled, pressed the accelerator a bit lower, and gave his entire attention to the handling of the machine. Four blocks further on he gradually dropped back to the former rate of travel and the passengers, having had a burst of speed, gave the dampen his high spirits, and he was singing again as he stopped the machine before the address commanded by the passengers.

He opened the door of the cab. One by one the passengers lurched from the machine. They formed a half circle around the chauffeur, swaying in their efforts to retain their equilibrium. Michael glanced at the meter. The bill was $4.50.

"How much?" asked the man who had offered him the drink.

"Four and a half," said Michael.

"What?" The man shouted the question. The others raised their voices in protest. In a flash the words of his boss swept through Michael's mind. "Never be ashamed to get the amount indicated by the meter," the boss had said.

"Four fifty—look at the meter," Michael replied. His tone was low.

"Say, where do you get that stuff! That's murder," said one of the men.

"I'll say it is—do you think we're a bunch of fish?" The leader of the group was speaking. "Four fifty—for what? Do you think we want to buy the whole cab?"

"That's the bill—that's what the meter says," he informed the men. A strange look had crept into his eyes. "I don't make the price—it's up to the meter."

"Say, Irish, if you think you can put that stuff over on me, you're crazy. I know you taxi drivers. You're always trying to rob somebody. You can't get away with it on me, you Irish——"

He got no further with his abuse. A sturdy right hand, propelled by all the strength of a husky Irish lad, stopped the conversation. It was a terrific blow. The smack of the fist against the big fellow's jaw was like the report of a fast baseball landing solidly in a catcher's glove. The man did not crumple to the ground. The blow sent him spinning five feet through the air, and he did not move after he struck the earth. Four men were left. Michael struck again. Another went to the sidewalk. He advanced on the remaining three. They were awe-stricken by the force of the Irishman's blows.

"You going to pay that bill?" asked Michael in a low voice.

There was a moment's hesitation.

"Come on—no more stalling," roared the chauffeur. He raised his fists. Slowly one of the men reached into his pocket. He pulled forth a five dollar note.

"Here—you—you—keep the change," he said. There was a tremor in his voice.

Michael drew a half dollar from his pocket, tossed it toward the man, and turned to his cab.

A sturdy right stopped the conversation.

TWO hours later, after making five trips, Michael stopped at a west side substation. He had been unhappy during those two hours. He had lost his temper. Would the men he had struck make a report to the company? There was little joy in his heart as he went into the station.

"Anything for Doherty?" he asked.

"You bet—the big boss has been calling all over town for you," said the clerk. "He wants you at headquarters at once."

A cloud spread over the Irish lad's face. The superintendent had word of the fight. He had called for Doherty. It meant the chauffeur was going up on the carpet for a reprimand, perhaps for dismissal. Michael made an almost inaudible answer to the clerk and slumped out of the office.

There was tragedy in the lad's face as he drove to the main office. The taxicab moved at a slow rate of speed, and no song rose from the young driver's lips. After ten minutes of driving he stopped the cab and walked slowly into the office. He had failed. He had lost his temper. He had not the stuff that goes to make a good taxicab driver. What would he say, how could he explain to Kathryn?

He knocked on the boss' door.

"Come in," said a gruff voice inside. Michael pushed open the door.

The sight that greeted his eyes brought him to a standstill. There on a long, hard, wooden bench was the figure of a man, the man who had refused to pay the taxi fare, the man whom Michael had struck. A great bandage was around the man's head. The other members of the party, one of them sagging in a chair, were in the room. Kelly, the big boss, sat at the mahogany desk in the center.

If Michael had been surprised at the appearance of the room and the men in it, he was stunned when Kelly broke into a roar of laughter. One of the men who had been in the party also broke into a laugh. A frown spread across Doherty's face. He could understand their presence, perhaps, but not this merriment.

Kelly rose. He walked to Doherty.

"Well, young man, what have you to say about this?" asked the boss, his laughter subsiding somewhat.

"Why—well—why, they refused to——" the chauffeur mumbled.

Kelly roared again. Then he placed his hands on the young man's shoulders.

"Now, Michael, you listen to me a moment," he said. "You must never lose your temper again. When a passenger refuses to pay, you take him to a police station, or, if he won't come, call a policeman. Your conduct this evening——"

But another burst of laughter interrupted the sentence.

"Why—why——," choked Kelly. "Why, do you know that you have knocked out two of the best men in our service? Do you know that you floored Jim Clancy, our ace, the roughest man on our pay roll? I'm sorry for him, Mike. I'm sorry he had to run into such a cyclone. We framed on you tonight, my boy, just to find out what sort of stuff you had in your system. We found out. You got your fare all right, but nearly killed one of our best men. Go back to your cab, Mike; go back and work hard. You've got the stuff. You'll make good. Any time anybody doubts it, you just send for Clancy."

PARIS VIVAUDOU NEW YORK

GOOD MORNING, MISS CLARA!

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG recently had some new pictures taken. She is to be seen in "Cordelia the Magnificent." One hopes it comes up to her "Enter Madame," which is the best thing she has been seen in for years.

—Mae Tinee.

Just a little concert from the new radio to show the callers what it means in an educational way to have a little radio in the home. Over at XYZ Miss Paula Glowering, the Tantamount picture star, is broadcasting a little talk on the subject of mineral lava. Aunt Mabel, who sits with her back to us, is one of the thousand and one ladies who love to say jestingly, "Well, all I ever hear on the radio are the bedtime stories."

Just a few friends in for bridge, showing the girl from down the street, who will insist on singing to herself while the others are concentrating heavily.

Ingrid, the beautiful Scandinavian girl friend of Tolfta, the Smiths' maid, has called to spend a conversational evening in the kitchen. Ingrid is urging Tolfta not to make a slave of herself. "Don't work too hard, dear, sometimes it doesn't pay," is Ingrid's parting advice.

"Oh, Lena, have we any bicarbonate of soda upstairs?" This from the tired business man who dined not wisely but too well on roly poly pudding with brandy sauce.

Having put the children to bed, and the oatmeal to soak, Mrs. Battersea prepares to get in touch with the news of the day, as every intelligent citizen of these United States should do. Continued from page one, Mrs. B. is reading all about how the dismembered body, with the exception of the left foot, was packed in a wicker suitcase labeled fragile. Next, Mrs. B. will take note of how Miss Lottie Gurgle, Dallas society pet, would have danced steadily for ninety-nine and one-half hours, thus establishing a record, if she had not gone criminally insane from fatigue at the beginning of the sixty-sixth hour.

The young man who calls to take the daughter of the house to the movies is a very fancy dresser these spring evenings.

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

IN THE WEASEL'S DEN. BY Wm. DONAHEY.

SYNOPSIS OF LAST WEEK'S STORY.

The Dunce and the Chinaman, having forgotten Grandpa's best blanket and left it in the woods, are ordered by the General to go after it. It is quite dark when the little fellows reach the place where the blanket has been left, but it has been stolen by an old weasel who has carried it off to his den. In searching for the weasel's home the Teenie Weenies meet Toby, a cat with a bad reputation, who shows them the hole leading into the weasel's den.

WITH wide eyes and thumping hearts the Chinaman and the Dunce peered into the dark entrance of the weasel's hole. They could faintly hear a sound like the gnawing of bones coming from the den, and the two little chaps shivered in their shoes.

"Well, the weasel's home," said Toby, leering at the frightened Teenie Weenies with his green eyes which gleamed in the dark. "What do you want with him?"

"W-w-why, w-w-w-we have come to get a b-b-b-blanket he's stolen," answered the Dunce. "B-b-but I don't th-th-th-think we're goin' to get it."

The two Teenie Weenies were badly scared, and they were about to turn and race for home, but the cat saw their intention and spoke to them.

"Now, don't get scared," said Toby. "Keep your shoes on a minute and we'll think a little. I would go in and get that old weasel in a second, if I could, but the hole is about a hundred and sixty-four sizes too small for me."

"I-I-I th-th-th-think we'd better be going home," whispered the Dunce, who was almost as much afraid of the cat as he was of the weasel, for Toby had the reputation of being a night prowler, and it had been reported that he had destroyed many squirrels, rabbits, and birds.

sit here a minute and think a little. Thinkin' is good exercise."

"Now, just wait a minute; just wait a minute," answered the cat. "We'll just quietly

There was nothing to do but wait, and the two Teenie Weenies stood trembling while the cat sat down and began to wash his face in an absent minded sort of way. "I always think best when I'm washin' my face," said Toby, and he licked his big paw and rubbed it thoughtfully over his black face. The two Teenie Weenies waited what seemed hours to them, but really it was only a few minutes, when the cat spoke again.

"I have it! I have it!" he cried. "Here's the scheme. The old weasel has been eating, and after he eats he always sleeps, so we'll wait a little while, and when he goes to sleep one of you fellows can sneak into the den and grab the blanket."

"I guess I will be goin' home," said the Dunce, turning white around the mouth.

"Wait a minute! Wait a minute!" said the cat in such an unpleasant way the two little fellows thought it best to stay. "One of you fellows grabs the blanket and then runs out of the hole. The weasel will run after you, and when he sticks his head out of the hole I grabs him. See? You gets the blanket and I gets the weasel—see?"

"B-b-but 'sposin' the weasel catches us before we get out?" asked the Dunce in a faint voice.

"Then the weasel gets you and the blanket, too," smiled the cat, winking one of his big yellow eyes. "It is quite easy. We can get that blanket, if you'll do what I say. The weasel will be so sound asleep that you'll be half way out of the hole before he ever wakes up."

The cat argued for an hour before he could persuade the two Teenie Weenies to fall in with his plans, but finally they could see the cat was getting angry with them, so they consented. Neither one of the Teenie Weenies would go into the hole alone, so they decided to go together. The Dunce happened to have a candle in his pocket, which he lighted and gave to the Chinaman, who was to lead the way. The two little fellows listened at the door of the hole for some time, but all was quiet within.

"You will surely be ready to catch the weasel when he comes out?" asked the Dunce anxiously.

"Say," growled the cat, "do you think I'd miss the fun of sinkin' my claws into that weasel? Not so you can notice it," and a wicked gleam came into his eyes.

The shivering Teenie Weenies tiptoed into the dark hole, which ran down under the roots of a big tree with many turns and twists.

Down, down they went until they were many feet under the ground, and at last they came to a big opening beside a huge stone. The Teenie Weenies could tell by the smell they were near the weasel's den, and presently the dim candle light showed a startling thing—the ground was littered with bones. The little fellows' eyes nearly popped out of their tiny heads as they stood looking around the terrible place. In a dark little pocket on the opposite side of the den lay the weasel. He was sound asleep in his nest, with his head resting on the missing blanket.

Handing the candle to the trembling Dunce, the Chinaman stepped silently towards the sleeping weasel. At last he caught one end of the blanket, which hung over the edge of the nest, and, giving a mighty jerk, he dashed after the speeding Dunce, who was already on his way out. Never have two Teenie Weenies run so fast—they fairly flew along the narrow hole, and when they reached the outside they never even glanced at the waiting cat.

Once outside, the two little fellows headed straight for home, and as they dashed along they heard a piercing squeal, followed by a cattish laugh, and all was silent.

The two Teenie Weenies arrived safely home with the blanket, and, although it had been a terrible experience for the little chaps to go through, there was some benefit gained by it, for they were mighty careful afterward not to leave things lying about—it helped them to remember. What do you think about it?

Wonderful Adventures of the Dog Club

FIFTH ADVENTURE—TOODLES PROVES A HERO.

BY RAYMOND KELLY.

THE moon was pretty nearly ready for bed, and the stars were winking as though they knew that they couldn't keep their eyes open much longer. Over in the east the sky was beginning to get gray. Pretty soon it would be pink, and all the Gravel Pit pups would have to be home.

Just now, though, they were sitting around their fire and listening to President Carlo, the great big Saint Bernard.

"My grandfather's great-grandfather," said Carlo, "was a very large dog, almost as large as I am. He lived in Switzerland at a place high up in the mountains, where the snow often got very deep. At such times he used to go out and hunt for lost travelers."

"Who lost 'em?" asked Toodles, but Ginger scowled at him so fiercely that the poodle looked ashamed for a minute.

"My grandfather's great-grandfather," Carlo went on, "always carried a package of food and a little cask of wine tied to his collar."

"I lived with a bootlegger once," put in Toodles.

"My grandfather's great-grandfather, I want you to know, was a very respectable dog and was employed at saving lost travelers who otherwise would have frozen to death," said Carlo, severely. "If our newest member cannot behave himself he may stay home after this." and Toodles begged his pardon.

"As I was saying," Carlo said; but he was interrupted again, this time by Bull Bailey, who said:

"Excuse me, Mr. President, but there is a spy in the pit."

"A spy!" cried all the dogs at once.

Carlo looked at Bull Bailey and asked very quietly: "How did he pass you? Were you asleep?"

"O, no. I called on him to stop, but he jumped right over my head and ran down into the pit."

"Very well," growled Carlo. "We shall soon have this spy in our paws. After him, Gravel Pitters, and rout him out!".

So all the dogs scattered around the pit, hunting behind bushes and under old cars to find the spy. Suddenly Ginger called out:

"There he is," and, sure enough, a tiny fellow with hairy legs and a red coat sprang from behind a big rock and went running across the pit, with all nineteen dogs tearing after him. They almost had him when, more quickly than a grasshopper could drop a hot sweet potato, the spy grabbed a rope that hung down from the old derrick and went up it, paw over paw, while all the dogs stared up at him with their mouths wide open.

All but one, that is. For Toodles, who had been hanging back until then, ran out in front and went up the ladder on the side of the derrick after the spy. My, my, what a cheer all the Gravel Pitters gave that poodle, while the spy stood on top of the derrick, shivering and chattering with fright.

"Throw him down, Toodles!" shouted Ginger. "We'll teach him to spy on us."

"He can be a waiter in the club and do all the work."

"No," said Toodles. "This monkey is an old friend of mine. We used to work for the same circus."

"But he's a spy. Throw him down!"

"I'm not a spy," said the monkey. "I was running away from a cruel organ grinder, and I didn't know this was a club at all. Please let me stay."

"But this is a dogs' club, and monkeys can't belong," said Granger.

"I have it!" yipped Ginger. "He can be a waiter in the club and do all the work."

And so it was decided that way, and Wiggler, which was the monkey's name, was allowed to live in the pit and pick up after the members.

DOMESTIC ANIMALS

Behind Mr. Mule there is a sign with three little pictures on it. You are to take all the letters used to spell the three pictures and see if you can spell the names of three domestic animals. You are to use all the letters and you are to have none left over. What are the three domestic animals?

NAMES TO GUESS

The diagonals 1-2 and 3-4 in the first form are boys' names. The same diagonals in the second form are girls' names. If you guess the right names you will have five words of five letters each in both forms. What are the names?

WHAT IS HE?

Teddy belonged to the local baseball team. What position did he play? Add and subtract the names of the objects, and have, as a result, the position he played on the team.

WHAT ARE YOUR INITIALS?

Here's a game you can play with no forfeit to pay if you lose. Tell what your initials are and how many of your relatives have the same first or middle initial as yours. Let's see how many you can name.

For example, suppose your name is John H. Smith. How many relatives of yours have the initials J or H? Perhaps you have an uncle whose name is John or Harry or an Aunt Josephine or Harriet. The name need not be the same, but at least one initial must be.

If you think you have a long list of relatives whose initials are the same as yours tell us about it in a letter to The Junior Tribune. We want to print the longest lists. Give your age and your grade in school. Address Junior Tribune, care of The Chicago Tribune.

A trim, shapely cuticle – without dangerous cutting

SKIN specialists now tell you that cutting not only disfigures the cuticle, making it thick and ugly, but that it is actually dangerous because of possible injury to the delicate nail root, or infections that are likely to result from the tiny wounds made by scissors that penetrate to living tissue. The safe way to manicure is the Cutex way. And it is so simple, too. Once you have tried it you will never return to the old method.

You just dip an orange stick wrapped with cotton in Cutex Cuticle Remover (a cleansing, antiseptic liquid developed by Science for the care of the nails), work it around the base of the nails and under the nail tips; then rinse the finger tips in water, and with a towel wipe off the loosened flakes of dead skin and surplus cuticle. This smooths the cuticle free from every ragged edge, whitens the nail tips, and banishes every trace of stain from skin and nails.

For the final Polish – use either the new Cutex Powder Polish which gives a lovely shell-pink lustre with a few strokes of the nails across the palm—or the new Cutex Liquid Polish which is instantaneous and gives a dazzling, tinted finish that lasts a week.

Commencement Frocks of Many Moods

by Mary Brooks Picken

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—At this time the problem of a dress for the last day of school faces the girl of every age, from grammar school to college commencement. For the advantages of education are about to show themselves. Commencement is at hand, and the long vacation, when mothers will learn better than ever how sharper than a serpent's tooth is her school age child. And school age girls will have a chance to use their white dresses again, inasmuch as it will be a decidedly white summer. There will be no hanging away of little white dresses to yellow. With brightly colored accessories they can be worn freely.

Miss to college graduate can find what she wants here. All practical styles are illustrated in practical materials, from simplest cotton voile to the crêpes and on to the satins. I am illustrating the straight, the bouffant, the draped, the scalloped, and the all ribbon dress as offered in the smartest New York houses. The idea is to select frocks that would serve for summer wear as well, white being about to become, they say, the leading lady among summer colors.

At the right is pictured a simple frock in white cotton voile. The scallop edge to the bertha and skirt bring it right out into the limelight of present modes, as do the rosettes of taffeta ribbon. Using them as a dropped girdle finish is particularly fetching. This model could be copied in far more expensive materials with profit.

The maid at the extreme left wears sheer batiste and lace, cleverly combined. This frock offers excellent ideas inexpensively. Handkerchief squares of the batiste alternating with squares of plaited lace are made into flounces and applied in tiers. The plaited flounce at the dropped shoulder edge is of lace and a good style note.

Glance over all the frocks illustrated and you will see that this low shoulder, making a cap for the upper arm, is characteristic of the mode.

So marked an ingredient of spring clothes as crêpe satin should not be left out at commencement. Let us give it to the college maid, or at least to one of the older girls.

We found its best exponent in a simply draped dress, illustrated on the second figure to the left. Nice handling of the drape and a graceful touch of embroidery at all the openings secured the pleasing results pictured. Chiffon was used for the plaiting edging the sleeve caps, and for the vest and front of the skirt where the drape lifts. Leaving it out at this point would give greater sophistication to the frock, if that was wanted.

So much satin crêpe is being used wrong side out that it scarcely seems worth while to have a satin side at all, except that girdles and sashes demand it. So here, the satiny side of the crêpe lends luster to girdle, pump bow, and pointed, shaped tie ends.

Ribbon dresses, as well as ribbon hats, are spirited entrants in the spring style meet. Moire sprinted up rather late in the season. Manufacturers of stock dresses lost something of an advantage to houses working for individuals. Still moire dresses are widely shown in the shops, and if the sweet girl graduate finds one in ribbon, like that pictured second from the right, she will strike a major chord in fashion.

On a simple underslip wide moire ribbon is sewn in a somewhat spiral fashion, producing tiers as well as slightly diagonal lines on the skirt. Three widths compose the bodice. Sleeve openings are finished with bandings of the moire, and there is a huge ribbon sash.

No end of smart results follows turning cartwheels for trimming as applied motifs. Among the cleverest are the rounds of white or black Valenciennes, used both on dresses and as cocardes on hats. Therefore, you must not be other than delighted to find the Valenciennes wheel motif, centered in embroidery, doing duty on bouffant commencement dresses of taffeta, as sketched in the middle figure of the illustration. The big Val rosette holds together the Val-edge organdy girdle, widely spaced, and it appears again and again in the center of the skirt between two scalloped lines composed of triple rows of the lace.

Much use is made of the three shaded scalloped ribbon new to this season for trimming such as this little hooped organdy reveals. The graded shade ribbon comes in the three shades on one bolt. Tinsel ribbon in narrow widths is greatly favored.

Worked out in other colored ribbon, the moire dress would be equally effective, if not so youthful. The line on the whole is as pretty as the season offers and becoming generally. Soft crêpes built into similarly tiered frocks are met with constantly where smartly dressed women gather. Nothing has happened yet to disturb the peace of mind of the side tied sash or side tie. The modes as illustrated have been established for the season, and now the inventors of them, both here and in Paris, are turning their minds to filling orders or designing clever things to be launched much later in the year.

NEW PLAUDITS for PAULINE

PAULINE LORD has taken Eugene O'Neill's "Anna Christie" to London and completely demolished the traditional British reserve. They hail her as a discovery, call her the greatest actress that has come out of America in years, and inquire plaintively why they haven't heard of her before. They haven't because until she found the role of Anna the fates of the theater kept her comparatively obscure. Many years of hard work have been her preparation for fame.—Sheppard Butler.

Gone for good—that telltale in-the-dishpan look

The new way to wash dishes won't roughen or redden hands

IT'S what you have always wanted for washing dishes. Something to do them quickly, easily, without making your hands rough and red. Something to relieve that three times a day, day-in, day-out, task of its drudgery.

And now—here it is—Lux for washing dishes. So natural, too—you wonder it wasn't thought of before. Of course if you could wash fine fabrics with it so safely, it couldn't harm your hands.

As easy on hands as fine toilet soap

The chiffon-thin outer skin of your hands is softer and finer in texture than almost any known material. Yet an hour and a half every day it is subjected to harsh soap suds in your dishpan!

That is why your hands become dry and rough, for kitchen soap robs your skin of the oils so necessary to its well-being and good looks.

To keep your hands soft and smooth, Nature placed millions of little oil pockets just beneath the surface of the skin. They feed the skin—give it the satiny texture that makes it the pleasantest thing in the world to touch. When these oil pockets are drained dry—as they are by harsh, alkaline soap—the hands lose their softness and their natural color—they become rough and red.

Three times every day you can wash your dishes with Lux without fear of drying these important oils. The pure flakes help keep the supply constant. Lux is gentle—it rids your hands for good of that telltale dishpan look. Even fine toilet soap is no easier on your hands than Lux suds.

Keep a package of Lux always handy in your kitchen. Use it for your dishes always. Lever Bros. Co., 164 Broadway, Cambridge, Mass.

Why We Tell Our Friends to Come This Summer

By A FORMER EASTERNER

HAVING lived in various sections of the East we have many friends and former neighbors who write us asking about the best time to come to Southern California.

We always say that though we love all seasons here, they should come this summer. And, because many Easterners do not seem to realize it, we always add that summer is cool here.

Just to prove our point we enclose this statement of the temperatures for 44 years – U. S. Government official readings in a great city in this section:

Average noon temperatures, 44 Junes 66
Average noon temperatures, 44 Julys 70
Average noon temperatures, 44 Augusts ... 71
Average noon temperatures, 44 Septembers 69

Ninety nights under blankets during a three months' stay in summer and ninety perfect days for glorious activity or lazy relaxation, we tell them. Summer is the rainless season, too, so you can plan each day's program a week or a month ahead.

Then we recount the things to see and do here—the great desert like Sahara, the rugged mountains and snow-capped peaks, the great forests, the expansive groves, the miles of coast line including rocky shores and sandy beaches, the old Spanish missions, the motion picture studios, and the 4,000 miles of paved boulevards to take you to all the beauties and unique sights of this land.

We tell of the trout in mountain brooks, of the 200 and 300-pound catches in ocean fishing grounds, of picturesque and sporty golf courses, of hikes, of bridle paths leading through verdant meadows or up the sides of mountains, of exhilarating surf bathing.

There are so many things to talk about. All are unusual and interesting to our Eastern friends. In fact, even we who live here never tire of the things to do in Southern California.

And the friends who take our advice are more than pleased with what they find.

They write afterward to tell us what a wonderful trip they had. They are enthusiastic over the benefits they receive in this strange, new wonderland.

The complete change, they say, rebuilds, revitalizes—makes them fresh and eager for the following year. They return wherever they can—some come every summer now that they know what is here.

And no matter what their circumstances are they all find a summer that fits their pocketbooks. There are finest hotels or modest boarding places to live in.

The side trips need not be expensive. In fact, Southern California's most beautiful and unique wonders cost nothing to see. And the round-trip fares on all transcontinental railroads during the summer between May and October are only a little more than the usual one-way fare.

* * * *

These and many other Californians have made it a rule to advise their friends to "come this summer." It's good advice.

And it is our advice to you who want a new and better summer than any you have ever had. Your local railroad ticket agent can give you the information you need. Or send the coupon for our booklet.

You will find here fine hotels with rates, on the average, less than in most other sections, and in no other place will you find a wider range in accommodations.

DO YOU REMEMBER WAY BACK WHEN----

DEARBORN AND MADISON STREETS looked like this, when the Tribune building was being erected back in 1901? Note the old cable cars jerking north in Dearborn. And the horses—nothing but horses, not a motor vehicle in sight! The bank building at the right has given place to a department store's growth.

HENRY MILLER played Ulrich Michaelis in "The Faith Healer"? 'Twas in 1909. Mr. Miller now appears at his own theater in New York and also controls several road companies.

MRS. THOMAS WHIFFEN appeared at Hooley's theater (now Powers') in "White Roses," a curtain-raiser playlet by Lottie Blair Parker, who wrote "Way Down East"? That was in 1888, and Charles Frohman was so solicitous then about his old friend's health that he would not cast her in full length plays because they kept her up too late. Now Mrs. Whiffen acts till 11 each night with Eugene O'Brien in "Steve," and doesn't seem to mind it at all.

ELSIE JANIS was Dorothy Willetts in "The Vanderbilt Cup"? It was in 1906. But that doesn't mean our beloved Elsie is getting old. She began her stage career when a mere babe, you must remember.

Thousands of girls have built up a fresh clear skin ~

by using these simple treatments

ARE you discouraged with your complexion—Discouraged because elaborate applications seem to have no effect in giving you the clear, beautiful skin you long for?

Thousands of girls today are using the famous Woodbury skin treatments, with the result that in a short time they are able, by natural methods, to build up an entirely new complexion.

Each day your skin is changing

NO matter what the condition of your skin—it can be changed. Each day your skin is changing in spite of you! Old skin dies, and new skin takes its place. By giving this new skin the special care it needs, you can free your complexion from faults that have troubled you for months, or even for years.

Danger in an oily skin

PERHAPS you have the type of skin that has always been too oily. An oily skin is not only unattractive in itself—it is especially liable to infection from dust. Use the special cleansing treatment given below, and see how easy it is to correct this trouble.

A sensitive skin can be kept smooth and free from irritation by the right Woodbury treatment. A sallow skin can be roused—awakened—so that day by day it will gain in color and life.

No matter what type of skin you have—by giving it the right Woodbury treatment for its needs, you can bring about marked improvement.

Complete treatments for each different type of skin are given in the booklet "A Skin You Love to Touch," which is wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap. Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter. Begin your treatment tonight!

The same qualities that give Woodbury's its beneficial effect in overcoming common skin troubles, make it ideal for regular toilet use. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks for regular use, including any of the special Woodbury treatments. Woodbury's also comes in the convenient 3-cake boxes.

For 25 cents we will send you a complete set of the Woodbury skin preparations

Send 25 cents for a complete miniature set of the Woodbury skin preparations, containing

1—"An oily skin is especially liable to skin disorders, because it is easily infested by dust." If your skin has a tendency to be too oily, use treatment No. 1 given below.

2—"A sallow skin can be roused to color and life by the right stimulating treatment." If your skin is of the pale, sallow type, use treatment No. 2 given at the right.

3—"The right care will prevent a sensitive skin from becoming rough and irritated." If your skin is of the sensitive, easily irritated type, use treatment No. 3 given at the right.

Your skin probably belongs to one of these three types~Are you giving it the right treatment?

1. For an oily skin—

FIRST cleanse your skin by washing in your usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and luke-warm water. Wipe off the surplus moisture, but leave the skin slightly damp. Now, with warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly. Rinse with warm water, then with cold. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

2. For a pale sallow skin—

ONCE or twice a week, fill your basin full of hot water—almost boiling hot. Bend over top of the basin and cover your head with a heavy bath towel, so that no steam can escape. Steam your face for thirty seconds. Now lather a hot cloth with Woodbury's Facial Soap. With this wash your face thoroughly, rubbing the lather well into the skin with an upward and outward motion. Rinse the skin well, first with warm water, then with cold, and finish by rubbing it for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

3. For a sensitive skin—

DIP a soft washcloth in warm water and hold it to your face. Now make a warm water lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and dip your cloth up and down in it until the cloth is "fluffy" with the soft white lather. Rub this lathered cloth gently over your skin until the pores are thoroughly cleansed. Rinse first with warm water, then with clear, cool water and dry carefully.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap today—begin your treatment tonight! Within a week or ten days your skin will show marked improvement.
